Comments

Abrotanum is a very powerful children's remedy in malnutrition, failure to thrive, marasmus. A child may be irritable, depressed, hyperactive with very negative behavior patterns. Then, all of a sudden that disappears and the child becomes sweet, good-natured.

The Abrot. disorders often goes to the intestines. When the moods are clear, the colon is acting up or the reverse. A major symptom is alternation of constipation and diarrhea. In conditions like Crohn's disease, colitis, irritable bowel syndrome this remedy may be indicated.

Another keynote of this remedy is metastasis of mumps with a large swollen parotid gland. The child had mumps and the mumps went away and then the testicle swells up. Malassimilation in children, failure to thrive. One keynote is: the child may have a big appetite and lose weight, (Iod., Cina)

Abrot. symptom occurs when the child has lost all their muscular strength. In Abrot. the child can be weak and have no muscular strength, when they lift their arm up, it drops limp.

Abrot. is for children, who hold their heads up and then it flops down easily. As they grow the lack muscle tone is a very strong indication of this remedy.

Abrot. children can be emaciated with poor food assimilation. The child is very flaccid, and emaciated with a big appetite. (Iod., Cina) They don't gain weight. Some acute glandular problem that may have been treated with drugs and then systems reappeared elsewhere.

Abrotanum corrects the suppressions in some cases. This remedy is indicated when disorder has moved from one area and then to another. The child had tonsillitis and since then the child has had diarrhea, constipation and malassimilation.

The term metastasis means something disappeared and reappeared. Rheumatic fever followed by sore throat, is also called metastasis. If the throat cleared up and now they have joint problems, that's a metastasis case. It's synonymous with "suppression" if there was outside interference.

(carb's eye vine)

Pharmacy

Abr. Abrus precatorius. Jequirity. Carb's Eye Vine. Indian Liquorice. N. O. Leguminosae. Tincture of trituration of the seeds. Abrus precatorius is a climbing plant, a native of India, but has been introduced to the Western tropics. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, esp. the mother tincture diluted and applied externally and the 3x internally.

Herbal

Abrus precatorius has been used as an eye remedy. It was discovered by the natives of Brazil, who gave it the name Jequirity.

Abrus has small nearly globose seeds, which are of a brilliant scarlet color with a black scar indicating where they were attached to the pods, (Treasury of Botany).

The seeds are used for necklaces and as a standard of weight under the name of Rat. The roots are used in the same manner as liquorice roots.

Abrus precatorius was the plant employed by Professor Nowack to determine weather and telluric forecasts owing to the extreme sensitiveness of its leaves to atmospheric disturbances. Planets: Sun.

Homeopathic

Abrus precatorius acts chiefly on the eyes, skin and mucous membranes. Shoemaker gives a series of striking cures with the remedy. The general effects are headache, pain in the limbs, fever, high pulse.

In a case of ulcerative lupus of both sides of the nose which was cured by five applications, the first was followed by an enormous amount of inflammation, accompanied by malaise, high fever, which lasted until the crust began to dry. Malaise.

Clinical

Conjunctivitis. Epithelioma. Granular lids. Keratitis. Lupus. Malaise. Ophthalmia.

Ulcers.

Eyes

Epithelioma, lupus, ulcers, granular lids. Purulent conjunctivitis inflammation spreads to face and neck. Granular ophthalmia. Keratitis.

Fever

Head

Headache.

Limbs

Pain in limbs.

Skin

Erysipelatous inflammation of skin. Lupus. Indolent ulcers.

Comments

A further use has been made of Abrus by Shoemaker of Philadelphia in disorders of the skin showing great cell growth, lupoid conditions, epithelioma sloughing ulcers.

The preparation he used was made as follows: Two hundred grains of the beans are decorticated by being slightly bruised and crushed in a mortar, the red hulls being carefully picked from the cotyledons.

The latter are put in a bottle and covered with distilled water. They are this way macerated for twenty four hours, then transferred to a mortar and thoroughly triturated to a smooth paste.

Sufficient water is then added to make the whole weight 800 grains. Prepared in this way it is like an emulsion and is applied to the surface to be treated with a large camel hair pencil or mop.

The application of this emulsion to ulcerated surfaces is almost painless, but soon (often within an hour) there is much irritation and inflammation, the edges become red and infiltrated, surrounding tissues edematous and shining.

In the course of from six to twelve hours a desiccated curass like crust has formed which cracks in twenty four hours more and the discharge escapes freely. This goes on for five or six days, the quantity of discharge diminishing. The crust then separates or is removed by water dressing and discloses healthy granulations. If any unhealthy granulations are left the application is repeated.

Shoemaker writes: "This treatment exercises a destructive action on unhealthy granulated conditions followed by a constructive change. Also promoting under the protective cover of the exudation which it causes, a rapid development of healthy skin and tissue."

But it must be used with caution, for he says: "It may give rise to erysipelatous inflammation and if used on weak and irritable patients cause great constitutional disturbances."

Herbal

Dr. Tonnerre of Calcutta, India, seems to have been the first to call attention to this plant as a remedy. In a small work, Additions to the Homeopathic Materia Medica, collected and arranged by Henry Thomas, M. D. and published in London in the year 1858:

The tincture of the Acalypha Indica, prepared and administered in the 6x dilution in the three cases in which Thomas has employed it, the persons were affected with tuberculosis.

In one case there was a tuberculous affection of the upper portion of the left lung of some two years' standing. Hemoptysis had been going on for three months, the expectoration had been in the morning pure blood in the evening dark lumps of clotted blood and the fits of coughing were very violent at night.

In this case all homeopathic remedies had been tried unsuccessfully, then Thomas accidentally discovered the virtues of the Acalypha Indica, that remedy having been given him by a native for jaundice.

Henry Thomas says: "I prepared the mother tincture upon the homeopathic principle and took 10 drops, which brought on a severe fit of dry cough, followed by spitting of blood.

After having noted all the symptoms experienced by myself and finding that they were nearly all similar to those of my patients."

Thomas gave six drops of the 6x dilution in half a tumbler of water. A spoonful was to be taken every half hour, beginning immediately at 9 a.m. At 6 p.m. , the blood had stopped. He continued this for eight days and the blood has never reappeared (now three months have passed).

The patient is improving and auscultation proves the disease has decreased and he is hopeful to effect a cure. Yet one month since giving them the medicine they have not spit any blood, although previously one of them never passed a day without spitting a great quantity.

Homeopathic

Acalypha is a remedy having a marked action on the alimentary canal and respiratory organs. The herbal tincture of the Acalypha is a specific in hemorrhage from the lungs. Hemoptysis.

Comments

The rapidity of action of Aconite determines its appropriateness for conditions in which the symptoms set in with great intensity, such as heart attacks, influenza, certain fevers and acute inflammations. To this list may be added attacks of suddenfear, anxiety and even blindness.

Dr. Hughes has remarked that the condition to which Aconite is homeopathic is one of tension and this word gives the best idea of the action and sphere of Aconite.

There is emotional and mental tension, as shown in fright or fear and its consequences, anxiety and fear of death, tension of the systemic vessels, as in the effects of a chill. Asiatic cholera and hemorrhages.

Muscular tension, as in tetanus. Tension of involuntary muscles, as in heart spasms.

Tension of the semi-involuntary muscular apparatus of respiration, as in asthma.

The senses are in a heightened sensation and sensitiveness to pain in a feeling of numbness in parts.

Sensation as if bound tightly. Sensation of being tightly bound in the limbs and in other parts, (Cactus gr.) Plethora may be classed under increased blood tension. Active, bloody congestions of all kinds, especially those following chill.

Teste relates a remarkable case of an Englishman who had been obliged to take a long sleigh journey in North Russia in midwinter.

He suffered thereafter for two years from violent paroxysms of palpitations and acute stitching pains in the heart region, threatening brain strokes.

Aneurysm had been diagnosed by leading physicians in England and on the Continent. Teste localized the affection to neurosis or spasm of the pectoralis major muscle and proved his diagnosis by promptly curing it with Acon.

The keen, cutting winds of the mountains amongst which the plant flourishes give the signature of this remedial action. There are not many drugs which have causation as marked among their characteristics.

Chill, fright injury or surgical operation, the effects of these will be met in large majority of cases by Acon., the timely administration of which will ward off serious results.

The reaction from the primary effect of chill gives another characteristic of Acon., that of fever. Acon. fevers often include: Restlessness and tossing about and the tension state is evidenced still in the anxiety with which it is accompanied, sometimes amounting to fear of death.

The mental exaltation sometimes goes so far as to the predicting of the day and hour of his death. Clairvoyance. Extreme sensitiveness to light and sound and all sensations including pain.

It was the feverish restlessness of the Acon. provings that led Hahnemann to infer its similarity to so many fever states.

It is the presence of this restlessness, anxiety, fear and exalted sensibility which are its leading indications in cases of all kinds.

The fear and apprehension of Acon. is shown in dread of crossing streets. There is intolerance of music. Some curious symptoms are: Imagines some part of body is deformed. Imagine they do all their thinking from the stomach. Predicts the hour of death (clairvoyance).

Acon. has a very wide sphere of usefulness in disorders of the eye. Inflammations of many kinds from cold injury, dust, surgical operations, scrofulous inflammation with enlarged glands, all come within its range.

Acon. is one of the great pain remedies, vying with Cham. and Coffea in the intensity of the pain it causes. Pains are intolerable, driving to desperation.

The pains of Acon. are tearing, cutting, are attended with restlessness, accompanied by numbness, tingling or formication. Acon. cannot bear the pain, cannot bear to be touched, cannot bear to be covered. The toothache of Acon. is one-sided with red cheek on same side.

There is a great and sudden sinking of strength, fainting on attempting to get up with anxiety, restlessness, numbness, tingling, formication.

Some characteristics of Acon. are: Active hemorrhages in stout, full-blooded people. Passes almost pure blood by stool.

In hemoptysis the blood comes up with great ease by hemming and coughing, bright red in large quantities from cold, dry winds with great fear, anxiety and palpitations.

Every inspiration increases the cough. After the cough tingling sensation in chest.

Unquenchable thirst: everything tastes bitter, except water, (Chin.).

In croup the child grasps the throat with every coughing fit. Coldness, numbness and tingling characterize the paralyzes and neuroses of Acon. Facial paralysis from exposure to cold, dry winds.

Some remarkable cases of sudden blindness have been cured by it. Hirsch of Prague records two such cases, one in a man of thirty, who went to bed well, having walked home in rough and stormy weather after spending the evening in a hot room. Acon. 3c was given and the following night he perspired freely and in the morning his sight was thoroughly restored.

Hirsch himself suddenly lost his sight while bathing in hot weather. He took Acon. 3c in water as he had given it to his patient. In two hours he began to perspire and after a six-hours' sleep awoke well.

Bending double relieves the colic and dysmenorrhea pain, (Coloc.) Motion aggravates the pains in muscles, joints and stiffness. Vertigo, pallor, faintness on sitting up in bed. Rising from a seat causes vertigo.

The time of the aggravation of Acon. symptoms is chiefly night and about midnight. Heat, as well as cold is injurious to the Acon. patient. Sunstroke is among the conditions which call for it and Acon. will cure many headaches caused by exposure to the sun and also heat-rashes.

Headaches are generally better in open air, worse in warm room toothache and cough worse in open air. Better from uncovering. Warm room, worse chill in fever, the bed is intolerable, he wants to uncover. Sweat on affected or covered parts.

Aconitinum

Pharmacy

Aconin. Aconitinum. Aconitine. An alkaloid obtained from the roots and stems of Aconitum napellus. It is contained in all species of Aconite except Acon-l. German Aconitine is amorphous, French Aconitine is crystalline and 170 times stronger than the German. Morson's "English Aconitine" is a secret preparation believed to be made from Acon-f. The alkaloid in Acon-f. differs somewhat from ordinary Aconitine chemically and is called pseudo-Aconitine. Aconitine of T. H. Smith of Edinburgh is probably identical with Morson's. Historical dose: All potencies.

History

Our knowledge of this alkaloid is chiefly derived from cases of poisoning and overdosing. On local application, first there was a sensation of warmth, then of burning with sharp pains and itching. Finally numbness and anesthesia.

In one poisoning case vomiting recurred every two or three minutes and was performed by a sudden jerking action of abdominal muscles, accompanied by a loud shout, probably dependent on a sudden contraction of the diaphragm.

Every attempt to swallow was followed by the spasms, like hydrophobia, but they were not renewed by the sight of water.

PAGE 21

The slightest touch renewed the spasms. Aconitine should be helpful in cases of hydrophobia cases, whether of the convulsive or the paralytic kind. The senses are disordered or lost—sight, hearing, smell. Planets: Mars.

Homeopathic

The symptoms of Aconitine set in with great rapidity and develop with extreme intensity. If recovery occurs it is rapid and complete. There is relaxation of the limbs and every exertion aggravates the symptoms.

The numbness, tingling, prickling and heat of the Aconite provings are produced by the alkaloid, but with increased intensity. Tingling sensation. Tinnitus aurium.

Herbal

Adonis like Cratageus and Convallaria is a popular herbal heart tonic. It is used as a heart tonic after rheumatism, influenza or kidney infection.

Adonis is not cumulative in action. Compensatory hypertrophy of heart in cardiac stenosis and mitral regurgitation.

It regulates the pulse increases the contracting power of the heart with increased urinary secretion.

Adon. is valuable in cardiac dropsy, hydrothorax, ascites and anasarca. Cash gave great relief to "a water-logged patient of seventy-four" with mitral regurgitation with one-grain doses of Adonidin at eight-hour intervals after failure of Arsenicum and Digitalis.

Urinary secretion rose from half a pint to 2 1/2 pints in 24 hours. Breathing was relieved, sleep returned. Planets: Sun.

Homeopathic

Adonis has not been proved, but the indications for its use have been defined by experience as follows: Rapid and feeble action of the heart, dropsy, scanty urine with albumen and casts. Valvular disease and cardiac asthma. There is no record of its uses in the potencies.

Adonis acts predominantly on heart when it is affected after rheumatism influenza or nephritis, where the muscles of the heart are in the stage of fatty degeneration. Pains wander from place to place.

Regulates the pulse and increases the power of contractions of heart with more urinary secretions. Low vitality with weak heart and slow, weak pulse. Most valuable in cardiac dropsy. Hydrothorax, ascites or anasarca.

Pharmacy

Adren. Adrenalinum. Extract of adrenal glands. A Sarcode. Tincture or trituration.
Historical dose: Potencies, esp. 2x to 6x potencies.

History

Adrenaline or Epinephrine, the active principle of the medulla of the suprarenal gland is employed as a chemical messenger in the regulation of the activities of the body in fact.

Its presence is essential to the activity of the sympathetic nerves. Adrenaline appears to possess a very powerful local action over dilated blood vessels. When injected into the circulation blood pressure rises, the arteries being contracted.

The general muscular system is affected, a slight stimulus producing prolonged contraction. Adrenaline has cured a number of cases of Addison's disease and has arrested others. Planets: Mars.

Homeopathic

Adrenalin has been suggested in acute congestion of lungs, asthma. Addison's diseases and Grave's diseases, Arteriosclerosis, chronic aortitis, angina pectoris, hemophilia, chlorosis, hay fever, serum rashes, acute urticaria, etc.

Adrenalin's chief therapeutic use depends on its vaso-constriction action, therefore a most powerful and prompt astringent and hemostatic and invaluable in checking capillary hemorrhages from all parts, where local or direct application is feasible: nose, ear, mouth, throat, larynx, stomach, rectum, uterus, bladder.

Clinical

ly effective in neuralgia, bronzed skin, debility, hematuria, palpitations, tachycardia, hyperemia, exceedingly rapid pulse, loss of strength, wasting. May well be needed in cancer patients with adrenal disturbance. Prolonged contraction of the general muscular system. Great loss of strength, rapid emaciation. Comments

These leading features may be taken as guides for Adrenalin's use: Bronzing of skin, loss of strength, wasting, exceedingly rapid pulse. It has cured a case of hematuria accompanied by pain in the adrenal region. It has been used locally in cases of hyperemia of the conjunctiva, dissipating it almost immediately and thus rendering operations possible.

Dr. P. Jousset reports success in treating, homeopathically, cases of angina and or aortitis, sub-acute and chronic, when Adrenalin has been prescribed per os and in infinitesimal dose. The symptom guiding to this is, sensation of thoracic constriction with anguish.

This with vertigo, nausea and vomiting have been produced by the drug. Abdominal pain. Shock or heart failure during anesthesia, as it causes very prompt rise of blood pressure by its action on nerve endings in the vessel wall.

Comments

Talcott considers Agar. the most similar to general paralysis of all the remedies, exalted notions of grandeur and power, hilarity and excitement followed by depression, confusion, imbecility.

Accompanying bodily symptoms are vertigo (marked and persistent) with constant impulse to fall backward, twitching about eyes and face, redness without heat, puffy and distorted. Ravenous appetite with bolting of food. Sexual desire enormous and enthusiastic with relaxed penis and impotence.

Throughout the body there are spasmodic twitchings, followed by tremulousness, finally relaxation and exhaustion.

In all these respects the drug accurately corresponds with the disease. Typhoid states often call for it and also epilepsy. Rolling of the head is a leading indication for it in brain disorders and fever.

One of the most characteristic of the Agaricus effects is the muscular jerking and twitching it sets up. This renders it appropriate in large numbers of cases of chorea. Twitchings are especially marked in the eyes, eyelids and facial muscles and Agaricus has cured many cases of blepharospasm and tic convulsif.

Peculiar headaches are: "Throbbing headache with sensation of stiffness of muscles of face. Dull, drawing headache in the morning, extending into root of nose with nosebleed or thick mucous discharge. Pain as from a nail in right side of head."

Pain as if touched or pierced by needles of ice is very characteristic. The symptoms of Agaricus are apt to appear at the same time on opposite sides of the body but diagonally (right upper and left lower or vice versa). The nervous patients requiring Agar. pass little urine (opp. Ign.), though the bladder may be irritable.

A boy developed the classical symptoms of hydrophobia four and a half months after being bitten: Quarrelsomeness, excitement, fright inability to swallow, small frequent pulse, great anxiety.

Finally swallowing was impossible, restraint had to be used to prevent him biting his nurses in the hospital. When, as a last resource, a piece of Agave was offered to the boy by the doctor in attendance, cut from a hedge of the plant with which the hospital grounds were fenced.

To the astonishment of all, the boy reached for it and ate it greedily, almost without chewing. By evening a decrease in the violence of the nervous attacks was manifest, though they remained as frequent as before.

The improvement was slow but steady. On the fourth day he took some food, but also continued. On the fourth day he took some nourishment, but also continued chewing Agave and swallowing the juice. On the fifth day he recovered consciousness by still demanded Agave.

On the eighth day he said he did not want any more as "it tasted too bitter and caused a burning in the mouth." He had no further symptoms of the disease.

Symptoms

MIND

Often people in need of Agrimony show the desire to not let others down and burden them with their personal problems, instead they intend to spread cheer and uplift others. One tends not to express strong emotions which could bring disharmony or strife to oneself or others. The mind is unsettled and restless, prone to be distracted. Inner cares and worries.

Anxieties build up, restlessness and a sense of dissatisfaction. Grief or other forms of disappointment. Resentment or guilt which are not being worked through. Unresolved conflicts or trauma. Inner restlessness, a sense of boredom. Often finds some relief in drugs, entertainment, or other forms of diversion. Quarrels distress and bring unhappiness.

Alfalfa

(medicago sativa)

Pharmacy

Alf. Alfalfa. Medicago sativa. California Clover. Lucerne. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, the best results are with 5 to 10 drops doses of the tincture, several times daily.

Herbal

Alfalfa favorably influences nutrition, evidenced in "toning up" the appetite and digestion. Acts as a fat producer, corrects tissue waste. Appetite and digestion improves, mental and physical vigour returns with gain in weight.

This is a leguminous plant. It has been cultivated from ancient times and is highly prized as a pasture and forage plant.

Those who have observed its influence when employed as a forage for stock must have been impressed with the favorable results.

Dr. Houts gathered the fresh leaves preferably, but obtained good results from the use of dried leaves which still retain a green color. Of these he made an infusion and gave freely to patients suffering from backaches, especially if they were passing but a small quantity of water while suffering from rheumatic symptoms or backache with muscular aching with an excessive quantity of uric acid and urates secreted.

Dr. Fearn of Oakland wrote that its action was very soothing upon the kidneys and urinary apparatus. He believed that it could be prepared for human food to as good if not better advantage than for animal food.

Dr. Ben Bradley of Hamlet, Ohio, believes that alfalfa is one of our upcoming remedies. He reported a case where a woman had seven children born apparently strong and well, but when they reached the age of eighteen years they wasted away and died.

When the last girl was taken with the symptoms of which the others had died, Dr. Bradley made a saturated tincture of Alfalfa seed concentrated, fully saturated and gave her ten drops four or five times a day. This is reported to have increased her weight from 99 to 133 pounds. She recovered good health.

A concentrated tincture should exercise an influence similar to that of Avena sativa. An herbal infusion used in three cases produced the same results as the alcoholic preparations.

Homeopathic

Disorders characterized by malnutrition are within its therapeutic range. Deficient breast-milk. Alfalfa increases quality and quantity of milk in nursing mothers.

Emaciation and anorexia. For example, cancer, anorexia, neurasthenia, syphilis, insomnia, nervous indigestion. Alfalfa is for weak and emaciated cancer patients.

Herbal

Allium cepa covers more symptoms of common colds and hay fever than any other remedy. Anyone who has cut up raw onions for cooking knows the irritation upon the eyes and nose. Onions cause active sneezing and lachrymation. Then, if the homeopathic law of cure is true, it ought to be a good remedy for coryza.

Desire for raw onions is an indication for it. The feet are aggravated by walking. Strangulated hernia has been known to follow the eating abundantly of cooked onions. A raw onion eaten just before going to bed is a popular remedy for sleeplessness.

Homeopathic

Ammonium picricum

Pharmacy

Am-pic. Ammonium picricum. Picrate of Ammonia. Picric acid and its combinations are very powerful medicinal substances of the nitric acid group. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third trituration.

History

Am-pic. is intensely bitter and like Pic-ac. and other picrates has a strong action on the liver. Periodic bilious headache like that Sang. and Cimic. Hale, commends Ammonium picricum in congestion of brain and spinal cord.

One case Hale cured had these symptoms: Middle-aged woman, short, stout, florid, every six or eight days would wake in morning with violent pain in occipital region, heaviness of head, vertigo on rising. Pain, worse on getting up, extended over sides of head to temples and eyes. In afternoon nausea and vomiting of sour bilious matter.

Another case was that of a doctor who had been thrown from his carriage and injured about the back of his head. He seemed more frightened than hurt. In a few days he noticed that on turning in bed or stooping or on any sudden motion.

He would be seized with a "wild feeling" in the occiput, trembling beating of heart with intermission and great alarm. Am-pic. completely relieved him after other medicines had been given in vain.

Clarke gave great relief with Pic-ac. in a case of spinal paresis in which a pain rising up the spine into the head was complained. Clarke thinks it is the Pic-ac. element in this ammonia salt that accounts for its action in these cases of Hale's. Planets: Jupiter.

Amygdalus persica

Pharmacy

Amgd-p. Amygdalus persica. Peach tree. Persica vulgaris. Persica Amygdalus. N. O., Rosacea, Amygdalae. Fresh infusion or mother tincture. The tincture is made by pounding to a pulp the fresh bark of the twigs and macerating in two parts by weight of alcohol. The infusion is made by taking of the bark one part and of boiling distilled water ten parts. Infuse in a covered vessel for one hour and strain. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies.

Herbal

Outside the old herbalists the virtues of the bark and leaves of the peach tree have received little attention.

Dr. Oliver S. Haines of Philadelphia, also contributed the following experience: Apropos of the remarks made by Dr. C. C. Edson upon the efficacy of infusion of peach bark in the gastric irritability of children, we might mention the following authentic case:

"For an adult the dose is five drops and in urgent cases repeat every five to ten minutes until the symptoms subside after which give it at intervals of one to four hours as indicated.

After ten years use I am thoroughly convinced that any physician once giving it a thorough trial will never again be without it. Of course, it is not a specific for all "Upheavals of the inner man," but will I think meet more indications than any other known remedy of its class.

An infant during its second summer, had been much reduced by acute dyspeptic diarrhea. A marked feature of this case was the persistent vomiting of all food. The stomach would tolerate no form of baby food with or without milk. The child's parents had consulted some eminent physicians of our city.

The child had been given homeopathic remedies. None of the remedies chosen seemed to produce the desired effect. After a consultation it was deemed best to send the infant to the mountains. The change aggravated its condition.

While the parents hourly expected their baby would die, it was suggested that they send for an old practitioner living in the mountains near at hand.

This man had a local reputation as a saver of dying babies. His prescription was as follows: Two or three fresh peach leaves were to be put in a cup of boiling water, the infant to receive a "drink" of this infusion at frequent intervals.

The effects of this were remedy as remarkable in this case as in the case narrated by Dr. Edson. Our child soon retained food and eventually recovered. It seems this ancient disciple of Aesculapius had long used peach leaves and regarded them as possessing specific virtues.' Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Amygdalus persica is a most valuable remedy in vomiting of various kinds, morning sickness. Constant nausea and vomiting. Irritation of eyes. Ischuria and hematuria.

Hemorrhage from the bladder. Gastric irritation of children, no form of food tolerated. Loss of smell and taste. Gastric and intestinal irritation when the tongue is elongated and pointed, tip and edges red.

Clinical

Gastric and intestinal irritation. Hemorrhage. Morning sickness. Nausea. Vomiting.

Comments

Anshutz writes: Dr. C. C. Edson wrote in the Chicago Medical Times. 1890: Some ten years ago I had a little patient whose principal difficulty seemed to be an inability to retain anything whatever upon its stomach. It would vomit up promptly everything I gave it and I had given it everything I had ever heard of and also had eminent council, but it was no go, I was literally at my rope's end.

At this juncture an elderly lady neighbor, one of "the good old mothers," timidly suggested an infusion of peach bark. I started to find the coveted bark, which I was fortunate enough to procure.

I prepared an infusion, gave the little patient a few swallows and presto! the deed was done, the child cured.

It fills all the indications of the leaves and many more. It fills the indications of hydrocyanic acid, ipecac or any other anti-emetic.

It will more frequently allay the vomiting of pregnancy than any remedy I have ever tried. And nearly every case of retching or vomiting (except it be reflex) will promptly yield under its use.

In recent cases I have very rarely had to give the second prescription to relieve morning sickness. I was visiting a doctor in Quincy, while there he told me he was afraid he would have either to make a lady abort or let her die from the fact that he had failed to stop her vomiting.

I happened to have a sample of the medicine with me, I gave it to him, he took it to the lady and in a few days he reported her well. I may say like Dr. Edson, it is a standard remedy with me. I have found it very useful in hemorrhage from the bladder.

Some of my lady patients find it very good in nervous headache.

I have used the tincture prepared from the leaves, but it is far inferior to that prepared from the bark of the young shoots.

A medical friend was going to see a lady who had morning sickness, he told me he had thought of advising her to use popcorn, I handed him a small bottle of my Amygdalus and told him to take a couple of ears of corn in his pocket and try both. The next time I met him he said my medicine had done the work.

Also in paroxysms of asthma, chloroform asphyxia inhalation of the Aml-n. will give immediate relief. For this non-homeopathic application, two to five minims (put up in pearls) dropped on a handkerchief and inhaled may be required.

Homeopathic

The most striking action of the drug is the deep facial flushing it causes and the pulsation all over the body. Superficial arterial hyperemia. Palpitations of the heart and similar conditions are readily cured by it.

Comments

A very characteristic sensation is a pressing or penetrating pain as from a plug, which may occur in any locality in connection with neuralgias, ear disorders and hemorrhoids and when present Anacardium will probably be the remedy.

Alzheimer's disease. Brain fatigue. Loss of memory is very marked. Deafness with loss of memory. Headache worse by mental exertion, better by eating. Stiffness of neck, worse beginning to move.

The senses are either too weak or too acute and there are sense illusions: a light has a halo, optical illusions in dark colors, illusions of hearing, illusions of smell: burning tinder, pigeon's dung.

Symptoms generally better by eating, recur two hours after. There is intermittence in the symptoms of Anac. "The attacks ceased for one or two days and then continued again for a couple of days."

Guided by this indication alone, Custis has cured with Anacardium 200c a case of sleeplessness in a pregnant woman: "Spells of sleeplessness lasting for several nights."

The cough of Anac. is better by eating. Whooping-cough with a gaping and drowsiness after the cough. Anac. is suited to disorders of the palms of the hands. There are warts even on the palms. Morning sickness of pregnancy better by eating, but returns soon after.

The Anac. indigestion contrasts with that of Nux-v. in a striking way. With Nux-v. the pain is worst for two or three hours after a meal during stomach-digestion and is better when that is over, whereas with Anac. it is just then (when digestion is complete) that the pain is worst and it lasts until the next meal, which again better for a time.

Bayes' indications are, "brain fatigue before examination," "nerve-exhaustion from over-study." "nervous prostration from seminal emissions," or sexual excess. Paralyzed feeling in knees. Sensation as if knees were bandaged.

Sensation of a hoop or band around the body or about any part is a leading symptom. It has been used with success in diseases of the spinal cord with this sensation and the feeling of a plug in the spine, worse by any motion which causes a pain as if the plug were sticking still further in.

Comments

Case 1 - Francine D., 28, came for a consultation on 28/10/74, for a hormonal problem. She began menstruation at 17 and since then has always had irregular periods, up to 5 or 6 days late. Menses are weak, scanty with bright red or brown blood and painful. Between menses, yellowish-green leucorrhea.

She has been receiving allopathic hormone treatment for 5 years after an examination which revealed the right ovary to be large, smooth and white. Feels tired on waking up, tendency to be constipated, dreams a great deal, complains of dorsal pains. Anxious, legs heavy.

She has scoliosis, small breasts, gastric ptosis, slight acrocyanosis and infiltrated ankles. She says she has not been receiving hormone treatment for several months.

Prescription of 25 drops of Radix-Angelicae-Sinensis in 3x on waking up. 15 drops of Radix-Angelicae-Sinensis in 7c on going to bed.

Condition generally improved, feels better. Stools regular sleep better and fewer dreams, no tiredness on waking, lost a little weight, which pleased her - 52 kilos, arterial tension 14/8. As for menses, she had one period on 8th December 1974, but it was still a little painful.

Then on 22nd January 1975, normal, copious and, above all, painless. We maintained the original prescription.

Case 2. - D. St., age 24, came on 9th September 1974. Began menses at 9, always had painful, scanty menses with black, clotted blood. Operated on in January 1972 for a right sided hydrosalpinx and menstrual cycle did not improve afterwards. While, milky leucorrhoea, feels swollen intercourse painful.

Prescription Radix-Angelicae-Sinensis, 3x in the morning, 7c in the evening. The menstrual cycle was restored and she had periods on 27th September, 25th October, 20th November, 21st December 1974 and then 22nd January 1975, 18th February and 22nd March 1975. No more leucorrhoea, regular, painless intercourse, no more swelling, regular stools.

Case 3. - Myriane F..., 26, came on 13th July 1974 with obesity and rare, irregular menses. Here is a pattern of her periods when taking Radix-Angelicae-Sinensis, 3x and 7c: 18th July, 30th August, 3rd September, 4th October, 14th November, 19th December, 24th January. She was 1.67 m tall, weighing 65 kilos at 13/7/74 and 59 kilos at 24/2/75.

She is now very well. In fact, these three cases are only given as indications. A closer clinical and biological study is necessary in order to demonstrate its value. We must also point out that a greater dosage of 25 to 50 drops, two to three times a day, can be given in cases of benign breast tumors or secondary amenorrhoea, especially after cessation of taking the birth control pill.

Pharmacy

Anh. Anhalonium lewinii. Lophophora williamsii. Peyote. Peyotl. Mescal buttons. N. O. Cactaceae. Tinctures, extracts or infusions. Havelock Ellis says: "I first cut up the buttons into small fragments and poured on boiling water twice, a single infusion is inactive."

Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies.

The Anhalonium plant from which the mescal buttons are obtained grows in barren and rocky soil in the valley of the Rio Grande. It is used by some Indian tribes in their religious ceremonies. In the Indian ceremonies the constant beating of tom-toms is an essential feature.

Its most striking effects appear in the auditory nerve for it makes "each note upon the piano a center of melody which seems to be surrounded by a halo of color pulsating to the rhythm of the music."

Anhalonium has been recently tested and a notable proving having been made by Dr. Wier Mitchell. It is a cardiac tonic and respiratory stimulant. It weakens the heart and produces insanity. Planets: Sun, Moon.

Comments

The Anis. provings were made by Franz and Mure. Both showed the action of the drug on the nose, mouth and stomach. Franz had many symptoms on the face, especially lips, skin and limbs.

A very remarkable symptom of Franz' has been confirmed by Flora A. Waddell.

A man suffering from rheumatism of two years' duration came limping into Dr. Waddell's office, asking if she could do anything for his limb.

He complained that when he sat down he couldn't rest in that position at all. Asked why, he replied: "Whenever I sit down my limb feels as if broken off right here," pointing to the middle of his thigh. He said he often got up to straighten himself in order to make sure.

He also had some pain in his arm and severe "sore pain" in his back. Anis. 30x cured all the symptoms.

Mure's Anis. symptoms were noted on head, abdomen, chest and back. Tough white expectoration appears to be a characteristic and this symptom has been frequently confirmed:

Pain in region of third rib, about one or two inches from sternum (junction of rib with its cartilage), generally on right side, but occasionally on left.

Moist eruption behind ears (Graph.). Slight noises startle. Nosebleed with vertigo after headache after rush of blood to head.

Gastric and remittent fevers and fevers of children with great thirst and the characteristic white tongue. The fever runs higher at night. The child is cross, but unlike the Cham. patient, who wants to be carried, this will scream and show temper at every little attention.

There is a form of diarrhea which alternates with constipation often found in old people to which Ant-c. corresponds. "Stomach weak, digestion easily disturbed in old people."

It cures many cases of hemorrhoids: continuous oozing, staining linen. In connection with the intolerance of wine of the remedy, it may be mentioned that in one case it produced a feeling of intoxication like that of alcohol, so that the patient refused to take any more of it.

A notable characteristic of Ant-c. is the thickly coated tongue. Generally it is thick and white, milky-white or like whitewash evenly laid. The edges may be red and sore. Sore, cracked and crusty nostrils and corners of mouth.

Abnormal hunger, not relieved by eating, emptiness of epigastrium and want of animal heat. Disgust for all foods. Nursing children throw up a little sour milk as soon as they take the breast or bottle (Aeth. after vomiting the child sleeps and wakes hungry, Ant-c. the child refuses to nurse again).

The sulphur-like element in Ant-c. is strongly pronounced in the provings as in the constipation and other intestinal disorders of the drug. In spite of the worse from heat there is great sensitiveness to cold, hence it is suitable to the hydrogenoid constitutions.

Trituration and solutions. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, second and sixth trituration.

History

Tartar emetic of the Alchemists. Ant-t. resembles closely Ant-c. and the other Antimonies in its action, though the modalities differ. Ant-t. was the favorite emetic of olden times and consequently it is one of our best remedies in states of nausea. The nausea is as intense as that of Ip., but less persistent and is better by vomiting.

A correspondent related the case of an apprentice who had been employed for a week making up "cough-balls" and diuretic balls for horses, both containing powdered antimony. He had been cautioned not to inhale the powder, but his employer believes he did. At the end of the week he was seized with an illness, due, his employer thinks and no doubt correctly to the antimony.

Homeopathic

Antimonium tart. affects the mucous membranes especially of the bronchials and lungs.

Ant-t. has many symptoms in common with Ant-c., but also many peculiar to itself. All these conditions cause cyanosis, depression of vital power.

Its therapeutic application has been confined largely to the treatment of respiratory diseases, rattling of mucus with little expectoration has been a guiding symptom. Great accumulation of mucus with coarse rattling, thereby respiration is impeded and heart action becomes labored, defective oxygenation in the circulation of blood occurs.

Child continuously wishes to be carried erect, unwilling to be looked at or touched. Complaints arising in digestive sphere. Prostrated in mind and body. Nursing infants let go the nipple and cry out as if out of breath. Children have convulsions if attention is thrust upon them. Bilharziasis. Clings to attendants.

Patient becomes increasingly weak, sweats, becomes drowsy and relaxed with lack of reaction. Gastric disorders of alcoholics and gouty subjects. Cholera morbus. Sensation of coldness in blood-vessels. Bilharziasis. Ant-t. acts indirectly on the parasites by stimulating the oxidizing action of the protective substance. Lumbago. Chills and contractures with pain in muscles.

Comments

In chest disorders of all kinds it is indicated where there is great accumulation of mucus with coarse rattling and inability to raise it.

A characteristic of Ant-t. in lung disorders is "lies with head back." "A child coughs when angry" is characteristic. Heath cured a case of whooping cough in a child who was very fretful before the cough. The mother said that if the child got angry she immediately had a fit of coughing.

"Cough at 4 a.m. " is another indication which I have found true.

Gastric and bilious complaints. Constant nausea. Nausea felt in chest (Puls.). Sensation of weight or heaviness in many parts, head, occiput, coccyx, limbs. Pulsations in all the blood-vessels.

Nash has found Ant-t. the nearest thing to a specific in cholera morbus, the indications being "nausea, vomiting, loose stools, prostration, cold sweat, stupor or drowsiness."

The child wants to be carried and cries if any one touches it. Peevishness, whining and crying. Restless, apprehension and agitation. Dullness and bewilderment of head as if benumbed. Chronic trembling of head and hands (as in Parkinson's disease).

The tongue has a thick, white, pasty coat with red papillae showing through. Intense nausea and vomiting with great effort with perspiration on forehead. Fullness and sensation of stones in abdomen, especially when sitting bent forward.

Drowsiness or even a coma may accompany cases of all kinds in which Ant-t. is called for. The face is pale or cyanotic and the breathing stertorous. There is heat about heart and warmth rising up from it. A sensation of coldness in the blood-vessels.

Symptoms like that of small-pox, the symptoms of which disease are closely reproduced in the proving. It has been used instead of vaccines for preventive purposes and a prophylactic power has been claimed for it. Compare with nosode Variolinum.

The terrible backache of small-pox is paralleled by the back-pains of Ant-t., which Clarke found to correspond to more cases of lumbago than any other remedy. The skin is notably affected. Ant-t. is also a "sycotic," and Clarke has verified a symptom given in Hering, "warts at the back of the glans penis."

Ant-t. has worse by warmth, but not the excessive sensitiveness to heat and sun of Ant-c. and some of the rheumatic symptoms are better by warmth. Warm drink worse cough, also lying in bed especially becoming warm there.

Antipyrinum

(phenazone)

Pharmacy

Antip. Antipyrinum. Phenazone Phenyl-dimethyl-pyrazolon. A product of coal tar through Toulon. Solution and trituration. Historical dose: Trituration, Tincture and all potencies, second decimal potency.

History

Antipyrine is known from the poisonous effects it has produced in old-school practice. Many fatal cases have been recorded and there can be little doubt that its injudicious use has determined a fatal issue in many cases that have remained unrecorded. Planets:

Saturn, Moon.

Homeopathic

Antipyrine's action is very like that of Acetan. in producing collapse, but it has more effect on the skin, causing scarlet rash and edema. Antipyrine is one of the drugs that induce leucocytosis, similar to ergotine, salicylates and tuberculin.

Antipyrine acts especially on the vasomotor centers, causing dilation of the capillaries of skin and circumscribed patches of hyperemia and swelling. In large doses it causes profuse perspiration, dizziness, cyanosis and somnolence, albumen and blood in urine. Acute erythema multiforme.

Stomach

Throat

Painful when swallowing. Expectoration of fetid pus. Abscess, white false membrane. Sensation of burning.

Comments

A young lady patient who took Antipyrine on her own account, whenever she thought she might be going to have a headache, developed intense dysmenorrhea (to which she was not subject) with depression. This was only removed after she had discontinued the drug. Later on she took Phenacetin with result that an eruption of erythema appeared on both cheeks, which peeled after a few days and recurred persistently.

It would seem from the above that the drug is homeopathic to some forms, at least of neuralgia. One patient had Cheyne-Stokes respiration. Erythema appears first on face and arms, last on legs. Hansen mentions its use in bedwetting and nosebleed. Better from hot drinks.

Apis mellifica

(honey-bee)

Pharmacy

Apis. Apis mellifica. Honey-Bee. N. O. Insecta. Apium virus is honey-bee venom.

Tinctures are made of the whole bee and of dilutions of the poison with alcohol.

Historical dose: All potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

The well-known effects of a bee's sting: burning, stinging, sharp pains with excessive swelling, give leading keynote for its employment in a great variety of conditions.

Redness and swelling with stinging and burning pain in eyes, eyelids, ears, face, lips tongue, throat, anus, testicles. The stinging appears in many diseases and conditions, causing the "cry cerebral" in acute hydrocephalus and meningitis. Stinging pains in hemorrhoids.

The burning symptoms of Apis are distinguished from those of Ars. in being worse by heat. Edema of the throat may be accompanied with stinging pains.

Homeopathic

Apis acts on cellular tissue of eyes, face, throat, ovaries, causing edema of skin and mucus membranes. In the serous membranes of heart, brain, pleura etc. it produces inflammation with effusion. Allergic reactions to bee or wasp stings. The effects of a bee sting, burning, stinging, smarting, prickling, sharp pain with excessive swelling, are the leading symptoms for the selection of this remedy.

Comments

Apis has great sensitiveness of the surface to touch. General soreness every hair is painful to contact. Great debility as if he had worked hard is compelled to lie down. Tired and bruised feeling. Great restlessness and fidgetiness (the Ars. restlessness is more from mental anxiety). Trembling, jerking and twitching. One half of the body twitching, the other lame or paralyzed. Hemiplegia.

The stiffness being accompanied by a feeling of constriction, which excited a single, spasmodic, hacking cough at short intervals. Some difficulty in breathing, especially in inspiration. These symptoms were accompanied by a terrible restlessness.

On a later occasion there was dyspnea, face purple, head thrown back. The same symptoms as above recurred, but the throat was more swollen and the distress extended below the larynx to the upper part of the lung, which soon became very sore and sensitive. An hour after the sting on this occasion a violent cough came on.

It seemed to be excited by the constrictive feeling in the throat, but it reached down to the sore place in the lungs, causing great distress. It was a deep, hard, ringing cough, lasting without intermission for three hours. Traces of the cough and soreness lasted for months.

Apis has slow action and must not be changed too soon. Increased flow of urine shows it is having a favorable effect. The dropsies of Apis are characterized by a waxy hue of skin, whitish or yellowish, transparent swelling of eyelids, bag-like swelling under eyes, surface of body sore, bruised or burning. In cardiac dropsy the feet swell after walking and are intolerably sore and burning.

In chest disorders there is sensation of contraction (Lach.) And inability to lie down. Tension, swelling and stiffness of limbs. This tight sensation is manifested in another symptom: sensation in abdomen as if something tight would break if too much effort was made to void a constipated stool. Aversion to tight things like Lach. Prostration even to faintness. Paralytic weakness. Paralysis after diphtheria and other severe diseases.

Nervous, restless, over-sensitive or hot and drowsy with or without thirst. Worse from touch or pressure (though the head is better by pressure). In this Apis has a sensitiveness to heat, especially to heated rooms (Puls., Iod., Kali-i., Sec., Sulph.), worse by warmth of bed. Cold water better.

Apocynum cannabinum

(indian hemp)

Apoc. Apocyn. cannabinum. Indian Hemp. American Hemp. N. O. Apocynaceae. The whole fresh plant, root included, should be used for making the tincture or infusion.

Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture ten drops three times daily and in acute alcoholism 1 dram of decoction in 4 oz. water.

Herbal

Provings were made with fresh plant-tinctures or fresh or powdered root-tinctures or infusions. Watery infusions with just enough spirit to keep them from fermenting are said to be more efficacious than tinctures.

Hale says the kidneys are the peculiar seat of the operation of the drug and that it is in kidney dropsies that it is especially curative. It has cured diabetes insipidus with "a sense of sinking in the pit of the stomach with great debility." Hemorrhages, especially menorrhagia and hemorrhages at the change of life have been cured with it. Hale has found it restore the menses when given in cases of dropsy.

The clinical effects of Strophanthus and the symptoms produced on patients to whom it has been given in large doses, clearly show the relationship between it and Apocynum. Both produce intense gastric disturbance, extreme depression of the heart's action and both control dropsical effusions and produce diuresis.

Homeopathic

Apocynum depresses the heart, kidneys and intestines, relaxing sphincters. Apocynum is a useful remedy for general dropsies with or without organic disease. Increases secretions of mucous and serous membranes and acts on cellular tissue, producing edema and dropsy and on skin causing diaphoresis.

Swelling of every part of the body with scanty urine and sweat, feels if he could only sweat he would get well. This is an effective remedies in dropsies, ascites, anasarca and hydrothorax and urinary troubles, especially suppression and strangury.

Dropsy with great thirst, but water causes pain or is vomited after typhus, scarlatina, cirrhosis. Acute alcoholism. Dropsy after hemorrhage, quinine. Dropsy of serous membranes. Acute inflammatory dropsy.

Congested heart failure. Arrhythmia. Mitral and tricuspid regurgitation. Relaxation of sphincters. In the digestive complaints of Bright's disease with the nausea, vomiting, drowsiness, difficult breathing, it will be found of frequent service. A diminished frequency of the pulse is a prime indication.

In acute hydrocephalus the child lies in stupor with automatic motion of one arm and leg. Paralysis of left side, one eye motionless other rolling. Weakness is marked. Excretions diminished, especially urine and sweat. Rheumatic stiffness.

Three cases of neuralgia of the right side, groin, hip and in one case region of right kidney, have been cured with this remedy. All were violent, extorting cries. In one case the pain set in very suddenly and the slightest jar aggravated.

Aranea diadema

(papal cross spider)

Aran. Aranea Diadema. Diadema aranea. Papal-Cross Spider. N. O. Arachnida. Tincture.

Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture to thirtieth potency.

History

Grauvogl is our chief authority for the use of Aranea. It is one of the leading remedies for the hydrogenoid constitution as described by him and for intermittent fevers and other intermittent disorders.

By hydrogenoid constitution he meant abnormal sensitiveness to damp and cold and inability to live near fresh water, either rivers or lakes or in damp, chilly places. This gives the worse from bathing from the damp weather, localities or habitations, worse drawing in cold air.

Grimmer says cancer of lungs with hemorrhage, cases based on the tubercular miasm. Very sensitive to dampness and rainy weather. Marked periodicity of symptoms, clock-like regularity, annual recurrence of symptoms and conditions.

Homeopathic

All spider poisons powerfully affect the nervous system. (Tarent., Mygale). Aranea diadema is the remedy for the constitution favorable to malarial poisoning, where every damp day or place favors chilliness. There is abnormal susceptibility to dampness and cold. Patient feels cold to the very bones, cannot get warm enough. Inability to live near fresh water, rivers, lakes or in damp chilly places. (Dulc., Nat-s.).

All symptoms of Aranea are characterized by periodicity and coldness and great susceptibility to dampness.

Feeling of faintness with nausea, vertigo, trembling and cold sweating. Chill not better by external warmth, no sweat with fevers. Patient feels cold to the very bones. Coldness not relieved by anything.

Face congested and burning. Rush of blood to the head. Shivering, cold sweats. Palpitations. Head and feet cold. It affects bones, causing periostitis. Punctured wounds. Feeling as if parts were enlarged and heavier. Wake up at night with hands feeling twice their natural size. Exhaustion, must lie down.

Parkinson's syndrome. Acroparesthesia at night. Radicular neuritis. Toxic or viral polyneuritis. Facial neuralgia. Obesity with fat and water retention.

Aranea diadema is a hemorrhagic remedy. Violent hemoptysis of bright red blood in debilitated subjects, bathing and damp places aggravate, coldness as if the bones were made of ice. Pains are like electric shocks. Headache relieved by smoking tobacco.

The Strawberry tree sheds its bark annually, which gives the signature of its use in skin cases. Arbutus is one of Dr. Cooper's remedies. He cured several cases of eczema with it and observed that it produced pains in the joints of a gouty or rheumatic character. Hence he was led to give it in certain inveterate cases of arthritis.

In one case the patient noticed that it "cleared his urine." Arbutin has a reputation among the allopaths as a urinary remedy. Arbutus is allied to Uva ursi, which belongs to the Ericaceae.

One patient who was benefited by the remedy had worse in North-East winds. The larger joints are principally affected and the slightest movement sets up inflammation. Planets: Saturn.

Areca catechu

(betel nut)

Pharmacy

Arec. Areca catechu. Areca-nut. Betel-nut. N. O. Palmae. Trituration of the nut. Triturations and solutions of the two alkaloids, Arecoline and Tenaline. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

Herbal

The Betel-nut is in very common use in the East as a masticatory for sweetening the breath and hardening the gums.

Its alkaloid, Areolin hydrobrom., contracts the pupil, acting more promptly and energetically but of shorter duration than Eserine. The chief medical use of the Areca nut has been in helminthiasis in dogs, but it is not altogether without danger.

According to F. Hobday, Tenaline is a much safer and more certain anthelmintic than Arecoline. He advises a dose of one minim of the solution to the pound-weight of the animal, either given pure or with a little water. It is not to be given by injection.

According to Ricapet it surpasses Pilocarpine as a salivatory. It arrests the heart's action in diastole in poisonous doses and in non-toxic doses increases the amplitude of the pulsations without increasing their frequency. It promotes the contractibility of the intestines and as a tinea-fuge it requires no additional laxative. It should be given in pills coated with gelatin or keratin.

The Hydrobromate of Arecoline has been used to cause contraction of the pupil. It acts more promptly and more energetically than Eserine, but its duration of action is shorter.

Planets: Moon, Mercury.

Homeopathic

Argentum nitricum

Pharmacy

Arg-n. Argentum nitricum. Nitrate of Silver. Lunar Caustic. Trituration and solution.

Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

It was the use of Argentum nitricum in ancient times in the treatment of epilepsy which led to the production of the lamentable cases of lead-colored pigmentation of the skin called Argyria.

Arg-n. has irresistible desire for sugar, which at the same time aggravates.

Kent relates a case illustrating this. A nursing infant had a grass-green diarrhea which failed to yield to Merc., Ars., and Cham. At last Kent discovered that the mother ate a pound of candy a day. Arg-n. was given and the candy stopped and the child soon got well.

Grimmer has used it for Addison's disease, lead-colored pigmentation of the skin. Mental symptoms are important indications for the use of the remedy, nervous fears and restlessness with trembling hands, skin cancers.

Homeopathic

In Arg-n. the neurotic effects are very marked, many brain and spinal symptoms presenting themselves which give certain indications for its homeopathic employment.

Comments

Among the key symptoms of Arg-n. are: Great tremor. Nervous feeling, sensation as if being squeezed in a vice. Feeling of constriction in various parts as of a band of iron round chest or waist. A feeling as if the body or some part of the body were expanding.

Migraine with feeling as if head were enormously enlarged, better tightly bound. Defective coordination. Paralyzes of motion and sensation, a peculiar numbness accompanied with hyperesthesia. Sensation of a splinter sticking in various parts. Burning sensations.

In allopathic practice the dyspepsia for which it is given is worse before food, when the stomach is empty. The opposite condition is the leading indication in homeopathic practice. Gowers has recorded a case in which the use of Arg-n. for stomach trouble caused (like lead), drop-wrist, gout and albuminuria.

E. P. Brewer has recorded a proving, (the prover, a young man, taking on three consecutive days one grain a day of Arg-n. triturated with sugar of milk in which a number of motor and sensory symptoms were elicited, reminding Dr. Brewer of locomotor ataxia in which it has been used with success by old-school practitioners.

This use also has led to many cases of argyria. Among the symptoms of this proving were: "Mental operations sluggish, continued thought required special effort, but exertion of mind did not aggravate the heaviness and fullness of head. Lower limbs fatigued, as if they would suddenly fail him. Loss of ambition. Building air castles by day: monstrous dreams by night."

Other symptoms were sore throat with white patches, rheumatic pains in (left) wrist (which I have since confirmed) and finger joints with external tenderness of bony prominences, pain on rising in right sacroiliac notch. Sore muscles of neck and back. Urticaria spots in various parts.

In poisoning cases complete loss of consciousness insensibility and convulsions have occurred. Some of the notable digestive symptoms are: "Irresistible desire for sugar. Fluids go right through him." Belching accompanies most gastric disorders.

Aristolochia Clematitis, of the Aristolochiaceae family, grows in Southern Europe and South America. Aristos means better, locheia means giving birth. In popular medicine to induce birth or stimulant the menses. Also as a diuretic, and against rheumatism. In high doses it is an emetic and cathartic. In South America, some Aristolochia are used for blindness.

Ussher notes that the local use of Arnica produced an extraordinary growth of hair on a limb. This suggested the use of an oil mixed with Arn. 1x in a case of baldness, which was followed with marked success.

Clarke once ran a piece of wire into the tip of one of his fingers, causing paralyzing pain. He applied Arn., 1x at once and the pain was better instantly seeming to be wiped out from the point of injury up the arm.

Comments

arnica is allied to wounds and cures hemorrhages of many kinds: strokes, dilatation and rupture of small blood-vessels. Vomiting, coughing, purging, accompanied by streaks of blood in vomit. Extravasation of blood into the conjunctiva as in whooping cough. Hemorrhages into the tissues of internal organs or the skin.

An odd symptom of Arnica is "coldness of the nose." A case of facial (left) neuralgia, face swollen, dark red, very painful to touch, was cured with Arnica (radix), the guiding symptom being "cold nose." Patient had bitter taste, was very excitable and worse at night.

Arnica corresponds to the effects of violent cough or sneezing, the child cries before cough comes on (or with the cough) in whooping cough. Chronic bronchitis when patients have bruised, weak aching in the chest or great sensitiveness of the chest on exertion or walking.

Arn. affects the left upper extremity and the right chest. There is a putridity in connection with Arnica excretions, as with Bapt., which it resembles in typhoid conditions: putrid breath, fetid sweat. With Arnica there is apt to be incessant passing of stool and urine in these states.

Nash gives the following: "Stupor with involuntary discharge of feces and urine." "Fears being touched or struck by those coming near him." "Putrid smell from mouth." "Bruised, sore feeling in uterine region, cannot walk erect." "While answering falls into a deep stupor before finishing." "Head alone or face alone, hot, rest of body cool." "Many small boils, painful, one after another, extremely sore."

"Suddenness" is a feature of Arn. pains and action. P. P. Wells relates a cure of double pleuro-pneumonia in a child with sudden stabbing pains on both sides of the chest almost preventing breathing. Arnica instantly caused a violent aggravation, the next instant relief was perfect and the child fell asleep breathing naturally.

Arsenicum album

(white oxide of arsenic)

Pharmacy

Ars. Arsenicum album. Arsenic Trioxide. The white oxide of metallic Arsenic. Solution and trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

Grimmer states that Ars. has helped cancer, epithelioma, lupus, pernicious anemia have yielded to the power of this potent medicine. Typhus and pernicious types of malaria present a fair picture of the range and character of the sickness this remedy has cured.

The Arsenic habit of the Styrian mountaineers has arisen from the discovery of its power of strengthening the muscles both of the limbs and of the breathing apparatus. The arsenic-eaters of the Tyrol can take as much as a few grains of white arsenic or the sulphide, every two days.

They maintain that it imparts a sense of invigoration and enables them to carry enormous loads up steep mountains.

According to one account it is resorted to by populations who live on vegetable food almost exclusively. "It strengthens the muscles, helps to digest our coarse bread and potatoes and allows us to breathe freely and easily."

It is difficult to say how far this is a directly "tonic," effect and how far curative of the dyscrasia generated by the conditions of life. The fine skin and glossy hair of the young women among the arsenic-eating people is remarkable and is comparable to the fine coats of arsenic fed horses.

On the other hand, "staring coat" in animals and "dry, rough, scaly, unhealthy-looking skin" in human beings are keynote indications for the remedy. In this connection may be mentioned the effects on the crew of the ship Zion, which carried arsenic as a portion of its cargo. This was exposed somewhat to the sun's rays and the crew noticed a peculiar smell.

Soon they all began to notice themselves growing stout and on reaching Philadelphia from England they had all gained much, one to the extent of two stones in weight.

Comments

Arsenic is the horse's remedy, as Puls. is the sheep's and Ant-c. the pig's. The reprehensible fashion of "doctoring" horses with Arsenic is merely an abuse of a therapeutic fact. The horse is an animal on whose power of endurance and "wind" enormous demands are made and Arsenic is the remedy for the effects of feats of prolonged endurance.

But in another way the horse typifies the Arsenicum temperament. The mental symptoms of any drug, when pronounced, carry precedence of all others. The horse is an exceedingly nervous animal, constantly moving about, restless to a degree and very prone to take fright, quite a picture of the Arsenic temperament.

Its cardinal symptoms are great fear of death, extreme restlessness, marked weakness, rapid loss of weight, coldness and lack of vital heat, nightly aggravations, especially after midnight, 2 a. m. to 4 a. m., extreme burning pains, marked tendency to ulcerations and destruction of tissues, low types of disease, malignant fevers, such as typhoid.

Restlessness is one of the grand characteristics of Arsenic. Even the stupor of Arsenic is interrupted by fits of restlessness with anxious moaning. Patients are anxious, full of the fear of death, restlessness compelling them to frequently change their position.

Therefore the applicability of the drug in many nervous affections, notably chorea.

Jerks and starts on falling asleep. Irritability, desperately angry, almost furious. Despair, hopelessness, unutterable misery. The irritability and sadness of malarial cachexias of the cachexias of quinine, mercury and syphilis.

Low types of disease, typhoid states. Inflammations of great intensity with tendency to destruction of tissue. Burning, sharp pains. Burning is another of leading characteristics of Arsenic. The peculiarity of the "burning pains" of Ars. is that they are better by heat (herein comparing with Caps.).

Ars. affects the entire digestive tract. The lips are so dry and parched and cracked that the patient often licks them to moisten them. The mouth is aphthous, ulcerated or gangrenous.

The burning in the throat is better by eating or drinking hot things. On the other hand cold food and cold drinks, worse stomach irritations, hence Ars. is of signal use for effects of eating ices and drinking ice-water.

According to Teste Ars. is suited to the effects of excess of vegetable diet, melons, strawberries and fruits in general, especially watery fruits. The stomach is so irritable that the least food or drink causes distress or vomiting or stool or both together. Abdominal pains are intense, causing the patient to turn and twist. Hemorrhoids are exceedingly painful as if burning needles plunged in.

States of lowered vitality. The prostration of Ars. is remarkable. With it there is the desire to move or to be moved constantly. The patient is exhausted from the slightest exertion. Exhaustion is not felt while lying still, but as soon as he moves he is surprised to find himself so weak. The prostration seems out of proportion to the rest of his illness. Must lie down. Exhaustion from hill-climbing, breathless, sleepless.

Thirst for little and often (Ant-t., Lyc.), wants it very cold and immediately rejects it (Phos. as soon as it becomes warm). Before and after the cough of Arsenic there is an attack of asthma (Phos.) Ars. has a great place in acute coryza and hay fever. The fluent coryza is corrosive, reddening the upper lip and has more burning than either Merc. or All-c.

Also it is worse out of doors and better in warmth, which distinguishes it from All-c. especially Arsenic is predominantly right-sided. The neuralgias affect the right side most. The right lung has acute, sharp, fixed or darting pain in apex and through upper third of right lung. Right lung is more affected than the left, also the right side of the abdomen, hence typhlitis.

Many dropsical conditions are controlled by Ars. Especially has it done brilliant work in cases of hydrothorax. It has been called the "liquid trochar," on account of the expeditious way in which it will remove a watery effusion. The patient cannot lie down, must sit up to breathe, anxious, restless, worse about 1 a.m.

Puffiness is one of its characteristics and from this to dropsy. All mucous membranes are irritated. The skin is cold and clammy. Scurfy eruptions. Bran-colored scales on head coming down to forehead.

Arsenic has cured epithelioma of the lips and closely corresponds to the cancerous diathesis. Many cures of cancer have been reported under its use, both in crude and in potencies. When the subjective symptoms of Ars. are present, it will cure in the potencies. When the similarity is more crude the lower potencies will be required. In cancer cases the Ars. appears to act directly on the cancerous tissue and cancerous elements in the system.

Arsenic is a hemorrhagic it acts on both blood and blood-vessels. Varicose veins burn like fire. Anemia, chlorosis, pyemia all come within the scope of Arsenic, which corresponds also to weakened states resulting from blood loss, as venesection, metrorrhagia, hemoptysis.

Arsenic is one of the best of remedies for intermittent fevers and chills. Clarke once treated some members of a family who all had attacks of fever of short duration, recurring regularly every six weeks from living in rooms papered with arsenical papers. Its periodicity comes every day, every third or fourth day, every fortnight, every six weeks, every year.

There is pronounced night aggravation, the pains with restlessness. Worse near midnight and after midnight, worse 3 a.m.

There is worse from cold and damp, better warmth. Ars. loves warmth like Nux-v., Psor., Hep., Sil., Mag-m. and other hydrogenoid remedies. It is differentiated from Sulph., Ant-c., Iod., Apis and Puls. Ars. hugs the fire and likes warm wraps.

Compare

(1) The restlessness of Ars. differs from that of Mag-c. must get out of bed and walk the floor to relieve pain. The fear of death is not that of Acon., but is an anxiety and a feeling that it is useless to take medicine as they will surely die (more like Agnus).

(2) Bry. drinks much seldom, Ars. little and often, Ars. eats much at a time, Bry. often and little.

(3) Ars. stibiatum 3x - Chest inflammations of children, restlessness with thirst and prostration, loose mucous cough, oppression, hurried respiration, crepitant rales.

(4) Cenchris contortrix, Iod., Phos., Chin., Verat., Carb-v., Kali-p.

Arsenicum bromatum

(bromide of arsenic)

Pharmacy

Ars-br. Arsenic bromatum. Bromide of Arsenic. Historical dose: Trituration, Tincture and all potencies, tincture, two to four drops daily in water. In diabetes, three drops three times a day in a glass of water.

History

Ars-br. has proven a great anti-psoric and anti-syphilitic remedy. Hansen says it is useful for "Acne rosacea with violet papules on the nose. Diabetes mellitus". Planets: Saturn.

Homeopathic

Ars-brom. has herpetic eruptions, syphilitic growths, glandular tumors and indurations. Carcinoma, locomotor ataxia and obstinate intermittent fevers. Acne rosacea with violet papules on nose, worse in the spring. Acne in young people. Diabetes mellitus.

Clinical

Acne. Cancer. Diabetes mellitus. Intermittent fevers. Tumors.

Comments

Anshutz's best successes were in obstinate cases of syphilis, in the first stages of tabes dorsalis, in the reconvalescence from exhausting acute diseases, in gastric suppurations inactivity of bowels, tardy digestion, constipation.

In those cases where Chin-s. failed in intermittent fevers, He prescribed Ars-br. twice daily, four drops, each time in a full glass of water. Gradually diminishing it to one daily dose and in four weeks.

Even the most obstinate cases yielded to this treatment. The patient feels encouraged by his increasing vigor, the fever-cakes disappear, the bowels move regularly and appetite leaves nothing to be desired. Those mean obstinate cases of intermittent fevers often appearing in the form of unbearable neuralgias, yield more rapidly to it than to the Quinine.

S. T., age 46 years old, contracted syphilis some years ago and was relieved of it by mercurial treatment and by Zittman's decoction. About six years ago he felt out of sorts and a papular eruption appeared on forehead, temples and especially at the root of the nose. Though treatment was immediately instituted, still in a few weeks the face of the patient was covered by ugly, foul-smelling crust.

Cod liver oil was now taken internally and applied externally until the scurfs fell off and the eruption concentrated on three points. For six months that treatment was kept up, but after being omitted for a few weeks, the eruption spread again to its former extent. Every treatment was tried in rotation without the least benefit.

In the spring 1856 he entered my clinic. In the center of the forehead, at the root of the nose, on both eyebrows on the temples and right cheek there are moist herpetic eruptions covered with crusts, exuding on least pressure an acrid, burning discharge, with easily bleeding.

Around these eruptions the skin is injected, reddened interspersed with a large network of veins. Cough and expectoration hint to a beginning of tuberculosis, an heirloom in the family. Little appetite, disturbed digestion, tardy defecation and evening fever.

He is ordered Solutio Ars-br. twice a day, four drops in a glass of water and already after two weeks the eruption begins to dry up, appetite returns and bowels are regular.

After two months two crusts fall off and the skin under them is soft, shining, somewhat red. About July all eruption had gone and the cough greatly improved.

Ars-br. is also a powerful remedy in diabetes mellitus and insipidus, cured cases where the patient had already been reduced from 138 pounds to 98 and where the urine could be condensed, by boiling into syrupy consistency.

A diabetic patient needs fresh pure air if he wishes to get well, confinement in a room or in the office prevents the action of any treatment, for it needs ozone to reduce the sugar of the blood into carbonic acid and water.

Let the patient take three drops thrice daily in a glass of water and after a week the insatiable burning thirst will be quenched and these doses must be continued until the quantity of sugar in the urine is reduced, when the remedy might be taken twice a day and continued for a long time.

Arsenicum iodatum

(iodide of arsenic)

Pharmacy

Ars-i. Arsenicum iodatum. Iodide of Arsenic. Trituration. Ought to be prepared fresh and protected from light. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, second and third trituration.

History

Ars-i. is to be preferred for persistently irritating, corrosive discharges. The discharge irritates the membrane from which it flows and over which it flows. The discharge may be fetid, watery and the mucous membrane is always red, angry, swollen, itches and burns.

In Ars-i., we have a remedy most closely allied to manifestations of tuberculosis. In the early stages of tuberculosis, even though there is an afternoon rise in temperature, Ars-i. is very effective.

It will be indicated by a profound prostration, rapid, irritable pulse, recurring fever and sweats, emaciation, tendency to diarrhea. Chronic pneumonia with abscess in lung. Hectic, debility, night sweats.

This remedy is also to be remembered in tuberculosis with hoarse, racking cough and profuse expectoration of a purulent nature and attended with cardiac weakness, emaciation and general debility. In chronic, watery diarrhea in tubercular subjects in cases of emaciation with good appetite.

This remedy can be continued for some time. *Clinical*ly, it has been found advisable in tuberculosis to begin with about the 4x and gradually go lower to the 2x trituration, 3 times a day. Planets: Mercury, Sun.

Homeopathic

Arsenicum iodatum should be thought of when the discharges of mucus membranes are persistently acrid, profuse, thick, gluey, yellow like honey in chronic disorders and thin in acute conditions. Discharges cause burning on the parts on which they flow.

Pharmacy

Arum-t. Arum triphyllum. Jack-in-the-Pulpit. Indian turnip. N. O. Araceae. Tincture of fresh tuber or corm. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

Arum-t. is the most important of the Arums. Arum maculatum, Italicum, Dracontium, have the same action as the Triphyllum. They all contain an irritant poison, causing inflammation of mucous surfaces and destruction of tissue.

Dr. Lippe, who is one of the greatest authorities on this remedy, said it should not be given low or repeated often. "Bores head in pillow" is an indication when the brain is involved. Kent points out that almost all the discharges are acrid and cause irritation of orifices.

He defines the hoarseness as that of public speakers who after long exertion, get cold (as from a drought) and suddenly are unable to finish. (With Rhus-t. the hoarseness is at the beginning and passes off by using the voice.) Arum-t. prominently affects the left side. It has a headache worse from hot coffee and has cured headache worse from too hot clothing. Planets: Moon, Mercury.

Corners of mouth sore, cracked and bleeding also, "picking ends of fingers" and "boring nose" Especially side of nose. Tongue cracked and bleeding. Urine scanty or suppressed. Bores head into the pillow. Jerking shooting pain. Patient passes into unconsciousness and slides down in bed.

This with its scarlet rash suggested its appropriateness in cases of scarlatina of malignant type in which it has met with great success. An indication of its curative action in scarlatina is the urine becoming more abundant and watery.

History

Sol of the Alchemists. This use of gold as an anti-venereal and anti-scrofulous remedy is very ancient, but has been forgotten until rediscovered by homeopathy.

Gold affects profoundly the entire organism, exercising a solvent action on the tissues, producing ulcerations and the disappearances of new growths. Hence it is one of the best antidotes to mercurial over-dosing and especially in cases of syphilis. Scrofula and decay of bone also find in Aurum a remedy. It also produces rushes of blood and hemorrhages.

Shelton has recorded as effects on girls working with gold leaf the occurrence of a "thick leucorrhoeal discharge, not offensive, white or yellowish, occasionally profuse invariably Worse by walking."

Frequently indicated in secondary syphilis and effects of mercury. Like the victim of syphilis, mental states of great depression are produced by it. Aurum develops in the organism, by attacking the blood, glands and bone, conditions bearing striking resemblance to mercurial and syphilitic infections and it is just for such deterioration of the bodily fluids and alterations in the tissues.

Aurum muriaticum

(chloride of gold)

Pharmacy

Aur-m. Aurum muriaticum. Chloride of Gold. Historical dose: Trituration, Tincture and all potencies, second trituration.

History

This salt has been proved. The symptoms are in the main identical with those of the metal, but some are peculiar or more pronounced in the one than in the other. The Muriatic element is seen in the heart symptoms, violent palpitations, sore aching, heaviness and sensation of rigidity in heart, hyperemia from heart disease.

Gold salts like mercury salts, dissolve organic tissues, they stimulate the heart more, but act on fluid tissues less powerfully than mercury.

Halbert has given Aur-m. 2x with much success in cases of sclerotic and exudative degeneration of the nervous system.

He narrates a case of disseminated sclerosis, the result of a fall, one of exudative localized meningitis and one of Morvan's disease greatly improved under its use.

This patient, a man cook, had hypertrophy of all the fingers. In some of them this had progressed until the painless whitlows appeared.

Analgesia and anesthesia were present and some atrophy of the muscles of the hand and arm. Brachial neuritis appeared to be the causative factor in the case. Remarkable improvement occurred under Aur-m. 2x.

Grimmer says: The patient needing this medicine is sensitive to heat and relieved in wet weather, he is as restless as Arsenicum and as depressed as Aurum. Cancerous warts on the tongue and genitals have been cured with this medicine.

History

This double salt of natrum and chloride of gold shows more of the syphilitic miasm present, carcinoma on a syphilitic base. Burnett states that Aur-m-n. has more power over uterine tumors than any other remedy.

Anshutz writes: "Never have I observed gold so startling in its action as in the following case: The patient is a type of the scrofulous habit, reddish hair, pasty complexion, thick nose, coarse features. About thirty years of age.

He has had the misfortune of being infected by syphilis and the still greater ill-luck of being treated by mercury and iodine to excess. All these circumstances conjoined helped to produce a complication of morbid conditions which would put medical art to a severe test."

A case of rhinoscleroma has been reported cured by it in 5x by Kranz-Busch. Old cases of rheumatism or gouty pains. Scrofula.

Comments

According to Hale, this is the most active of all the preparations of gold. In toxic doses it causes "violent gastro-enteritis," accompanied by cramps, convulsive trembling insomnia, priapism and insensibility. In pathogenetic doses it causes epigastric pain, nausea, loss of appetite and constipation. The constipation is like that of Hydr., being accompanied with catarrh.

Hale has used it with success in nervous dyspepsia with a tendency to diarrhea after eating in gastric and duodenal catarrh with or without jaundice. The same authority states that the primary effect of the salt is to cause congestion, irritation of uterus and ovaries, sub-acute metritis, ovaritis, profuse and premature menses, habitual abortion, nymphomania, ulceration of uterus, cervicitis. For these the potencies are suitable.

The secondary effects are: "Atonic amenorrhea, scanty and delaying menses, deficient sexual desire infertility from ovarian torpor, ovarian dropsy," for these he recommends the lowest triturations.

He suggests its use in puerperal mania with sexual excitement, ovaritis, gastro-intestinal irritation and suicidal impulses. Also in corresponding states in men.

Herbal

Avena Sativa improves the nutrition of brain and nervous system. One of the best tonics for debility after exhausting diseases. Avena sativa is most valuable in enabling a patient to overcome the morphine or heroin habit. It appears to exert the same kind of soothing action without creating a habit of its own. When not more than four grains of morphine have been taken daily it may be discontinued abruptly, then give 15 drops of Avena sat. in a wineglass of hot water four times a day instead.

Avena is indicated in the sleeplessness of the weak and elderly. Also for children who nervous and weak. For acute coryza take 20 drop doses in hot water hourly for a few doses. Avena sat. has been used in substantial doses of 5 to 15 drops of the tincture in a large number of cases of nerve weakness. The only symptom that has been observed to be caused by it is a pain at the base of the brain from 20-drop doses.

Homeopathic

Avena sativa has a selective action on brain and nervous system, favorably influencing their nutritive function. The leading indications are: Nervous exhaustion, sexual debility. General weakness. Sleeplessness with nervous exhaustion and weakness. Chronic insomnia.

Drug addictions. Bad effects of morphine or heroin addiction. Addicted to cocaine, marijuana, nervines, tranquilizers or sedatives. Alcoholism. Insomnia due to drugs or alcohol. Post-diphtheria paralysis. Rheumatism of heart.

Male

Seminal emissions aggravates. Spermatorrhoea, impotency after too much indulgence.

Disposition to masturbation.

Sleep

Chronic insomnia, worse during convalescence. Sleeplessness after mental exertion.

Insomnia, exhaustion aggravates.

Comments

Avena sativa is pre-eminently an anti-neurotic, quieting the nervous system to a remarkable degree. Its special sphere of action seems to be upon the male sexual organs, regulating the functional irregularities of these parts perhaps as much as any drug can.

It is a most useful remedy in all cases of nervous exhaustion, general debility, nervous palpitation of the heart insomnia inability to keep the mind fixed upon any one subject, etc., more especially when any or all of these troubles is apparently due to nocturnal emissions, masturbation, over sexual intercourse and the like. For these disorders it is truly specific.

Avena is one of the most valuable means for overcoming the bad effects of the morphine habit.

In most cases in which the habit has not used more than four grains daily the opiate may be abruptly discontinued and even substituted without any serious results. If a larger quantity than this amount has been taken for some time, it is better to gradually reduce the daily dose of morphine in the usual manner, simply prescribing the Avena in addition. The latter should be given in the same dose, as a rule, regardless of the amount of morphine taken.

In other words, it is not necessary to increase the Avena as the opiate is withdrawn. When the Quantity of morphine has not exceeded four grains daily it should be stopped at once, as stated above and Avena given in its stead in fifteen-drop doses, four times a day in wine glassful of hot water.

By this method the disagreeable after-effects will be much less than though the dose of morphine is gradually reduced and the patient will find life quite bearable, as a rule, at the end of a week.

Avena sativa should always be given in appreciable doses of the tincture. Fifteen drops three or four times a day, well diluted, will usually meet the case. It may be given in doses of from five to sixty drops in rare instances. It should, however, never be given in larger quantities than twenty minims unless the patient is thoroughly accustomed to the remedy and has found the usual dose insufficient.

Other wise there is danger of getting the physiological effect of the drug, which is pain at the base of the brain. When this symptom makes its appearance the medicine should be discontinued for a day or two and then given in reduced doses.

There seems to be no danger whatever of forming the habit of taking this drugs, as it can be suddenly abandoned at any time without evil consequences, even when given in large quantities.

In one case it was prescribed in sixty drop doses, night and morning, for one year and then abruptly stopped.

Nothing being substituted therefore without bad effects. Whenever a quick action is desired and in all cases where Avena is given to overcome the morphine habit, it should be prepared in hot water. It is also a good plan to prescribe it in this fashion wherever indigestion complicates the case.

The writer has employed this drug in his private practice for a number of years with the most gratifying results. He has very rarely found it to fail when indicated and on account of his high opinion of the remedy he has taken great pleasure in thus bringing it prominently to the attention of the medical profession.

This is an Indian remedy from very ancient times. The bark, known as Margosa Bark is the best-known medicinal portion and the tincture for the provings were made from this bark by Dr. P. C. Majumdar. Azadirachta Indica is a large tree.

The leaves, bark, wood, roots, fruits and every part of this tree, are intensely bitter. The vast range of its action is chiefly due to azaserine, margocine and catechin, the three active principles found in this tree.

The following synopsis of Azadirachta Indica is contributed by P. C. Majumdar of Calcutta, India.

According to Ayurveda the Hindu System of Medicine, the different parts of this tree possess different medicinal properties. Sanskrit authors agree that Azadirachta Indica bark, though very disagreeable in taste is generally used with success.

A decoction of fresh leaves is used as a favorite wash to cure old ulcers of long standing. It removes within a short time the sloughs and promotes the healing. The fruit is purgative, demulcent and is used in some forms of skin disorders. A kind of oil is produced from the seed of ripe fruits and this oil is said to cure leprosy, eczema and some other obstinate skin diseases.

Nim is also praised by some of the allopathic physicians for its tonic, anti-septic, astringent and anti-periodic properties. Its action on fevers is well-known in India, the native physicians use Nim as the principal substance in their febrifuge medicines. It is especially useful in cases previously maltreated with quinine.

Bacillinum burnett

(tuberculosis nosode)
Pharmacy

Bac. A Tuberculosis Nosode. Bacillinum. A maceration made from a tubercular sputum. Historical dose: All potencies, 12c to 200c.

History

Bacillinum is a nosode of tuberculosis named and first described by Dr. Burnett, for whom it was prepared from tuberculosis sputum by Dr. Heath. As this preparation has been experimented with separately, its symptoms are given apart from the other nosodes of tuberculosis.

Dr. Cartier has found it particularly useful in cases where there was excessive mucopurulent bronchial secretion threatening to occlude the lungs. It must be compared with Bacillinum testium, Tuber. Bovinum, Tuber. Aviaire and Tuber. Koch.

Dr. Burnett has shown that ringworm of the scalp and pityriasis versicolor on the body are indications of tubercular diathesis and they respond to this remedy. He cured a case of insanity with ringworm.

Tuberculosis patients are better in dry sunny climates in mountains areas and in the pine forests. Sunlight helps to prevent tuberculosis, also there has been many cures of tuberculosis via sunbathing and the milk diet, which these patients crave.

Homeopathic

Bacillinum has been used for the treatment of tuberculosis. Its good effects seen in the change of the sputum, which becomes decreased and less purulent. Tubercular meningitis. It has a disposition to catch colds and sore throats. Respiratory and lung weakness. Chronic reoccurring sore throats and coughs. Glands of the neck are enlarged and tender. Night-sweats.

Bacillinum is indicated for weak lungs of elderly people and for children with chronic catarrhal conditions and attacks of suffocation at night with difficult cough. Suffocative catarrh. Ringworm. The patient expectorates very little.

Chronic catarrhal conditions of the lungs when bronchial mucus and dyspnea are present. Tubercular meningitis. Useful as an intercurrent remedy.

Clinical

Addison's disease. Alopecia. Bronchitis. Coughs. Colds. Growth, defective. Hydrocephalus. Idiocy. Insanity. Joints disorders. Meningitis. Pityriasis. Pyorrhea. Ringworm. Scrofulous glands. Sore throats. Teeth, defective, pitted. Tonsillitis. Tuberculosis.

Comments

In the provings, Bacillinum produced a severe headache, deep in, worse by motion, was a constant symptom, also a slight cough with easy expectoration of phlegm. In cases of acute tuberculosis it has not done so well as in more chronic cases.

Also they are leading indications for it when present in combination with other disorders. A case of insanity with pityriasis yielded rapidly to the remedy. Pityriasis has been cured by it when all attempts to kill the body-lice by chemicals were useless.

Dr. Young has recorded the cure of several cases of cretinism. An inter-current course of Bacillinum will often make a wonderful change in patients who have a personal or family history of chest disorders.

Clarke has found an eczematous condition of the margins of the eyelids a strong indication for it. It is a miasmatic remedy of vast importance.

Grimmer uses it for cases stemming from a tubercular inheritance with extreme soreness of affected parts, patients of rheumatic tendencies with syphilitic taints in the bloodstream, general muscular soreness.

Herbal

Peruvian Balsam is also used externally for killing scabies. All parts affected are gently rubbed with it at night and a bath taken in the morning. A single application is sufficient. It has been proved by Lembke. Hale has used it with success in "chronic, purulent, fetid anterior or posterior nasal catarrh with or without ulceration." He says that a cerate of the Balsam is the best application next to Glycerol of Aloes for indolent ulcers, cracked nipples, cracks in fingers and palmar surfaces of hands or fissured and chapped lips.

Peruvian Balsam is used locally as a stimulant to raw surfaces in indolent ulcers, scabies, cracked nipples. Promotes granulation, removes the fetid odor. A one per cent solution in alcohol or ether may be used with the atomizer in respiratory disorders. Internally it is used as an expectorant in chronic bronchitis. Planets: Mercury.

Homeopathic

Peruvian Balsam has been chiefly used empirically in catarrhal tuberculosis or bronchial catarrh with copious purulent expectoration. Sputa thick, creamy, yellowish white, loud rales, night sweats, hectic.

Bapt-c. Baptisia confusa acetica. Australian Baptisia. N. O. Leguminosae. Acetum of stem and leaves. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies.

History

A case simulating typhoid was rapidly relieved by the remedy, showing its relation to Bapt. tinct. Planets: Mercury.

Homeopathic

Pain in the right jaw and oppression in left hypochondrium, producing dyspnea and necessity to assume erect position.

Clinical

Headache. Oppression. Spleen pain. Typhoid. Vision, defective.

Comments

J. Meredith communicated his experience with this shrub. The symptoms produced on himself were: Congestion of fore part of head. Vision weak. Hectic flush after tea. Right molar felt too long, worse by pressure intermittent, right jaw (later both jaws) stiff and

But the most remarkable effect was the relief of a distressing symptom which has troubled him many months and which the ordinary Bapt. tinct. in any preparation had failed to relieve. He describes it as "a really distressing left hypochondrium oppression, fullness and actual dyspnea, impelling me to assume an erect position."

This would continue half the night. It was uninfluenced by eating. The distress was located either in the spleen or splenic curve of the colon. The Bapt-c. seemed to relieve the part very rapidly, causing something to move to the left and downwards after which he went to sleep.

Baptisia tinctoria

(wild indigo)

Pharmacy

Bapt. Baptisia tinctoria. Wild Indigo N. O. Leguminosae. United States. Tincture of fresh root and its bark. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture to 30c.

Herbal

Wild Indigo of America has its reputation as a remedy for typhoid fever.

In low potency it increases the resistant power of the body against typhoid. In one case, that of an old man, food could be swallowed and retained some days, but not on others. He had always liked very hot food. The esophagus was red and granular. Bapt. 12c cured.

Hale considers it specific in threatened miscarriage from mental depression, shock of bad news, watching, fasting or low septic fevers. Patients in these conditions often complain of "dreadful sinking at the stomach," fetid breath and other symptoms of Baptisia.

Many cases of tuberculosis are relieved by this remedy when the symptom and type of fever correspond. It has cured hysteria with prostration, numbness and fear of paralysis, wanted to die, rubbed hands continually, restlessness. Planets: Mars, Saturn.

Homeopathic

Baptisia tinctoria has the ill effects of anti-typhoid serum vaccinations. It affects the blood, causing septic conditions, like low fevers and malaria poisoning. The symptoms of this remedy are of an asthenic type, simulating low fevers, septic conditions of the blood, malarial poisoning and extreme prostration.

Restlessness, does not sleep quietly, wants to be on the move. Indescribable sick feeling all over. Tired, bruised, sick feeling in all parts of the body. Great languor, wants to lie down. Weak and tremulous, as if recovering from a severe illness. Prostration with disposition of fluids to decompose.

Great muscular soreness and putrid states are present. All the secretions are offensive-breath, stool, urine, sweat, etc. Indescribable sick feeling.

Another disease in which it has proved specific in a large number of cases is epidemic influenza. The besotted look, bleary eyes, aching head, sore throat, pains and soreness all over the body and profound prostration.

These indicate Baptisia before any other remedy. Chronic intestinal toxemia of children with fetid stools and belchings. Feeling of soreness, heaviness and aching of muscles is very marked. Prostration is rapid, bed feels too hard on account of soreness of muscles, yet he feels too weak to move. Mucus membranes that become dark. Discharges, stools, hemorrhages etc. are dark in color.

Numbness prickling and paralytic feeling over the whole body, especially left side.

Ulceration of the mucous membranes, especially of the mouth with tendency to putrescence.

Modalities

Worse from open air, cold wind, autumn. Worse hot weather, humid heat, fog indoors.

Worse from pressure. Worse on waking, worse walking.

Clinical

Appendicitis. Bilioussness. Brain softening. Cancer. Diphtheria. Dysentery. Enteric fever. Esophagus, stricture. Eye disorders. Gallbladder disorders. Gastric fever. Headaches, bilious. Hectic fever. Hysteria. Influenza. Mumps. Miscarriage, threatened. Plague.

Fagus sylvatica

Beech

(bach flower remedy)

Pharmacy

Beech. Fagus sylvatica. The remedy is prepared by the boiling method. Small twigs and male and female flowers, they are found on the same tree, are boiled for half an hour. The boiled water is strained and used as medicine.

Historical dose: Take two drops from the stock bottle into a one ounce dropper bottle, (add brandy or alcohol, if this bottle will be used for days or weeks). This is the dosage bottle, take a few drops straight into the mouth or as needed in a little water or juice.

Herbal

Together with the remedies Rock Water, Vine, Vervain and Chicory, this remedy belongs to Bach's group of Over-care for Others' Welfare. These five remedies deal with attitudes of control and over-care towards others. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

People in need of Beech may appear haughty and rigid in body posture, in some cases, frequently raised eyebrows can be observed. Fault-finding, criticism and intolerance are predominant traits. The attitude may also be less condescending, more nagging and dissatisfied.

In the treatment of persecutory delusions or paranoid personality disorders, Beech lessens the tendency to overly criticize others and fit them into a specific image with threatening features (Holly, Willow).

Symptoms

MIND

The mind is narrowed in perception, tolerance and judgment, although one believes oneself to have the right attitude and capacity for assessment. This results in self-deception. The ego raises itself above others with the self-appointed right to assume critical judgment on another's expression of life. It is a state of arrogance, an attempt to impress upon others one's own standards of assessment considered special or perfect.

Judging others creates superiority and those criticized are held low, condescended against. Oftentimes, one actually does not want them to measure up to one's own perfect style, so that one may continue to consider oneself special. The mind does not want others to move up in standard and it gives more personal satisfaction to keep them in their place.

There is often an underlying sadness, a personal loss of a more perfect reality that is mourned. To have personal perfect standards and finding reality wanting implies a loss, a sense of being let down. In many cases, if grief was not allowed to be fully worked through there may develop a Beech state. The event or person is criticized or rejected, instead of mourned.

Belladonna

(deadly nightshade)

Pharmacy

Bell. Belladonna. Atropa belladonna. Deadly Nightshade. N. O. Solanaceae. Greece, Italy, Britain. Tincture of whole plant when beginning to flower. Historical dose: All potencies, first to thirtieth potency and higher.

History

Belladonna acts primarily on the brain and the diversity of its action on men and animals.

On goats and rabbits it has no poisonous action whatever. On carnivorous animals it acts with moderate intensity. On man it acts with highest intensity.

Cases of Belladonna poisoning have frequently been mistaken for cases of scarlatina. But it is the smooth form only, these presenting a smooth, even, red surface that come under its controlling action and prophylaxis. When such an epidemic is about, any one who may be exposed to infection may obtain almost certain immunity by taking Belladonna two or three times a day.

A striking picture of Bell. is sometimes seen in cases of worm-fever. A case of a pale, feeble child aged 3 reported by Lutze had the following symptoms:

Awakened or at least sits up at night in bed screaming, cannot be pacified, wets bed at night, passes worms now and then, cheeks and ear-tips brilliant scarlet, other parts of face, especially round mouth, white as snow, eyes brilliant, staring, pupils dilated. Skin dry and hot like fire. On being spoken to flew into a violent rage. Cina 200c had ameliorated. Belladonna 100,000c cured permanently.

Corresponds to the symptoms of "air-sickness" in aviators. Give as preventive. Belladonna has cured a very severe headache in a nervous man occurring whenever he was exposed to tobacco smoke.

Homeopathic

Belladonna acts upon nerve centers producing twitching, convulsions and pain. Belladonna produces an active congestion, furious excitement, perverted special senses, twitching, convulsions and pain. It has a marked action on the vascular system, skin and glands.

Belladonna stands for violence of attack and suddenness of onset. Belladonna is often associated with hot, red skin, flushed face, dilated pupils, throbbing carotids, excited mental state, hyperesthesia of all senses, delirium, restless sleep, convulsive movements, dryness of mouth and throat with aversion to water, neuralgic pains that come and go suddenly. (Oxyt.)

Belladonna effects are sudden and violent. Burning heat, bright redness and dryness are very marked. Hot, body, part, discharges etc. Redness occurs in streaks. severe neuralgic pain, that comes and goes suddenly. Fullness, congestion especially to head and swelling are other characteristic features. Pains are throbbing, sharp, cutting, shooting or clawing of maddening severity, coming and going in repeated attacks. Discharges are hot and scanty.

Comments

An enormous number of the symptoms of Bell. are developed in and from the head and sensorium. Conformably with this, the pains of Bell. run downwards, i.e. , away from the head. (Sil. and Gels. have a pain running up the back).

To understand right the action and uses of this great medicine it is necessary to bear in mind some leading features which characterize its action in all parts of the organism.

The several points to be remembered about Belladonna are that it is a medicine which has great general sensitiveness and also sensitiveness of the special senses, sensitive to light to slightest noise to motion or jar as when some one touches the bed. This is one feature which renders Bell. so appropriate in hydrophobia.

It is a chilly medicine, sensitive to changes from warm to cold to drought of air to damp weather to chilling from having the head uncovered or having the hair cut, better from being wrapped up warmly in a room.

Under this remedy there is a remarkable quickness of sensation or of motion, the eyes snap and move quickly. The pains come and go suddenly no matter how long they may last. They are in great variety, but throbbing, burning and stabbing are very characteristic: "stabbing from one temple to the other."

The great intensity and variety of the head pains has caused Bell. to be regarded as the headache medicine par excellence. Congestion of blood to the head. Vertigo, mostly at night on turning over in bed or when getting up in the morning, also when walking and on every change of position.

Headache with flushed face and brilliant eyes, dilated pupils. Feeling in brain like swashing of water.

Throbbing, pulsating headache with beating arteries and violent palpitation of the heart.

In the mental sphere are mania, rage, disposition to bite, scratch and tear things.

Fantastic illusions when closing eyes. Dull and sleepy, half asleep and half awake.

Spasms and twitchings are very marked.

Many disorders of vision. Heat, redness and burning are three great characteristic notes of Bell. and are constantly cropping out in the pathogenesis.

The face is purple, red and hot or yellow. Redness and pallor alternate. The mouth is exceedingly dry without thirst. Stinging in esophagus, worse swallowing or talking. Esophagus feels contracted. Sensation of a hand clutching intestines. Stool in lumps like chalk. Spasmodic contraction of anus, obstinate constipation.

Bleeding hemorrhoids, back pains as if breaking. The menstrual flow is hot of light color or bad smell.

Cough short, dry, tickling, similar to cough of Rumex and Phos. Whooping cough with crying or pains before the attack, flushed face, nosebleed and bloody expectoration, sparks before eyes, stitches in spleen involuntary stool and urine. Paralysis of lungs and heart (vagus nerve). Violent palpitation of heart.

Stitches in chest. Swellings of breast with bright red streaks radiating from center of inflammation. Rheumatism worse by motion. Sweat on covered parts only.

A very general characteristic of Bell. is worse on lying down. It refers to headache and all kinds of inflammatory disorders. Some characteristic symptoms are: "Tenderness of abdomen, worse by least jar. Pressing downward as if contents of abdomen would issue through vulva, worse mornings often associated with pain in back as if it would break."

Starting, twitching or jumping in sleep. Moaning in sleep. "Sleepy, but cannot sleep."

The characteristic skin of Bell is: "Uniform, smooth, shining, scarlet redness, so hot that it imparts a burning sensation to the hand of one who feels it. Sweat on covered parts only" is also a marked symptom of Bell.

The almost absolute deafness in cases is noteworthy in connection with Dr. Cooper's cure of a very chronic case of deafness with single drop doses of Bell.

Bell. is predominantly a right-side medicine: right side of head, right eye, right ear, right face, right teeth, right hypochondrium, right chest, right upper limb, right lower limb.

The daisy is a flower which is repeatedly trodden upon and always comes up smiling afterwards. Being the "day's eye" may be the sign of its too early waking propensities.

Dr. Burnett is the chief authority for its homeopathic uses. "It acts very much like Arnica, even to the production of erysipelas." Comments

Bell-p. has marked action on female sexual organs, especially on engorged uterus and breasts. It relieves troubles of pregnancy: inability to walk, varicose veins. Fatigue from masturbation.

It is a pre-eminently left-side medicine, causes stitches in spleen. It has produced acne, boils, rheumatic pains, giddiness. Headache from occiput to front, contracted feeling in front brain. A pain in inner side of right arm as if a boil were developing.

A leading indication is found in its causation: Ill-effects of sudden wet chill to heated stomach or body surface. This may be taken as a keynote: "effects of cold or iced drinks when heated," dyspepsia, amenorrhea, skin disorders (including a striking case of psoriasis), rheumatism from this cause.

Near and remote effects of blows, falls, accidents (trauma). It causes a tired feeling with desire to lie down. As a remedy for debility following acute attacks of gout Burnett gives it a very high place, classing it with Vanadium of which it is a complement in degenerative states, as brain softening and atheroma of arteries.

Bell-p. has been observed to cause dilatation of the pupil when used locally. It is well not to give it near bed time, as it is apt to cause sleeplessness. Waking at 3 a.m.

Also "waking up too early in the morning and cannot get to sleep again" is a leading indication for its use.

Then came a peculiar headache, strong compression, as if a band of iron two inches wide passed entirely round head just above ears. It kept growing tighter and tighter. Strong black coffee relieved this after a time, but left him tremulous in nerves and unsteady in gait.

Even after that a single drop of Berb-a. on the tongue was sufficient to avert an attack of biliousness when threatening and saved him much trouble of the kind to which he had formerly been liable. Clarke has verified its usefulness in secondary syphilis.

Berberis vulgaris

(barberry)

Pharmacy

Berb. Berberis vulgaris. Barberry. N. O. Berberidaceae. Britain. Tincture of the bark of the root. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture to sixth potency.

Herbal

The usual preparations of Berberis vulgaris are made from the root bark. Affections of liver and kidneys are strongly marked, but Berb. is a medicine of wide range. On the indication "tumors and sessile growths," Ozanam cured a case of polyps of vocal cords, red with a sessile base, Thuj had failed.

Berb. 200c was given at first with good effect, the potency being gradually reduced with increasingly good effect until the growth disappeared entirely under the 1x.

B. Simmons has verified a symptom of Berb. A gentleman of 52 complained of rheumatic pains in his legs and loss of walking power. After he had walked a short distance he was compelled to stop from a feeling of intense weariness, heaviness, lameness and stiffness of the legs, which felt sore as if bruised.

A single dose effected a complete cure, improvement commencing on the fourth day.

Stuart Close records the cure with Berb. 200c of a woman who had cutting, burning pains in the balls of the feet on stepping. On standing with most of the weight on the heels she had no pain. On rising in morning sensation in soles as if stepping on needles.

Homeopathic

Berb. is often useful in arthritic and hepatic disorders with urinary, hemorrhoidal or menstrual complaints. Venous stasis occurs in pelvic region, causing hemorrhoids. Berberis vulgaris acts upon urinary organs, when there is tendency to the formation of kidney stones. Berberis vulgaris causes inflammation of kidneys with hematuria. Pain in region of kidneys is most marked, hence its use in kidney and bladder troubles, gallstones and bladder catarrh.

The emission of urine is frequently accompanied by pains in thighs and loins. Sharp or tearing, bubbling pains in region of kidneys, worse stooping and rising again, sitting or lying, better standing. Violent sticking pains in bladder, extending from kidneys into urethra with urging to urinate.

Many cases of severe pains from kidney stones have been cured by Berb. Frequent urging to urinate. Urine is dark yellow and red, becoming turbid, copious, mucous sediment or transparent, jelly-like or reddish, bran-like sediment. Urine slimy when passed, depositing copious foamy yellowish sediment. Greenish urine depositing mucus.

During urination burning in urethra or bladder, pressure in bladder, cutting, burning or stitches in urethra. Dragging or sharp pains in spermatic cord, extending into testes.

Berb. has pains are radiating from one point, shooting outward or all over, sticking, burning, smarting, soreness. Pains rapidly change their locality and character. Pains may be felt all over body, emanating from small of back. Spinal irritation. Cold feeling in prepuce, glans, testes and scrotum.

Movement aggravates its complaints. Stitches are frequent and a bubbling sensation or bubbling and stitches are characteristic. A bubbling feeling as if water were coming up through the skin. Tearing, burning pains or bubbling sensation in joints.

Berb. affects the liver markedly, promotes the flow of bile, therefore it is a useful remedy for fleshy persons with good livers, but with little endurance. Sticking pain in region of liver and gallbladder shooting up to left shoulder, worse by pressure. Gall-stone colic, followed by jaundice.

Rapid changes of symptoms. Pains change in regard to place and character. Thirst alternates with thirstless, hunger and loss of appetite. Chills and fever are among the prominent effects of Berb. Coldness of body with hot face, commencing 11 a.m. , burning heat in afternoon, worse during night.

Beryllium metallicum

Pharmacy

Beryl. Beryl. Beryllium metallicum. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, 6x to 30c.

History

Beryllium, a light metal closely resembling Aluminium, was isolated in 1828 by Bussy, thirty-one years after Vauquelin's discovery of the oxide which he named glucinum, because of the sweet taste of its salts. Beryl exists in America and especially in Columbia, Madagascar, Russia and in France.

The extraction of the metal is made from the iron ore, beryl, which is ground and roasted, usually with sodium fluoro-silicate. The double fluoride of Be and Na thus obtained is transformed into beryllium oxyfluoride. The metal is isolated by electrolysis in the presence of barium. Oxidized beryllium can also be treated with sulfuric acid and transformed into Be sulphate from which glucinium is extracted, the latter can be used directly in the manufacture of alloys or to pure Be after treatment by ammonium fluoride.

Workers are exposed, at different stages of preparation to the inhalation of fine particles of dust and noxious fumes, formed particularly by fluoride derivatives as well as derivatives of glucinium.

The usefulness of the remedy should be noted for kidney stones with hyper-production. It is especially a remedy for respiratory deficiency with audible heartbeat. Planets: Mercury, Saturn.

Comments

Accidents can occur during the crushing process and the thermal treatment necessary to produce these powders, when they are introduced into the tubes by different methods or if these tubes should break when being used. Beryllium is also used in the manufacture of light-bulbs, radio and TV sets incandescent casings, glass-making and ceramics and synthetic precious stones.

The fixation is above all made in the ethmoid bones and is permanent. It is of the same nature and rapidity in the liver and kidneys, but less prolonged. Elimination is brought about through the urine, at first rapid and profuse, then slow and sparse.

In a subject who died from berylliosis, Martland revealed spectrographically that beryllium was present, especially in the kidneys and skeleton.

Chronic berylliosis is essentially caused by its insoluble compounds, especially beryllium, zinc manganese silicate, dangerous because of their fumes and even more so because of their dust particles, even at a rate lower than half a milligram per cubic meter.

The finer the dust particles, the more noxious they are. These form veritable aerosols, which spread over a distance (which explains cases near factories) and which impregnate working clothes easily (this explains cases in the family, resulting from brushing the clothes).

Here, it is the element which is toxic, it caused proliferation in the mesenchyme, which ends in the formation of alveolar granuloma. This in turn causes difficulty in the diffusion of oxygen through the alveolar walls with subsequent anoxemia.

The Homeopathic symptomatology was undertaken by Templeton in 1951-52 on seven provers, using the following potencies: 3x, 6x, 7x, 12x, 30c. Some symptoms can be attributed to the fluorine if it is a question of impure beryllium containing beryllium fluoride.

Bismuth-sn. (+ -o.) (old abbr.)

Pharmacy

Bism. Bismuth subnitricum. The oxidum of Hahnemann and Kent. Precipitated Sub-Nitrate of Bismuth. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, first to sixth potency.

History

Bismuth including the Sub-nitrate was used by the Alchemists to prepare the "Magistrate of Bismuth" .

According to Teste, Bism. corresponds to slow digestion with fetid belchings. It is hardly ever indicated where belchings are not odorous or sour. Stomach pain is accompanied by habitual constipation without vomiting or with vomiting of insipid ropy mucus. The stools are preceded by crampy, pinching pains in the stomach.

Teste cured with the oxide a wearing, nightly cough in a hysteric lady and a case of sub-acute cystitis with irregular paroxysms of crampy pains in the bladder, also a case of phlegmasia alba dolens (left), Petroz having cured another.

O. W. Smith has verified: "Pain in stomach, better bending backward and eructation, tasting of food eaten twenty-four hours before." Planets: Moon.

Comments

Anshutz records these cases: (1) A young man, aged thirty-four, had been suffering from asthma for some years. He was invariably worse during the rains and the winter and chronic bronchitis was almost a constant accompaniment. He tried allopathic and lots of patent drugs with only temporary amelioration of the trouble. At last in November, 1888, he came to my office.

On examination of his chest I found there was a chronic bronchitis. He said that slight difficulty of breathing with hacking cough used to trouble him every night, besides a cold would be followed by a severe attack of asthma, so its periodicity of recurrence was irregular. I treated him with Ipecac, Arsenicum alb., etc. The first-named medicine did him the most good, but he never got entirely well.

In July, 1889 I put him under tincture Blatta orientalis 3x, drop doses, three or four times daily. Under its use he began to improve steadily and had only two or three attacks of asthmatic fits since he used this drug, which were promptly relieved by the same drug in 1x potency.

Euphrasia off. was prescribed for his cold whenever he had it. He is free from all trouble for the last year and a half. His general condition is so much changed that there is no apprehension of the recurrence of his former illness.

(2) A shoemaker, aged forty-two, robust constitution, has been suffering with asthma for three or four years. He came to my office on the 6th of November, 1890. He had been getting asthmatic fits almost every night since October last. During the day a troublesome cough comes with slight expectoration and hurried breathing, made him unable to attend his business.

Tincture Blatta orientalis Ix, one drop doses, six times daily, was given. The very first day he perceived the good effect of the medicine and continued the same for a month, when he got well and discontinued the medicine. He has been keeping well ever since.

(3) A gentleman, the keeper of a common shop, aged forty-four, belonging to a village, had been suffering from asthma for the last eight years and had always been under treatment of native kabiraj (medical men). In June, he came to the city and I was called to see him on the 14th of June to treat him for his asthma. The day previous he had an attack, for which he took no medicine. Each of his attacks usually lasted four or five days.

I gave him Blatta orientalis Ix trituration., one grain every two hours and left him six such powders to be taken during the day. He took them and felt better the next day. He stayed here two or three days more and when well he wanted to proceed home, which was some couple of hundred miles. He took with him two drachm phials of Blatta orientalis, one of Ix and the other of 3x trituration. He continued the 3x, one grain doses, two or three times daily, for a month and discontinued afterward. He had no more asthmatic fits.

In January last, 1891, I had a letter from him, thanking me for his recovery and asking for some of the same medicine for a friend of his, who had been suffering from asthma. The friend of his who used the same drug, Blatta orientalis, was equally benefited.

(4) Mrs. Datta, a thin lady, aged thirty-eight, mother of several children, had been exposed to cold, which brought on an attack of bronchitis with fever. This in the course of a fortnight, developed into a regular fit of asthma.

She was all this time treated by an old school physician, but when the husband of the lady saw that she was daily getting Worse and a new disease crept in, he made up his mind to change the treatment, I was called to see her in the morning of the 8th of June, 1890.

She became very much emaciated, could not take any food, had fever with acute bronchitis, hurried respiration, difficulty of breathing, this she was complaining of bitterly, owing to which she could not lie down in bed, but had to sit up day and night. There was a prolonged fit of spasmodic cough at short intervals with slight expectoration, but these coughing fits would make her almost breathless.

This was the first time I prescribed Blatta orientalis Ix in a case of asthma with fever and acute bronchitis. It answered my purpose well. She had only ten powders during the day and passed a comparatively better night. Next morning when I saw her she was Better except the coughing fits, which were continuing as before. The same medicine was repeated.

On the 10th of June she had no asthmatic trouble at night, but there was not much improvement in her cough Ant-t. and Bry. were needed to complete the cure.

Comments

Anshutz writes of these cases: (1) Intermittent fever: Type Quotidian Duplex. In a large lymphatic woman, weight about 180 lbs., aged thirty-nine. November 4th. For the last five weeks has had the ague. At first it was simple quotidian. Took quinine, which broke it for four days, when it returned took quinine in massive doses, which checked it for one week.

It returned two weeks since in the form of a double quotidian. The chill comes on every day at 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. The chill lasts from one to two hours each time, hands and feet get icy cold, chills run up and down the spine with severe pains in the head, back and limbs, followed by high fever for three hours and then profuse sweat.

Tongue furred whitish yellow with large fissures in the tongue, flat, bitter taste, has had no appetite for five weeks, craves cold water all the time, bowels rather costive, has nausea during every chill, but no vomiting, very weak, can only sit up about one hour in the morning, great depression, cried during the whole examination, face very much jaundiced.

Treatment: Ars. 2c, every two hours, for three days. It produced constant nausea and lessened the chills, but aggravated the fever. I then determined to try the Boletus 1c, two grains every two hours. Took two doses when the chills came on, she then ceased to take the medicine until 5 p.m. Took three doses and then fell asleep. 8th. She says she is feeling a little Better continued treatment, 10 a.m. , commenced to have a severe diarrhea, an effect of the medicine, discontinued the powders until 5 p.m.

The fever did not come on until 3 p.m. , had no chill, fever lasted three hours, perspired profusely all night, slept well for the first time in a number of weeks. 9th. Feeling much better. Fever came on at 4 p.m. , had no chill, fever lasted four hours, nausea all the evening, sweat all night. 10th. Feeling quiet well. Had no more fever, but had night sweats for a week after. Convalescence was very slow, she had no more fever it was three weeks before she felt perfectly well.

This case demonstrated the fact to us that the Boletus is superior to our greatest remedial agents in the case of intermittent fevers. I believe if I had not been acquainted with the therapeutic properties of the Boletus I would have been compelled to treat this lady every few weeks for two or three months with our usual remedies.

(2) Intermittent fever: Type quotidian. November first, Mrs. B., aged fifty-six. Temperament nervous. Three weeks since had an abscess in left ear, which made her quite sick for a week. Since then has had fever every afternoon and night, feels chilly whenever she moves, walking produces nausea, does not perspire any tongue coated white, loss of appetite, bowels loose, very restless at night, cannot sleep any, getting very weak, keeps her bed most of the time. Gave Boletus laricis. Had the fever but one day after.

Boricum acidum

(boric acid)

Pharmacy

Bor-ac. Boricum acidum. Boric Acid. Solution of crystals in alcohol. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third trituration.

History

Bor-ac. has been largely used as an anti-septic dressing for wounds, as a lotion for the eyes and for whitlow and as a wash in catarrh of the bladder. It is much less irritating than Carbolic acid. But it also has produced skin eruptions.

In the 3x potency Cooper has found it give great relief in menopausal flushings. In connection with the skin effects may be mentioned the case of a woman who took grains 30 per day of the Boric acid for a month, when there appeared a multiform erythema of trunk extending to upper limbs, at the same time there appeared a painful swelling of upper lids with conjunctivitis and photophobia.

Finally the edema was so intense as to close the eyes and give the appearance of sclerosed tissue. The symptoms began to abate when the Bor-ac. was discontinued and disappeared in a week. Planets: Venus.

Homeopathic

Formication of hands and feet, later of face. Sad spirits, great nervous depression.

Burning skin, it became swollen and charred and all motions was painful. One case went into collapse, temperature subnormal, sighing and weeping by turns. The patients were cold, vagina felt "cold as if packed with ice." Coldness is a prominent feature, as cold saliva.

History

Clarke states "This globular fungus, which, according to report is eaten in Italy before it is ripe, becomes filled, while ripening with a black dust that breaks the husk which contains it with a slight noise."

Corresponding to this signature, "bloated, puffy condition of body surface," and a sense of "enlargement," flatulent distention and noisy passage of flatus, are leading features of the Bov. pathogenesis.

"We may always think of Bov. when we see a very 'tettery' person, one who has tetter here and there, all over the body. These tetter may be either moist or dry" (Guernsey).

M. L. Sircar has recorded a striking cure of such a case with Bov. 3x, the pain being griping-twisting intermittent, starting below umbilicus and diffusing itself towards epigastrium, some constipation, urine scanty and reddish. Nothing gave relief except eating. "Itching at top of coccyx" is another characteristic symptom.

Bov. has cured cases of ovarian cyst and also warts and corns with shooting pains.

Homeopathic

The puff ball, exerts its influence on the circulation, causing relaxation of capillary system, thereby producing hemorrhagic diathesis.

There is a general puffiness, bloated condition of body surface, which produces easy indentations with blunt instrument (scissors etc.).

A case of cyst in the broad ligament was cured, with these symptoms: Metrorrhagia, flow at night or early morning, easily provoked from slight over-exertion during menses, can bear nothing tight round body, menses preceded and followed by diarrhea, acrid corrosive leucorrhoea, flowing at night only, follows menses.

Teste observed psoric eruptions appear on the hands and feet of a patient to whom he gave Bov. for headache. He cured with it a "red, crusty eruptions on thighs and bends of knees of eighteen years' duration. It disappeared for weeks, reappearing in hot weather and at the full moon.

W. S. Gee cured with Bovista 4c after the failure of Rhus-t., the following case. A widow, 55, had an eruption, which she thought to be erysipelas, on right foot. Some years before she had an eruption on left foot, which discharged much water and was "cured" by the use of a salve.

Comments

This distinguishes Bry. from Bell. in pulmonary complaints. A case of intense pleurisy with high fever grew steadily worse under Bry. Until I noticed that the patient lay on the unaffected side. Bell. was then given and cured rapidly. Lying on the painful part keeps the part at rest. There is also an intense headache, dull throbbing or sharp stabbing pains, sharp pain in or over eyes. Head greasy, scalp tender, eyeballs tender.

Headache or neuralgia in (left) side of head and face, better from hard pressure and cold applications, worse moving.

Mouth very dry tongue coated white down the middle, the edges may be quite clean, later it becomes yellow with bitter taste, later, very dry, but still coated. If the fever is intermitting there is chill mixed with heat: during chill, head hot, cheeks deep red, decided thirst, generally for large quantities at long intervals, sweat worse by least motion, sour or oily. The lips are dry and cracked.

Facial eczema has been cured with it in an infant five months old, presenting these additional symptoms: Constipation, peevish, fretful, thirsty, face and lips are cracked and sore. The child scratched continually. The mother had a similar eruption for some years and it disappeared suddenly at the sixth month of her pregnancy.

The mucous membranes are very dry, especially those of the mouth and stomach, deficient secretion. The serous membranes are inflamed, the seat of sharp, stitching pains, worse from motion, later on, exudation occurs. The muscles likewise, are inflamed and sore. Irritability of mind and tissues runs through the remedy. Hemorrhages. In this connection it may be remembered that Bryonia dioica is a popular remedy for "black-eye" as a local application.

Nosebleeds, especially in the night, 3 to 4 a.m. , which is characteristic. This may or may not be preceded by a sense of fullness in the head. Nosebleeds consequent on suppression of the menses is characteristic. The characteristic mental state of Bry. is irritability. Easily angered with biliousness, headache, dyspepsia, etc. and it corresponds to the effects of anger, fright chagrin. The patient desires things to eat which cannot be had or are refused if offered.

In fever cases there is often a stupid, drowsy condition or mild delirium in which the patient has the delusion that he is somewhere else and "wants to go home."

The headache is dull, frontal or bursting, splitting, worse by any motion or by the concussion of cough, goes from before backward. The headache of alcoholics of over-feeding. Nausea and faintness when rising up, better when lying still.

Bry. is a gourmand (Nux-v. an epicure), dirty wash-leather, foul tongue, congested eyes, bitter nausea. Bry. is a coarse feeder. Food lies at the epigastrium like a stone, better bringing up wind. The digestion is worse in summer. Symptoms worse after a meal. There is intolerance of vegetable food. Everything tastes bitter. Thirst for large quantities. "Belchings of tasteless gas" is characteristic. Sour stomach.

Van den Berghe has found Bry. signally curative in chlorosis. There is diarrhea and constipation. Diarrhea occurs: in the morning "as soon as he moves" from cold drinks in warm weather, on every spell of hot weather. The usual Bry. state is one of constipation, there is the usual dryness of mucous membranes, atony of the bowels, stool large, dry, hard, brown or black, as if burnt or charred, crumbling. (Plat. has sticky, tenacious stool, sticks to rectum.) Stools smell of old cheese.

The liver is tender and inflamed. The kidneys also are inflamed, the urine being dark red without deposit (from excess of coloring matter). Mastitis, hard, tender. Left ovarian pain, better lying on painful side. The respiratory organs and heart are profoundly affected. Dropsical swellings, swellings of the legs, sensitive to touch. "Joints red, swollen, stiff with stitching pain from slightest motion." Synovial swellings.

Clarke has cured a case of congenital hydrocele with Bry. The Bry. patient dreams of the occupations of the day. The child kicks the covers off. Speech is hasty. "Frequent desire to take a long breath, must expand the lungs" is a characteristic.

The typical Bryonia patient is of dark complexion and hair, choleric, bilious tendency with firm fleshy fiber, tendency to great irritability and bad temper, but Bryonia has a wide range and no great stress must be laid on the absence of these features.

Teste takes Bryonia as the type of a group which includes All-s., Lyc., Dig., Nux-v., Coloc. and Ign. All these act with much more power on carnivorous than on herbivorous animals. They are thus appropriate to persons who over-eat or eat excessively of meat and have strong constitutions, "persons accustomed to rich living with rich blood, firm resisting flesh." Teste regards the digestive canal and more particularly the stomach, as the principal seat of the action of Bry. The burning thirst of Bry., is worse by drinking beer, he says, the gastric derangement of Bry. "absolutely requires water as a dissolvent."

A peculiar and characteristic symptom of Bryonia in brain disorders is: Constant motion of the mouth as if chewing. Toothache is better by pressing head into pillow, by cold applications. Chilliness predominates. Dry, burning heat as if blood burning in veins. Sweat profuse night and morning, sour or oily. Cough, headache, diarrhea worse in morning.

Bufo rana

(toad poison)

Pharmacy

Bufo. Bufo Rana. Bufo Satytiensis. N. O. Bufonide, Batrachide. Toad Poison. Including the common variety, Bufo rana and the Brazilian toad, Bufo Satytiensis, proved by Mure. Solution in rectified spirit of the poison expressed from the skin glands. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, sixth potency and higher.

History

Shakespeare, who seems to have known everything, was absolutely correct in speaking of the toad as having "sweltered venom." The poison is excreted by glands in the skin of the back. "Quintessence of toads" figured largely in the therapy of Salmon's Doron Medicon (1583), where it is commended as a "Specific in the Dropsy."

Homeopathic provings and poisonings have shown that this reputation is founded on fact.

The chief laurels of Bufo have been won in the treatment of epilepsy. Bojanus has cured many cases and no medicine has served better in the treatment of this disease. Few people who have witnessed a characteristic epileptic seizure can have failed to notice the curiously toad-like aspect assumed by the subject. The epileptic seizure and the status epilepticus give the clearest correspondence to the Bufo range of action.

Again, epilepsy is often found among the effects of self-abuse in the young and Bufo provokes the tendency to the practice and even causes impotence. The Indian women of Brazil are aware of this last property and administer the venom to their husbands in food or drink when they wish to free themselves from their marital attentions. Bufo causes low grades of inflammatory action, fetid exhalations and discharges. Clarke has removed the fetor in hopeless cases of cancer with this remedy.

L. Guthrie tells a story of an Italian peasant, apparently dying of dropsy, whose wife, weary of the interminable length of his illness, thought to hasten his end by putting a toad into his wine. The result was the man was completely cured.

E. E. Case has reported a cure with Bufo cinereus of "nosebleed daily for several weeks with flushed face, heat and pain in forehead better by the bleeding, there was also easy perspiration in general, apt to be offensive, especially on the feet."

Homeopathic

Bufo Rana the poison of this toad has a remarkable action on nervous system and sexual organs. Epileptic symptoms. Convulsive seizures occur during sleep at night. More or less connected with derangements of the sexual sphere, seem to come within the range of this remedy.

Injuries to fingers, pain runs in streaks up the arms. Septic lymphangitis, due to injuries, when pain runs up in streaks. Of use in feeble-minded children. Uterine symptoms marked. Causes a desire for intoxicating drink and produces impotence.

Bufo Rana is a remedy for depravities, due to bad inheritance. It arouses lowest passions, patient is not only low minded but develops low type of disease also. Early broken down, prematurely senile person. It affects circulation, causing heat flushings, burning in different parts.

Prematurely senile. Great weakness of memory, idiotic, extremely sensitive to light and noise, the latter is intolerable. Symptoms of Parkinson's disease. Striking rheumatic symptoms. It has also proved helpful in severe late cancer conditions. It has removed the fetor in hopeless cases of cancer.

Epileptic seizures, occur during night, connected with sexual sphere. Seizures at the time of menses in women when sexual desire is excited in young men due to onanism or during sex. Falls down unconscious with a blood curdling scream. Epileptic attacks are followed by headache. As if a peg in joint. Dropsy. Paralysis. Cancer, Carbuncle. Bubo.

According to Lippe Bufo is especially indicated in epilepsy when the attacks occur during sleep at night. The patient may or may not be awakened by the attack, if not, when he does awaken he will have violent headache.

Epileptic symptoms are worse in warm room, but there is also great sensitiveness to cold air and wind. Marked periodicity: quartan fevers. hemorrhages.

Buthus australis

(scorpion venom)

Pharmacy

Buthus Australis. Buthus Prionuris. Scorpion Venom. Buthus Australis is a scorpion belonging to the arthropod order of the arachnid class. The mother tincture is prepared from the scorpion venom. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, 6c to 30c.

History

The scorpions are insects distinguished by the division of their bodies into three sections: the head and thorax, the pre-abdomen (seven segments) of the same form as the head and thorax and the post-abdomen (six segments), mistakenly called the tail, which is very mobile and ends with a venomous curved sting.

The chelicerae have three joints, the last sections forming the pincers. The leg-jaws are very long and end in fat pincers. These animals are viviparous, carnivorous, feed on insects and spiders which they catch with their pincers and have a defense organ.

Azam first carried out a proving on himself, by taking one drop of pure venom orally. A second proving was undertaken by Azam and carried out with the help of eight provers (three women and five men), using the 6x potency for thirty days. Only four provers continued to the end of the thirty days. Planets: Mars.

Butyricum acidum

Pharmacy

But-ac. Butyricum acidum. Butyric Acid. A volatile acid obtained chiefly from butter, being found there in the form of an ester, a triglyceride and as such constitutes the chief fat of butter and milk. Butyric acid in pure condition is a strongly acid liquid, mixing with water in all proportions and having a boiling point of 163 degrees centigrade. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, 3x to 30c.

History

Butyric acid occurs in the animal organism under a variety of conditions. It is chiefly characteristic of butter, being found there in the form of an ester, a triglyceride and as such constitutes the chief fat of butter and milk. Butyric acid set free by fermentation is due a rancid taste and odor of contaminated butter.

When milk sours, milk sugar is converted into lactic acid by the lactic ferment of various bacteria. The lactic acid is then acted upon by butyric acid ferment contained in the air. It may be present in the gastric contents under abnormal conditions, with a markedly diminished hydrochloric acid secretion. In excessive fermentation in the enteric tract butyric acid may be formed in significant amounts. Planets: Jupiter.

Comments

The following provings were conducted at the Hahnemann Hospital of Philadelphia and upon students at that institution. The students took the 3c potency of the remedy every two hours and in all the proving was carried along approximately about seven weeks or more.

The remedy induces a peculiar effect on the superficial part of the body. It has a very pronounced and awfully malodorous foot-sweat. Students at the Hahnemann College often had to constantly change their socks, a thing quite foreign to the provers under normal conditions. It had another local effect and just as distinctive. It causes a crumbling away of the finger nails. This is very decided.

The backache, it is no exaggeration to say, was of the most aggravated kind. It lasted in the subjects of this experiment for days together.

A very reliable modality was that all symptoms are decidedly worse at night. This was as pronounced as the sleeplessness which the drug produced.

Compare

(2) Verat. - Prostration intense delirium, feeling of chill running over the whole body and cold sweating on forehead, hands and feet. Abdominal colic with copious diarrhea, followed by extreme weakness.

Cacao

(cocoa)

Pharmacy

Cacao. Theobroma cacao. Cocoa. N. O. Sterculiaceae. Tribe, Buettnerieae. Trituration of the seeds. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Allen states: In order to ascertain the effect of the active ingredients, contained in Cacao, (aromatic essences and theobromin) upon the nervous system, it was necessary to separate those ingredients, as far as possible from the fatty substances, (Butter of Cacao) of which the beans are so largely composed.

With this view, we prepared a decoction of powdered Cacao in boiling water and conducted our experiments with this liquid.

By placing ourselves under the influence of a decoction highly charged with aromatic principles and made from powdered Cacao well roasted, we ascertained that this beverage produces an excitement of the nervous system similar to that caused by a strong infusion of black coffee.

Since these effects are insignificant if a decoction of the raw bean is employed, it is natural to attribute them to the aromatic essences which are developed in the Cacao by the process of roasting.

A still wider difference is observed when we compare the effects on the circulation respectively produced by a decoction of powdered Cacao roasted and one of the same substance in a crude state. The former case indicated an excitement of the circulation, as shown by an accelerated pulse, with an increased fullness and diminished arterial pressure.

When, on the other hand, an infusion of the raw bean is made use of, the action of the theobromin predominates and an entirely different character of pulse is the result, as may be placed beyond doubt by examining the results, obtained from a single individual.

Planets: Jupiter.

Comments

In explaining the nutritive value of Cacao, we must take into account the presence in this substance of a special alkaloid, theobromin, whose physiological effects are identical with those of caffeine and thein. Which, retarding the organic waste in the same way as the active principles of coffee and tea, place Cacao high up among the preservative substances or those which check tissue-waste.

Cactus grandiflorus

Pharmacy

Cact. Cactus grandiflorus. Cactus Selenicereus. Night-blooming Cereus. Cereus grandiflorus. N. O. Cactaceae. Mexico and the West Indies. Tincture of youngest and tender stems and flowers collected in summer. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture to 30c potency.

Herbal

Given as a heart tonic this remedy will benefit a large number of cases of weakened and painful heart and if its keynote symptom of constriction: "As if an iron band had prevented its normal movements," or "heart as if compressed violently and as violently struggled to burst its bonds" is present, it will cure. Pain and numbness in left arm accompanying heart disease.

Cactus affects powerfully the entire organism, but its internal operation is on the heart and circulation. In congestive violence it rivals Acon., which is one of its antidotes. The pains are unendurable, they extort screams. Sadness, apprehension, fear of death and a tendency to be easily frightened characterize the Cactus mental state, as they do many conditions of heart disease.

Many symptoms are worse at night, the "Night-blooming Cereus".

Sharp pains in diaphragm and girdle pain round its attachment. Indigestion with these symptoms.

Snader considers Cactus specially indicated where the heart is weak and the arteries atheromatous. This is confirmed by a venerable correspondent of the Hom. World (July, 1898), who, finding his temporal arteries much swollen and hard to touch took several doses of Cact. 1x with the result that in a few days they became normal. Snader uses the lower potencies in this condition.

A case of angina pectoris was cured by the 30c with the following characteristic: sensation as though a swarm of hornets were going from pectoral region to heart.

Choudhury has reported a case cured, the characteristics being: "Chill severe, 11 a.m. , thirst, headache, body hot, no separate heat." When there is heat there is thirst and short breath. At times there is entire absence of sweat.

Homeopathic

Chief action of Cactus centers around the heart and circulation. Acts on the circular muscular fibers, hence constrictions. It is the heart and arteries especially that respond to the influence of Cactus. General weakness and prostration.

Cactus grandiflorus affects the circular muscles, thereby producing constricting pains in the heart, throat, chest, bladder, rectum, vagina, neck. Circulation becomes irregular, causing violent congestion or localized pulsations, behind stomach, at odd places.

Many complaints are associated with heart disorders. Atheromatous arteries and weak heart. Cactus affects the heart and arteries producing very characteristic constriction sensations, as from an iron band. This sensation is found in various places, the esophagus,

Pharmacy

Cadm-br. Cadmium bromide. Cadmium bromatum. Trituration or solution. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Cadm-br. must be compared with Cadm-s. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

There were three persons who have experimented with Cadm-br. It produced a burning sensation in mouth, gullet and stomach. In two ladies there was extreme pain and burning in stomach with vomiting. In one case, purging also, for five hours, with an imperceptible pulse.

After this the symptoms were better and sleep followed, but both were confined to bed for several days and one of them was afterwards subject to cerebral symptoms threatening a stroke.

Clinical

Heartburn. Indigestion. Strokes. Vomiting.

Comments

Allen states: I found both ladies vomiting severely and complaining of extreme pain and burning sensation in the stomach. Mrs. R. who also purging freely, though her daughter was not. The vomiting and purging lasted fully five hours and during a part of the time the pulse was imperceptible in either patient. After this period the symptoms ameliorated and they both fell asleep.

For several days they were both confined to their beds and were obliged to be extremely careful as to what they took into their stomachs. Mrs. R. has since suffered with some cerebral symptoms which betoken a tendency to strokes. A severe burning sensation in the mouth, esophagus and stomach, which lasted perhaps an hour.

Cadm-f. Cadmium flourata. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Grimmer writes: "Cadmium fluorata is a remedy that helped one case very much, a late case of cancer of the prostate. There was no question about the diagnosis, which was made by an eminent pathologist in Chicago. The patient was at the point of death.

I sent my assistant out to see him and get a blood sample. Every test showed the presence of cancer. I never saw this patient, so I didn't report the case, but the doctor informed me there was a big pulsating mass. He could feel it through the patient's rectum and said it was undoubtedly cancer, very far advanced. He didn't think the man would live more than a few days. Nevertheless, we gave him cadmium flour.

This man lived for a year and part of the time the function of the bladder was restored. He gave up his catheter for quite a while and subsequently used it only occasionally.

(cadmium iodine)

Pharmacy

Cadm-i. Cadmium iodatum. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Grimmer says this remedy is a powerful anti-syphilitic as well as anti-psoric and anti-sycotic. All the Cadmiums cover the three miasms of Hahnemann. Cadmium iodatum has an aggravation from extreme heat, as well as from extreme cold. As a rule, this patient becomes less chilled than when under the influence of other Cadmiums due to the iodine component of the remedy. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Cadmium iodatum is a great remedy for the glands. the cervical glands of the neck, the tonsils, the thyroid, the mammary glands, the entire lymphatic system, the testicles, and the ovaries.

The liver, the spleen, and the pancreas are sooner or later involved under the influence of this remedy. Itching of anus and rectum felt during the day only. Constipation. Frequent desire to stool, tenesmus. Abdomen bloated. Anal itching with constipation. Cancer of the glands with emaciation.

One distinctive mental symptom is hatred. Hates everybody and everything. Atheistic and hateful with a high degree of self-pity. As these symptoms, together with an ulceration of the transverse colon, cleared up, a patient under Cadm-i. lost his hatred, became quite human and kind, and gained greatly in weight.

Clinical

Cancer. Constipation. Ileus. Pruritis ani. Ulcerative colitis.

Cadmium metallicum

(metallic cadmium)

Pharmacy

Cadm-met. Cadmium met. Metallic Cadmium. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, 6x to 30c.

History

Cadmium met. and other chemical combinations of cadmium have proved curative in many cases of stomach and intestinal cancer. Many of these cases were caused by irritative actions of alumina toxin resulting from aluminum cooking utensils.

Recently the water supply of many of our cities and villages has been treated with aluminum fluoride, exposing the public to a potent carcinogenic agent that has the potential to activate the disease in all those with inherited tendencies to it.

Cadmium met. comes between zinc and mercury with an atomic weight of 48. The toxicology indicates vomiting, loss of appetite, emaciation. Sneezing and coughing with profuse secretion from the respiratory and ocular mucous membranes.

The first proving was carried out by Burdach in 1827 with a half grain and later by Petroz. The proving was undertaken again at the instigation of the International League of Homeopathy in 1947 and a report was set up Gutman in 1951.

The proving was made on thirty-eight provers, using the following potencies: 2c, 3c, 6x, 12x and 30c. The latter potency showed no pathogenetic action. In another connection, MacFarland made a proving on four female provers using the Skinner potencies, 10m and 50m. Templeton experimented on nine provers with 2c, Pahud on sixteen provers with 2c, 3c, 6x, 12x and 30x.

Homeopathic

Cadmium met. and Cadmium oxide are the most effective antidotes against the alumina toxins. Fatigue, with lassitude like influenza, dull aching all over. Nausea and vomiting.

The blood changes, anemia and the gastrointestinal tracts are especially affected by the alumina poison.

When absorbed by the lungs and intestines, cadmium causes lesions on the pulmonary and digestive epithelium.

Comments

Cadm-met. produces an impulsive irritability, skirting the verge of insanity in its violence, alternating with deep depression. Loathing of life, hopeless and apathetic, all joy is gone. This is a common mental complex in cancer patients. They are unable to concentrate, saying and doing the wrong things, such as putting salt in the tea instead of sugar. Vivid, unhappy dreams of sickness, causing worry after awakening. Averse to people, to certain kinds of music, to noise.

Odors and other unpleasant stimuli induce nausea even thinking of them may. Vertigo while looking at moving pictures, with a sensation of something taking the breath away. Objects recede and return.

Extreme, neuralgic headaches with maddening pressing pains throughout the head, extending to eyes and ears. Old ear discharge with ear pain. Violent vomiting attack with headache alternation of heat and coldness. Some pressing pains in the liver and spleen. Vomiting of bile and acid. Diarrhea of black, musty stools with intestinal pains. Constipation with clay-colored stools.

Breasts feel enlarged and sore intense squeezing pain in the region of the heart, with a sense of weakness. More frequent urination, discoloring the toilet bowl brownish or a deep lemon color very difficult to wash from the bowl.

Cadm-met. causes numbness of feet and hands when patient is sitting. Hemorrhage of the bladder and the rectum was cured many times by Dr. Grimmer, especially when dark-colored blood with small clots was present. Bright red hemorrhages have also been observed.

"Severe neuralgic pains in the face with plugged sinus, followed by facial paralysis, after large doses of quinine and aspirin, cured with one dose of Cadm-met. 10,000 c" (Grimmer).

Pharmacy

Cadm-s. Cadmium Sulphate. Cadmium sulphuratum. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

Cadmium sulphuratum is found in nature in intimate association with Zinc, which it nearly resembles in action, but Cadmium acts more powerfully. Cadm-s. is a cross between Bry. and Ars.: it has the desire to keep quiet of Bry. with the exhaustion and stomach irritability of Ars. (Kent).

The major use of Cadm-s. has been as an antidote to the severe side effects of cancer therapy. Especially, chemotherapy and radiation treatments, which can cause weakness, emaciation, nausea, vomiting, liver damage, hair loss, anorexia and which speeds up the time of death.

Homeopathic

Cadm-s. chief action centers on stomach and respiration. It's provings gives symptoms corresponding to very low forms of disease. Cadm-s. is used in cholera and yellow fever, where with exhaustion, vomiting and extreme prostration, the disease runs deathward.

Important gastric symptoms.

The profound action of Cadm-s. on the stomach, burning and cutting pain intense retching, gagging, bringing up tough mucus intense nausea and vomiting, which led to its being given in yellow fever and cancer with brilliant success. Chemotherapy and radiation poisonings.

Stomach cancer with persistent nausea and vomiting. There is extreme exhaustion and prostration with vomiting. Black vomit is very characteristic. The least thing touching the lips will excite vomiting. Pitchy taste, food tastes like salt.

Cadm-s. has facial paralysis from the cold winds. It acts well in alcoholics.

It is a notable anti-psoric. There is much itching of skin, at night in bed, when touched when cold, better scratching, which causes a voluptuous feeling.

Skin blue, yellow, scaly, cracking, damp, suppurating herpes, chilblains. Patients must keep quiet. Chilliness and coldness even when near the fire. Patient must keep quiet. Icy coldness even near a fire. Low form of diseases run to deathward. Weakness remaining after epileptic attacks of one arm and one leg.

Comments

A cadmium patient is cold, always freezing, and all complaints are made worse from becoming cold, or from cold changes in the weather. Cadmium sulph. produces weakness and tiredness, accompanied by a cachectic state that stimulates the cachexia of advanced cancer cases or pernicious anemia. Mentally: marked increase in irritability, with a horror of solitude and of work. Sleep: resembles the carbons and snake poisons.

Sleeps with eyes open, stops breathing on going to sleep. Awakens suffocating after sleep annoyingly protracted sleeplessness, insomnia.

Cadmium acts intensely on the gastro-intestinal tract, causing nausea, which is intensified by motion. Later there is vomiting of acid or yellow substances.

Accompanying these symptoms, the face is bathed in cold perspiration and there are cutting pains in the abdomen.

Black vomit like that occurring in the severe type of zymotic diseases. This remedy competes with Arsenic in ulceration of the stomach in alcoholics. Beer aggravates the gastric complaints.

There is salivation, with bitter burning in the mouth and throat, fetid breath, ulcers with dryness, and burning constriction of the throat. This remedy should also be good for vomiting of pregnancy when other remedies fail. Also for pernicious forms of vomiting, of black blood from chronic ulcers or cancer of the stomach. The vomit looks like coffee grounds.

Cadmium is a chilly medicine. There is icy coldness. Coldness even when near a fire. Goose bumps: after drinking with hot hands. Sweat in axilla. Effect of a drought of cold air in checking sweat. The nasal symptoms are very important, no remedy has served better in cases of ozaena and polyps. Cutting, sharp pains are prominent, also a sense of constriction.

History

Calcarea carb. is the chief remedy of Calcium compounds. Calcarea carb. is one of the greatest monuments of Hahnemann's genius. This great anti-psoric is a constitutional remedy par excellence.

Calcarea carb. is one of the polycrest remedies and ranks with Sulphur and Lycopodium at the head of the anti-psorics. It is essential to a correct appreciation of the Homeopathic Materia Medica that these three medicines should be thoroughly known, as these are in a sense the standards around which the rest are grouped.

All three have a very wide range and deep action. They have many symptoms in common, but Calc. is somewhat sharply distinguished from Sulphur in that it is a chilly remedy, the patient seeking warmth, while the Sulphur patient is worse by heat and better by cold.

Calcarea is closely allied to Belladonna, Nux-v., Puls. and Rhus-t. in its action. Like many of the other carbonates, Calc. corresponds to persons of soft tissue with tendency to be fat.

Calc. has cold, clammy feet, "as if there weep damp stockings on," Sulphur has characteristically hot, sweaty feet. The "sinking sensation" common to all three is most marked with Sulphur at 11 a.m. with Lycopodium. At 4 p.m. with Calcarea at any time.

Calc. is a hydrogenoid and sycotic constitution. Sensitive to cold and damp and early morning aggravation. Warts and polyps also point to the same constitutional state. Calc. is an eminently sycotic medicine, as the early morning aggravation would indicate.

Cooper has cured with it psoriasis of the palms. Eruptions behind right ear. Guernsey says:

"This remedy is particularly adapted to the real leuco-phlegmatic constitution. Where we find a large head, large features, pale skin with a chalky look and (in infants) open fontanelles, we may think strongly of Calc."

Homeopathic

Calcarea carb.'s chief action is centered in the vegetative sphere, impaired nutrition being the keynote of its action, the glands, skin and bone, being instrumental in the changes wrought. It alters the blood causing anemia.

Calcium metabolism is active during childhood and becomes defective after middle age. Improper assimilation of calcium gives rise to defective nutrition of glands, bones and skin.

Calcarea patient is fat, fair, flabby and perspiring and cold, damp and sour. Children crave eggs and eat dirt and other indigestible things, are prone to diarrhea. Nightmares, dreams of monsters. Calcarea carb. is a definite stimulant to the periosteum. Great sensitiveness to cold weather.

Children are slow in teething and walk late. Complaints of teething children, convulsions, sour diarrhea, tardy teething and late walking. Children do not put their feet down on the ground. Emaciated children with big head and big belly. Patients are susceptible to cold, Cold moist air chills through and through, takes cold easily especially in chest. Dull lethargic children who do not want to play.

Gets out of breath easily. A jaded state, mental or physical, due to overwork. Pituitary and thyroid dysfunction. Raised blood clotting factors. (Strontium). Glandular swelling below the jaw and in the neck. Muscles and skin become fat or flabby, patient grows heavier, but not strong. Sweating is easy, partial, on head, chest during sleep.

Discharges are profuse often sour, stools, sweat, odor of the body, saliva etc.

There is chilliness, aggravation from contact with water and from cold, clammy feet and sinking sensations, Calcarea will most likely prove the remedy.

Swelling and pain in the breasts before the menstrual flow begins, (Con.). But if the menses are scanty or absent and the Calc. characteristics of chilliness and cold, clammy feet are present. Suppression of menses in women after working in water. Bearing-down pains. Fibroids and cysts. Ovarian or uterine pains, right side, extending down thighs, worse on reading or writing (left side, Lil-t.).

Tendency to strain the muscles easily. Parts lain on become numb. Tendency to the formation of gallstones and kidney stones. Muscular atrophy. Early stage of tuberculosis of lungs with tickling cough, fleeting chest pains, nausea, acidity and dislike for fats. Cramps in muscles which draw limbs. Varicose veins, burning in veins.

In all cases where there is improper nutrition and indigestion. Malnutrition. In epilepsy the aura spreads up from solar plexus or as of a mouse running up the arm or down epigastrium to uterus or limbs. Abscesses in deep muscles. Polyps and exostoses. Polyps, nasal, uterine etc. cysts. Osteomyelitis. Osteoporosis. Pituitary and thyroid dysfunction. Diarrhea, tremors after burns.

The Calc. patient generally feels better when constipated. The diarrhea is generally worse in afternoon. There is painless hoarseness worse in morning.

Comments

The mental and nervous systems of Calc. are no less remarkable than the bodily. The Calc. patient is slow in movements (Sulph. quick and active). The state of mind is one of apprehension. The patient fears she will lose her reason or that people will notice her mental confusion. Fears she has some fatal disease, especially heart disease.

Shuddering and dread as evening draws near. Sees visions on closing eyes (hence useful in delirium tremens). Cries out, twitches, grasps at flocks, restless and anxious though unconscious (nervous and typhoid fever), beside herself with anguish, on the borders of acute mania. Evil foreboding, talks of mice, rats, murders. Forgetful.

In sleep the mental symptoms come out again: the patient is either abnormally sleepy or sleepless. Wakes 3 a.m. and cannot get to sleep again tosses about. Horrible phantasms.

The child wakes in the night screaming and cannot be pacified in the morning remembers nothing of it. Chews and swallows in sleep. Frightful dreams of sickness, death and smell of corpses.

On exertion or excitement causes exhaustion, though he may feel well before. Ascending the hill causes great weakness. Exhaustion in the morning. Sensation as if in a dream.

Calc. is one of the remedies that has been used for the sensation of levitation. Aversion to darkness. Cloud coming over head.

The head sweats profusely, wetting the pillow for a space around the head, enlarged and hard lymphatic glands. Icy coldness in abdomen. In addition there are night terrors, child wakes at 2 or 3 a.m. screaming, cannot be made to understand, remembers nothing of it in the morning. All the symptoms are made worse by taking cold.

In addition to the cold symptoms there are sensations of heat and burning: heat in and on the vertex. In connection with this the sweat of the head must be remembered. It occurs chiefly on occiput and forehead (that of Sil. is all over). There is better uncovering during the heats (as with Lyc. and unlike Sil.). Burning in soles of feet at night, burning in back of hands.

The characteristic Calc. hand is soft, cold and moist, a boneless hand. Also hands inclined to chap. There are copious night sweats, which may be sour or odorless. Foot-sweat, sour or odorless. The sweats of Calc. give on relief. Bloody sweats. Among other heat symptoms is hot breath with heat in mouth.

Sour belchings. Sour diarrhea. Sour body smell. Nausea after drinking water, even ever so little, but not if iced. Nausea when fasting. The "sinking" sensation of Calc. has some modifications.

There is ravenous hunger, hunger and feeling of emptiness immediately after a meal and in the early morning. If he doesn't have his breakfast at the proper time, a headache comes on.

Craving for eggs, for indigestible things, chalk, coal, etc. Milk disagrees, sour vomiting of large curds. Inability to swallow solids. Chronic disease of left tonsil, feeling of lump in left side of throat pain from left tonsil to ear. Semi-lateral swelling of tongue.

Crawling in rectum as from worms. Burning in rectum. Weight in lower rectum. Ardor urine offensive urine. Stools hard and pasty like chalk or clay offensive, undigested. Impotence, penis cold and relaxed.

Calcarea is related to the pre-tubercular stage of tuberculosis, it is more especially suited to disorders of the right apex. Stitching in chest and sides of chest when moving and when lying on affected side. The cough is provoked by going into a cold room, by chilliness. Tickling cough, sensation of feather in throat.

Rattling in the chest, miller's and stone-cutter's tuberculosis, old suppurating cavities. Swelling of cervical and bronchial glands. Scrofulous glands and scrofulous diseases of bones, spinal curvature, rickets. Swellings, milk leg better by elevating the limb, worse hanging it down.

The same conditions mark the sciatica of Calc., which follows on working in water. Rheumatic and gouty conditions from wetting. Joints crack and crepitate as if dry. The skin is rough and scaly and inclined to chap. Cracks. Chapped hands. Chilblains from wetting. Eruptions.

The epilepsy of Calc. has an aura spreading up from the solar plexus in which case the convulsion comes on immediately or it may be like a mouse running on the arm or it may run down from epigastrium into uterus or limbs. The causes are fright, suppressed eruptions and discharges, sexual excesses.

Rush of blood to head, a sensation of something rising up from epigastrium to head is very characteristic.

It is often indicated in epilepsy, disposition to strain a part by lifting heavy things, pricking corns, polyps, cysts, in the leuco-phlegmatic constitutions.

Neuralgias and paralyzes are among the Calc. effects. Twitching. Internal trembling sensation on awaking. Fainting, coming on in the street with sensation of something rising from stomach to head. Talking causes a feeling of weakness which compels him to desist.

Dr. Van den Neucker once cured a baker of paralysis of both arms with Calc. and also a case of paralysis with many symptoms of locomotor ataxia in a lymphatic blonde girl of nineteen.

According to Guernsey Calc. is in general a right-side remedy. It affects specially right external head, right eye, right face, right abdominal ring, sexual organs right side, right back, right upper limbs. Left side neck and nape of neck, left chest, left lower limbs.

Where a cold wind strikes the body and it immediately runs to the teeth, causing them to ache. Ranula. Flatulence or gurgling in right hypochondrium. Cramp in legs at 3 a.m. Hands chap from hard water.

Alexander Villers cured with Calc. 200c in rare doses a case combining many of the features of the remedy. The patient, a lady, age 20, was very despondent through long-continued depressing circumstances, became very nervous.

She was companion to an exceedingly deaf lady, whose voice was high-pitched. This with the strain on her voice to make herself heard, caused headache through temples better by rapid motion of head.

Outdoor exercise was accompanied by hard pressure on chest, which only belchings seemed to relieve. Bowels constipated. Menses every fortnight with backache and great prostration.

Under the remedy, repeated at rare intervals, the menses came on monthly, headache and pressure on the chest disappeared.

Among the conditions of Calc. are the dread of the open air ranks high, the least cold air goes right through. Great sensitiveness to cold, damp air.

Also cannot bear sun. The slightest change of weather, aggravates. Dread of bathing and water. There is inclination to stretch and put the shoulders back, but straightening aggravates the rheumatism.

Dr. Sarah Hogan gave Calc-f. with complete success in a case of flatulency in a pregnant woman. The patient passed through the labor quite easily, whereas the previous labor had been very difficult.

In many other cases Dr. Hogan found the remedy facilitate labor. She found flatulency a marked indication for the remedy independently of pregnancy.

G. P. Hale with the 3x, has removed induration after typhlitis, also encysted tumor of eyelids. He regards induration threatening suppuration as a marked indication. Induration in epigastric region after a kick from a horse was cured. Also indurated glands (of neck of breast, etc.) of stony hardness.

W. P. Wesselheft cured two cases of syphilitic periosteal swelling, one on right radius, one on left ulna, one sensitive, one not, one patient male dark, the other blonde female. Each case received a dose of Calc-f. 100,00 c.

The tibia was ulcerated and the ragged edge of the bone protruded through the surface. There was emaciation, loss of appetite and he was as pale as a corpse. The appetite returned at once in great force.

Calc-hp. is to be preferred when it seems necessary to furnish the organism with liberal doses of phosphorus in consequence of continued abscesses having reduced the vitality. Give first and second decimal triturations. It has cured attacks of pain occurring two hours after meals relieved by a cup of milk or light food. Planets: Saturn.

Calcarea muriatica

(chloride of lime)

Pharmacy

Calc-m. Calcarea muriatica. Calcium Chloride. Chloride of Lime. Rademacher's liquor is 1 part to 2 of distilled water of which take 15 drops in half a cup of water, five times daily. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies,

History

In scrofulous cases Calcarea muriatica promotes the action of mercury. Under its use glandular swellings and indurations soften and disappear. Hence its use in swollen glands and boils.

C. W. has recorded a remarkable instance of the action of this remedy. A scrofulous and rheumatic woman had suffered from abscess of cornea, followed by rheumatic iritis and a dense opacity was left. An old-school practitioner had treated her with mercury during two years in a vain endeavor to "touch her mouth."

He put one grain of Calc-mur. in an 8-oz. bottle and directed the patient to take a tablespoonful three times a day. The medicine had not been taken ten minutes before she felt it at her fingertips. The mercurial action was evoked and she was in bed a fortnight, terribly salivated.

The condition of the eye was unchanged. Calc-mur. in the form of the liquor (1 part of 2 of distilled water), was one of Rademacher's "Stomach Remedies," and was used with great success by him in cases of obstinate vomiting. He gave 15 drops of the liquor in half a cup of water five times a day.

The indications were vomiting of all food and drink, vomiting when no food had been taken, jaundice, pain in left hypochondrium. He also found it indicated in gastric pain, bloating and belchings. Planets: Mercury, Moon.

Homeopathic

(egg-shell)

Pharmacy

Calc-o-t. Calcarea ovi testae. Ovi testa. Testa praeparata. Egg-shell. Trituration of the shell, not including the lining membranes. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

This preparation of Calcium has been used in preference to others in cases of simple bland leucorrhea and warts. Water in which eggs have been boiled is popularly supposed to have the property of causing warts if brought in contact with the hands. This suggests Calc-o-t. as possibly the best Calcarea preparation to prescribe in cases of warts. Planets: Venus.

Homeopathic

Calc-o-t. has the general properties of Calc., but it has been little used clinically. Backache, as if broken in two, is a keynote. Leucorrhea and warts. Backache and leucorrhea. Tired feeling. Also effective in controlling suffering from cancer.

Calcarea phosphorica

(calcium phosphate)

Pharmacy

Calc-p. Calcium phosphate. Calcarea phos. Phosphate of Lime. Tricalcic Phosphate. A mixture of the basic and other phosphates of lime, made by dropping dilute phosphoric acid into lime water. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, first to third trituration. Higher potencies often effective.

History

Calc. phos. while exhibiting strong points of resemblance with Calc. carb., has nevertheless a very distinct individuality. It has been proved and tested clinically and, having been adopted by Schÿssler as his leading "anti-psoric," a number of valuable indications have been added by him and his followers.

The Calc-p. patient is generally emaciated instead of fat like the typical Calc. carb. child. The Calc-p. patient is less chalky-white and more dirty-white or brownish than the Calc. carb. patient. Both have large abdomens, but that of the Calc-p. patient is flabby.

Calc. carb. has craving for eggs, Calc-p. for salt of smoked meats. "Craving for fat bacon" in children is a well-verified characteristic of Calc-p.

Calc-p. has cured dyspepsia, pain better for a short time by raising wind, when fasting the pains goes to the spine, feeling as if one ought to raise wind and could not. Dyspepsia with indescribable distress in region of stomach, only temporarily better by eating.

The stools of Calc-p. are green and slimy or hot and watery with fetid flatus of Calc-c., sometimes green, generally watery, white and mixed with curds. Calc. has an open anterior fontanelle, Calc-p. has both open, especially the posterior. The skull is thin and soft, almost cracks like paper when pressed upon.

Grauvogl considered it the most important remedy in chronic hydrocephalus and he very properly gave it as a prenatal remedy during pregnancy to women who had previously borne hydrocephalic children.

Homeopathic

Calcarea phos. affects the nutrition of bones and glands. The bones become soft, thin and brittle. Osteoporosis. Calc-p. promotes ossification of bones in the non-union of fractures. It has a special affinity where bones form sutures or symphyses and all its symptoms are worse from any change of weather.

Calc-p. corresponds to poor nutrition, whether of childhood, puberty or of old age. Predisposition to glandular and bone diseases. Slow development of teeth. Slow walking, neck too thin and weak to support head. Malassimilation.

Calc-p. is especially indicated in delayed dentition and troubles incident to that period. Bone diseases. Non-union of broken bones, (Symph.) Weak bones that break easily.

Broken bones that are slow to heal. Osteomyelitis. Rickets. Osteoporosis. Spinal curvatures, (Calc-f., Sil.) Growing pains.

Calc-p. is indicated in anemic children who are peevish, flabby, have cold limbs and feeble digestion. Anemia after acute diseases and chronic wasting diseases. Diabetes when the lungs are affected. Addison's disease. Glands are swollen.

Trembling or trembling hands with pain or other complaints. Coldness or soreness in spots, vertex, eyeballs, tip of nose, fingers etc.

The mental state is one of weakness, weak memory inability for mental exertion. Hence it is appropriate in effects of mental strain, such as school headaches in children, weak-minded children, (Nat-m., Kali-p.). Wants to be at home and when at home wants to go out, goes from place to place. Involuntary sighing. Complaints are worse when thinking of them. Ailments after bad news.

Enlargement of tonsils, acute and chronic. Shortness of breath. Arthritis. Rheumatism. Shifting pains. A slight draft causes rheumatic pains, every cold causes pains in joints and sutures. Sensation of crawling and numbness. Discharges are albuminous. Tendency to perspiration and glandular enlargement are symptoms it shares with the carbonate. Chlorosis and tuberculosis.

Clinical

Anemia. Ankles, weak. Back, weakness. Bedwetting. Bones disorders. Brain-fag. Bright's disease. Broken bones. Cholera infantum. Chorea. Colds. Colic. Cretinism. Debility. Dentition, slow. Diabetes. Dyspepsia. Emissions. Epilepsy. Face, boils. Fistula. Fractures. Gleet. Gonorrhoea. Headaches. Hernia. Hydrocele. Joints disorders. Leucorrhoea. Lumbago. Nymphomania. Osteomyelitis. Osteoporosis. Polyps. Rheumatism. Rickets. Sexual mania. Spermatorrhoea. Spina bifida. Stiff-neck. Strabismus. Testicles, swollen. Throat, sore. Tobacco habit. Tonsils, enlarged. Tuberculosis. Uterus prolapsed.

Causations

Ill effects of over-growth. Broken bones. Lifting. Over-study. Grief. Disappointed love. Unpleasant news. Sexual excess or irregularities. Operations for fistula. Getting wet. Poor diet.

Constitutions

Patients especially children are delicate, tall, thin or scrawny with dirty brownish skin. It is suited to scrofulous, gouty constitutions.

Constitutions

Anemic children who are peevish, flabby, have cold limbs and weak digestion, they start convulsively when lying on back better lying on side. They lose breath when they are lifted. Planets: Saturn, Moon.

Modalities

Better in summer, warm, dry atmosphere, lying down, rest. Worse from exposure to damp, cold weather, melting snow, drafts, cold, melting snow. Worse from dentition, mental exertion. Worse loss of fluids. Worse from puberty, fruits, cider. Worse when thinking of his symptoms. Worse from motion, lifting, ascending. (kidney stone)

Pharmacy

Calc-ren. Calcarea renalis. Lapidus renalis. Calculus renalis. Urate of Lime, kidney stones. Also Phosphate of Lime, kidney stones. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Hom. Recorder of Aug., 1895 reprints a paper by Dr. Bredenoll of Erwitte in which he gives his experience with this remedy in his own case. Kidney colic of great intensity with passage of uric acid stones.

One of these stones was triturated in the proportion of 5 parts to 95 of sugar of milk and of this he took 1/2 grain doses for a considerable time with the result that the formation of stones ceased. The tartar which had formed on the teeth dropped off and a nodosity of stony hardness disappeared from the extensor tendon of the right middle finger.

Bredenoll considered the tartar on the teeth, kidney stones and arthritic nodosities very similar morbid products. This remedy is reported to be peculiarly beneficial in Rigg's disease of the teeth. Planets: Saturn.

Comments

In the Homeopathic Examiner of 1846, contained the following paper, by Dr. Bredenoll. In November, 1837, I was suddenly attacked with vomiting, accompanied with violent lancinating, sore or pinching pains in the region of the left kidney. The horrible anguish and pain which I experienced extorted from me involuntary screams, I was writhing like a worm in the dust.

A calculus had descended into the ureter and had become incarcerated in it. Repeated doses of Nux-v relieved the incarceration and I distinctly felt that the calculus was descending towards the bladder. After twenty-four hours of horrible suffering the vomiting ceased. The pain became duller and was felt in the region where the ureter dips into and becomes interwoven with the tissue of the bladder.

It continued for three days and then disappeared all of a sudden (the stone had not got into the bladder). Thirty-six hours afterwards the calculus entered the bulb of the urethra. I felt a frequent desire to urinate, the urine was turbid and bloody, until at last a calculus of four grains made its appearance in the urine.

After this I frequently passed gravel and stones, at times with slight, at times violent pains, sometimes accompanied with vomiting, I kept the larger stones with a view of using them hereafter as a curative agent.

Professor Nasser of Bonn, where my son studied medicine at the time, has analyzed the stones and has found them to be urate of lime. He advised me to take Merc-d. and the Sulphate of soda for some time, it is scarcely necessary for me to say that I did not follow his advice.

On the 15th of February, 1839, I felt the precursory symptoms of a new attack, which really did break out in all its fury on the 16th and continued on the 17th and 18th.

I now took 5 grains of my kidney stones to be triturated in my presence with 95 grains of sugar of milk, according to the fashion of Hahnemann and took 1/2 grain in the evening of the 17th, another 1/2 grain in the morning of the 18th.

On this day I passed very turbid urine with a considerable quantity of gravel, however in the region where the ureter dips into the bladder, I experienced an uncomfortable sensation, but was well otherwise.

On the 19th I was obliged to visit a patient at the distance of two miles, on my journey I felt that the calculus was descending into the bladder, the urine which I emitted shortly afterwards was very turbid and bloody. That same evening after returning home, I left the stone in the bulb of the urethra and on the morning of the 20th it came off during stool, but unfortunately got lost among the excrement.

To judge from my feeling it must have been larger than any of the preceding stones and also rougher, for its passage through the urethra was very painful and followed by an oozing out of blood.

The uncomfortable feeling in the region of the left kidney never disappeared completely, it became especially painful when pressing upon that place, when riding on horseback or in a carriage, when taking exercise or turning the body.

It seems to me that the whole pelvis of the kidneys must have been full of gravel and stones.

I now took 1/2 grain at intervals of eight days, the result was that I passed gravel and small stones at every urination.

On the 30th of November my condition got Worse and I continued to take 1/2 grain of Calc-ren., at longer or shorter intervals, until October 18th, 1840. After this period I ceased to pass any gravel and I felt entirely well. On the kidneys must have been full of gravel and stones. I now took 1/2 grain of Calc-ren., another dose on June 3rd.

On June 17th precursors of another attack, on the 18th vomiting accompanied by all the frightful circumstances which I have detailed above, the vomiting of mucus, bile ingesta, continued at short intervals until the 26th, my tongue was coated with yellow mucus and my appetite had completely disappeared. Bry., Nux-v. and Puls. relieved the gastric symptom, on the 26th in the afternoon, I passed a calculus of the size of a pea. I now resumed the use of Calc-ren. in 1/2 grain doses, at irregular intervals.

On the 23rd of October I passed a stone of the size of a pea without vomiting, there were no other precursory symptoms except the uncomfortable feeling in the region of the kidneys a few days previous. I have felt well ever since and free from all complaint, although I continue the occasional use of 1/2 grain of Calc-ren., lest I should have a relapse.

Every time I took a dose of Calc-ren. I found that the so-called tartar on the teeth became detached a few days afterwards. A short while ago a nodosity, hard as a stone, which had appeared on the extensor tendon of the right middle finger, about nine months ago and which threatened to increase more and more, disappeared.

Pharmacy

Calc-s. Calcareo sulphurica. Plaster of Paris. Sulphate of Calcium. Gypsum. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, second and third trituration. The twelfth potency has been found effective in Lupus.

History

Calcareo sulphurica is closely related to Hepar sulphur. Calc-s. which is an impure sulphide of calcium, but has a wider sphere and deeper action in suppurative processes. It is Dr. Schussler's connective tissue remedy and most of the indications for its use are derived from his clinical experience.

In the last edition of his Biochemic Therapy Schÿssler discards Calc-s. because it is not an actual constituent of the tissues and he distributes its functions between Silica and Nat-p.

Homeopaths, having no Biochemic theory to support, may continue its use without scruple, especially as it has been proved by Hering and others. It is indicated in all kinds of cases after pus has found a vent.

Nash has cured a case of suppurating kidney with it. It differs from Hepar sulph. in sensitiveness to air: Hepar cannot bear the slightest exposure, Calc-s. has better in open air, better walking in it, desire for it. Both have worse from change of weather. Calc-s. has not the excessive sensitiveness to touch found in Hepar.

Calendula officinalis

(pot marigold)

Pharmacy

Calen. Calendula officinalis. Pot Marigold. N. O. Composite. Tincture of leaves and flowers. Calendula Succus is made from the fresh plant juice. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, locally, Aqua Calendula for all wounds, the greatest healing agent. Also as an injection in leucorrhoea internally, tincture to third potency. For burns, sores, fissures and abrasions, etc., use Calendula Cerate. Calendula 30c or 200c after surgery.

Herbal

Calendula officinalis belongs to the same family as those other great vulneraries: Arnica and Bellis perennis. The kinds of wounds indicating its use are lacerated wounds and suppurative wounds.

Calendula is the homeopathic anti-septic, it restores the vitality of an injured part, making it impregnable against the forces of putrefaction. Unlike Arnica it has no irritating property capable of producing erysipelas. It is therefore suitable to all cases of injury where the skin is broken.

The application of a sponge saturated with a hot solution of Calendula after delivery gives the greatest comfort to the patient. Hot Calendula lotions are generally preferable to cold, as they conserve the vitality of the injured parts.

Hot Calendula fomentations when intermittently applied, are far better than poultices as applications to forming abscesses. If they do not abort the process they favor the maturation and ultimate healing.

Kent states in injuries Calendula cannot be ignored in cuts with laceration, surface or open injuries. Dilute Calendula used locally will keep the wound odorless, will reduce the amount of pus and favor granulation in the very best possible manner and thus it assists the surgeon in healing up surface wounds.

Calendula is all the dressing one will need for any open wound and severe lacerations. It takes away the local pain and suffering. You may easily see we are not now dealing with a condition that exists because of a state within the economy, but because of something that is without. There is nothing that will cause these external injuries to heal so beautifully as the Calendula.

Jahr, who was in Paris during the Coup d'Etat of 1849, treated a number of cases of gunshot wounds with comminuted bones and saved several limbs by means of Calendula. It prevented suppuration and pyemia. In some cases of carbuncle it acts with great promptitude, subduing pain and fever. In obstetric practice it is invaluable.

In Germany it is regarded as a "cancer cure."

Almost all the symptoms appear during the chilly stage of the fever, he feels most comfortable when walking about or else when lying perfectly still.

A correspondent of the Hom. World, "C. W." (1891), mentions that a friend of his who chewed for a few minutes a leaf of Calendula noticed that it entirely removed for some days difficulty of passing water such as is commonly met with in old men.

C. R. Crosby gives it internally in the 3x potency, as well as externally. He has also had excellent results from its use as a hot compress, (an ounce to the pint) in pneumonia and other inflammations. Application of sponge, saturated with hot solution of Calendula after delivery, gives the greatest comfort to the patient. It is an excellent hemostatic in tooth extractions and for gum surgery.

Homeopathic

Calendula officinalis acts on muscles, spine, liver and skin. A most remarkable healing agent, applied locally or given internally in potency. Useful for open wounds, parts that will not heal, ulcers, etc. Promotes healthy granulations and rapid healing by first intention.

Comments

Hansen states: Open wounds, very sore and painful, difficult granulation, tendency to inflammation and suppuration. Useful as local application in phlegmonous erysipelas, bad ulcers of os uteri, offensive leucorrhoea, and in carious root toothache. Especially used in healthy, cuts, lacerated wounds, locally and internally.

Ludlam recommends it in chronic endocervicitis and scrofulous ulcerations with much purulent leucorrhoea. Deafness often from inflammation. Calendula diminishes the suppuration, heals often per primam intentionem, and was much used with good results in the American Civil War.

Calendula has not been largely proved, but very definite fever symptoms have been elicited and cases of jaundice have been treated with it successfully. Some of the symptoms are: Irritability, easily frightened, great tendency to start, nervousness, hearing very acute. Drinking aggravates, also damp weather.

Cooper gives this modality: worse in cloudy weather. The flowers close when a dark cloud passes over. Drinking causes a shaking chill or creeping crawls, even during the heat. Very sensitive to cold air. Nodosities in breast.

C. W., himself a pharmacist, noticed the following effect on himself when making the fresh-plant tincture: "There was such a feeling as if some overwhelming calamity was hovering over me as to be almost unbearable.

Three years ago, just after making the tincture, my old enemy the gout nipped me in the middle of the spine and in three days spoiled all my powers of walking and then the dreadful feeling became very much exaggerated." His experience led him to conclude that Calendula has an action on the spinal cord.

Herbal

The expressed juice, root and bark have been extensively used in the East for their emetic, sudorific, alterative and purgative qualities. The fresh juice is considered a valuable remedy in skin disorders.

Dr. Gramm of Philadelphia has used the tincture with great success in cases of syphilis when Mercury can no longer be given in the anemia of syphilis, secondary syphilis. A sense of warmth in the scrobiculus cordis is a leading indication for the remedy.

In one case of severe and advanced syphilis with enormous thickening of the ends of all the nails, Calo. effected a cure. The remedy was given in oneÑ to five-drop doses of the tincture or in pellets saturated with equal parts of the tincture and 95 per cent. alcohol.

Planets: Mercury, Saturn.

Homeopathic

Calotropis has been used with marked success in the treatment of syphilis following Mercury, also in elephantiasis, leprosy and acute dysentery. Pneumonic tuberculosis. Tuberculosis. Increases the circulation of the skin, has powerful effects as a sudorific.

In the secondary symptoms of syphilis where Mercury has been used but cannot be pushed safely any farther, it rapidly recruits the constitution, heals the ulcers and blotches from the skin and perfects the cure. A short proving brought out the following symptoms: Weak, tired feeling, coldness, dizziness, pain and confusion in head, nausea and vomiting of bile.

Camphor has a direct relationship to muscles and fascia. In local rheumatic disorders in cold climates necessary. Distention of veins. As a heart stimulant for emergency use of Camphor is the most satisfactory remedy. Drop doses on sugar as often as every five minutes. Also, for colds and chills.

Camphor corrects spoiled cases and antidotes most of the medicines specially vegetable kingdom. In cholera epidemics is where Camphor has achieved classical fame. In some epidemics, Camph. given early has alone cured a large majority of the cases treated and that whether given in drop doses of the tincture or in the 30c.

In the collapse of cholera it corresponds rather to the initial chill before either vomiting or diarrhea. The tongue is cold. If he can speak, the voice is either high pitched or husky.

The Camph. cramps are less pronounced than in Cupr., but cramps with icy coldness of limbs is characteristic of Camph. The coldness of Camph. resembles that of Verat., but with the latter the discharges are copious and Camph. has marked nausea and the expression of nausea, upper lip drawn up.

Salzer says the cases calling for it are those in which "arterial spasm," with difficult breathing (spasm of pulmonary arteries), coldness and lividity are the leading features.

Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Digestive tract and cerebro-spinal nerves, urinary organs and nose are prominently affected. Camphor has a state of collapse. Icy coldness of the whole body, sudden sinking of strength, pulse small and weak. After operations, if temperature is subnormal, low blood pressure.

Coldness, cramps and convulsions with mental anguish are the marked features of Camphor indications. Convulsions with blue lips, froth at mouth and lock-jaw.

It is a remedy for sudden collapse from over-powering influences acting on nervous centers. Patient becomes icy cold, yet he is averse to covers or wants them off and then on alternately with internal burning heat and anxiousness

Great sensitiveness to cold and cold air, which worse pains, takes cold easily. Surface cold to touch, yet throws off all covering. Limbs cold with cramps. Awkwardness. First stages of a cold with chilliness and sneezing. Trembling and extreme restlessness. Cracking of joints. Epileptiform convulsions.

Very sensitive to cold and to touch. After effects of measles. Violent convulsions with wandering and hysterical excitement. Tetanic spasms.

In its actions on the genito-urinary sphere Camph. approaches Canth. in intensity and is one of the antidotes to the latter. Strangury and priapism are among its effects.

Scrofulous, weakly. irritable children are especially affected. In the form of the ordinary Camphor pilules, Clarke found it an excellent remedy for sleeplessness. In this, as in its effect on colds, it resembles Acon.

In a case reported by Dr. E. M. Beard of a young man who suffered from gastric catarrh in paroxysms which were induced by the sight of physical deformity, the touch of a cold, clammy hand and the mention of odors, the actual presence of which did not affect him, complete relief was afforded by 3 gram doses of Camph-br. every 3 or 4 hours.

But the drug set up these singular symptoms: Directions appeared to be reversed, north seemed south and east seemed west innumerable black flies seemed to be flitting over the field of vision, he was sleepless and when he did sleep it was restless and vexed with ghastly dreams. Herbal

The use of Cann-i. in the East as an intoxicant gives the leading note of its sphere of action. Cannabis sativa and Cannabis indica are botanically identical, the difference in their properties is solely due to the difference of soil and climate in which they are grown.

Nash relates the case of a lady suffering from cardiac dropsy, who, when relieved of the latter, suddenly lost the power of speech. In answer to a question she could begin a sentence, but could not finish it, as she could not remember what she wished to say.

She was very impatient about it, would cry, but could not finish the sentence, though she could signify assent if any one did finish it for her. Cann-i. cured rapidly.

In one case of overdose the observer experienced a modification of this: Absolute forgetfulness of the thought, speech or acts of the previous moment, startled by hearing the echo of the last words of a sentence he has just spoken.

Having suggested a walk to a companion and meeting him at the street door, wondered why they were there. Afterwards he could remember everything. Planets: Moon, Mercury, Venus.

Cantharis vesicatoria

(spanish fly)

Pharmacy

Canth. Cantharis vesicatoria. Spanish Fly. Lytta vesicator. N. O. Insecta, Coleoptera. Tincture or trituration of living insects. Historical dose: Trituration, tincture and all potencies, sixth to thirtieth potency. Externally in burns and eczema, 1x and 2x in water or as a cerate.

History

Commonly known as Spanish fly. Cantharis belongs to the animal kingdom and finds its most prominent sphere of action in exciting the animal passions. There is anger in a very acute degree amounting to paroxysms of rage and a corresponding condition of the bodily tissues.

In burns the part may be treated with a lotion containing a few drops or pills of the Canth. 30c or 200c to the ounce of water, a dilution being given internally. An ointment made with the 3x is a good application for herpes zoster.

H. N. Guernsey observed that Canth. is almost always the remedy for whatever other sufferings there may be, when there is as well frequent urination with burning, cutting pain or if cutting burning pain attends the flow, even when urination is not very frequent.

Burning, stitches, shooting pains and exudation are the indications. So the fly-blister treatment of olden days had more to say for itself than those who used it knew. Vesication is the keynote of its effects on the skin and indicates its use in burns of the first degree, erysipelas, blisters.

The word "irritation" best expresses the totality of the Cantharis effects. Cantharis attacks the urinary and sexual organs, perverting their function and setting violent inflammation, causing frenzied delirium. Canth. can produce an amorous frenzy, unbounded sexual desire, also sexual weakness and excitability.

Guernsey also pointed out that Canth. should be studied in treating disorders of the air-passages when the mucus is tenacious.

Nash records a case in which this observation led him to make a cure. Kali-bi. had completely failed to relieve a lady who had suffered long from bronchitis. The mucus was profuse, tenacious and ropy. One day the patient mentioned that she had great cutting and burning on urinating, which she was obliged to do very frequently. Canth. made a rapid cure.

This powerful drug produces a furious disturbance in the animal economy simulating hydrophobia symptoms. (Anag.) Guernsey gives as the special indications in hydrophobia: "Moaning and violent cries interspersed with barking." Planets: Mars, Venus.

Homeopathic

Cantharis action is very rapid and intense. Inflammations are violently acute or rapidly destructive in the mucous and serous membranes. Produces most violent inflammation of the whole gastro-intestinal canal, especially lower bowel. Puerperal convulsions.

Raw, burning pains. Hypersensitiveness of all parts. Irritation. The inflammations Cantharis produces (bladder, kidneys, ovaries, meninges, pleuritic and pericardial membranes) are usually associated with bladder irritation. Painful urination, as a concomitant in any diseased condition. Pains are cutting, smarting or burning, biting or as if raw, causing mental excitement. In any condition when the urine is scanty, cutting and burning Canth. should be considered.

Canth. has cured a case of malarial cachexia in which the symptoms were always worse when the urine was scanty.

"Burning" runs through the Canth. pathogenesis in a very striking way. Another marked feature of the remedy is its effect in increasing the secretions of membranes. "Canth. expels moles, dead fetus, placenta, promotes fecundity" (Guernsey).

Cancer of breast with burning, drawing pains through breast. Cancer of uterus, burning

Carbo vegetabilis

(vegetable charcoal)

Pharmacy

Carb-v. Carbo vegetabilis. Vegetable Charcoal. Impure carbon. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, first to third trituration. Thirtieth potency and higher in chronic conditions and in collapse.

History

Carbo veg. or vegetable charcoal is itself a product of imperfect oxidation and disintegration are the keynotes of this remedy. It contains small quantity of Kali-c.

The deodorant and disinfectant properties of charcoal in bulk had already been discovered when Hahnemann was at work on Materia Medica. Its a deodorant, disinfectant and anti-septic properties are more enhanced in potencies.

Provings with the crude Carbo veg. and the potentized substances showed that the latter were much more powerful in their effect on the organism. These brought out the fact that there is an exact correspondence between the effect of crude charcoal and potentized Carb-v. Both are anti-septic and deodorant.

The signs and symptoms of decay and putrefaction are the leading indication for its medicinal use: Decomposition of food in the stomach, putrid diseases and ulcerations, symptoms of imperfect oxygenation of the blood. Carb-v. antidotes the effects of putrid meats or fish, rancid fats, salt or salt meats and also the pathogenetic action of China, Lach. and Merc.

A carbon ointment made by carbonizing a wine cork by plunging it into a clear fire and then in its still glowing state into vaseline and mixing thoroughly is regarded as a sovereign remedy in anal irritation and hemorrhoid troubles.

Comments

It is suited to conditions where there is lack of reaction (like Opium) to low states of the vital powers, where the venous system is engorged, debility of greater intensity than Carbo an. to children after exhausting diseases to old people. Leading symptoms are: Numbness of limbs. Burning pains (as also Carb-an. both the products of a burning process). Great debility as soon as he makes the least effort.

Guernsey considers Carb-v. especially suited to cachectic individuals whose vital powers have become weakened. In cases where disease seems to have been engrafted on the system by reason of the depressing influence of some prior derangement.

Another form of debility is that following childbirth. causing falling out of hair. Among other effects of Carbo v. are: Aversion to darkness. Fear of ghosts. Excessive accumulation of gas in stomach and intestines. "Stomach feels full and tense from flatulence. Great pain in stomach on account of flatulence, worse especially on lying down."

Great desire for air, must be fanned, wants to be fanned hard. Worse from warmth: on the other hand it has cough worse entering cold air from a warm room. Coldness is characteristic: cold breath (as in cholera), cold knees, cold, but wants to be fanned. The mental state of Carb-v. is one of torpor and indolence, which distinguishes it from Ars. in many cases, slow thinking, worse in morning on waking. Indifference. There is also peevishness, easily angered.

Vertigo from stomach with fainting, especially at meals. Lividity is a common indication, mottled skin round ulcers indolent gangrene, varicose veins of arms, legs, vulva. Hippocratic countenance, cold breath. Collapse with cold knees. Dull headache in occiput with confusion of mind, proceeding from occiput to forehead, dull, heavy aching over eyes in warm room, buzzing in ears, very sensitive to pressure of hat.

The congestive symptoms of Carb-v. are those of poisoning by carbonic acid, pulse thready, face pale, covered with cold sweat, desire to be fanned, anxiety without restlessness, Dyspnea. Hemorrhages are frequent. Nosebleeds or hemorrhage from throat, in dysentery from the bowels, menorrhagia and metrorrhagia with burning pains across sacrum and spine, hemorrhage from the lungs, Dyspnea from chronic aortitis.

It corresponds to fever of many types: typhoid intermittent, yellow fever, hectic and cholera. In intermittents of long standing where quinine has been abused, thirst only during chill, feet ice-cold up to knees, heat in burning flushes, sweat sour or offensive, weak, mind befogged.

A. H. Birdsall has recorded a typical case of Carb-v. intermittent. A man, 36, had fever eight months, partially suppressed by Arsenic and Quinine. Type, tertian. Headache for one or two hours before chill. Chill always from 9 to 10 a.m. , beginning in feet and hands, spreading over body, nails very blue. Thirst with chill. Cold stage lasts two to three hours, followed immediately by hot stage, much heat in head and face, which is flushed red, thirstlessness. Sweating stage short, sweat sour. Apyrexia: Sweats easily, especially from least warmth, awakens in morning always with slight sour-smelling sweat. Weak, dispirited, flatulent. A single dose of Carb-v. cured. There were only three more attacks, each of diminished intensity.

There is catarrh from warm, moist atmosphere. The cough of Carb-v. is worse on entering cold air from a warm room. Hoarseness from damp air worse morning or evening. Cough caused by a sensation as if sulphur fumes were in larynx. There is leucorrhoea, greenish yellow, worse in morning. The leucorrhoea excoriates. Many symptoms occur during menses: headache, itching burning soreness and smarting at vulva and anus, hemorrhoids.

The menstrual discharge is corrosive and has a strong pungent odor. Premature and profuse. Preceded and followed by leucorrhoea. Perineum moist, raw, oozing. Carbo-v. has weak digestion with enormous production of flatulence, better by eructation. Flatulence accompanies many other complaints, as asthma and heart disorders. Heaviness, full feeling and burning. Aversion to fat to meat to milk, which causes flatulence. Desire for coffee (which does not relieve), for acids, for sweet and salt things.

Burning itching on skin, frozen limbs, chilblains, excoriations between toes. Tinea capitis or scald-head. Scalp very sensitive, feels as if bruised. Whooping cough with pain at base of brain. Excessive gagging cough in the morning, compelling him to vomit everything, immediately after breakfast. Dros. is complementary to Carbo v. in this. Bedwetting, which is worse in morning after the first sleep.

Carbolicum acidum

(carbolicum acidum)

Pharmacy

Carb-ac. Carbolicum acidum. Phenolum. Carbolic Acid. Phenol. Monoxy Benzine.

Phenic Acid. Phenyl Alcohol. Solution in rectified spirit. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

Carbolic acid like the Carbons is a powerful anti-septic and its use as such in surgery has led incidentally to the poisoning of both patients and surgeons. These experiences have provided a number of the symptoms indicating its medicinal use.

R. K. Ghosh finds it admirable in cases of cholera where Verat. seems indicated and fails. There is intolerance of warm room, but also sensitiveness to cold air which worse many symptoms.

Dr. Proctor has recorded a brilliant cure of a double basal pneumonia with drop doses of the B. P. solution after failure of more commonly used remedies. Nervous dyspepsia of intensely painful character has frequently been cured by it.

K. Ghosh has reported great improvement in a case of diabetes when the remedy was given for something else.

Proell has recorded his own case of idiopathic erysipelas affecting the back of the right hand, first three fingers and arm with violet-colored swelling and roughness. Rhus-t. removed the fever, but did nothing to stop the erysipelas. This Carb-ac. 30c did promptly.

Planets: Moon, Mars, Saturn.

Homeopathic

Carbolic Acid is a languid, painless, foul and destructive remedy. prostration is very marked, even paralytic with loss of sensation and motion. Discharges are foul, burning. Acts primarily on the central nervous system. It affects the mucous membranes, heart, blood and respiration.

Produces mental and bodily languor, disinclination to study with headache like a band. Stupor, paralysis of sensation and motion, feeble pulse and depressed breathing, death due to paralysis of respiratory centers. Increased olfactory sensibility. Very marked acuteness of smell is a strong guiding symptom.

Allergic reactions to bee stings, (Apis). Stomach symptoms are also important. Pains are terrible, come and go suddenly. Physical exertion brings on abscess somewhere. Putrid discharges. (Bapt.) Scarlet fever with marked tendency to destruction of tissue internally and fetid odor. Spasmodic coughs. Arthritis.

Comments

The pains of carbolic acid come suddenly. They are burning are pricking, sticking. The urine is very dark, black or black olive-green, grass or olive-green. There is numbness and twitching. Putrid discharges are a marked indication.

The skin is inflamed and other symptoms appear with burning, tingling, itching and numbness.

Gangrene has been caused by the application 2 to 5 per cent. solutions. There is profound prostration and fatigue, convulsions, collapse, cold, clammy sweat. Constant yawning. Many poisoning cases show pneumonia, single or double, affecting the bases principally.

It was prescribed by Dr. Streintz. Fahnestock reports a case of poisoning observed by himself from inhaling the fumes. The patient, a woman, feeling ill, ran across the street to a neighbor's. Before reaching the house she fell prostrate, pale, gasping for breath. When taken in, she had to be propped up in order to breathe, trembled all over, wanted her hands held, "pricking like needles," all over body, unable to raise right arm. Cold hands and feet. Wanted a drink of water every few minutes, nausea but no vomiting, pain in lumbar region. Symptoms lasted four hours.

It has been used with success in the vomiting of alcoholics of pregnant women with violent frontal headache. Great flatulent distention of the abdomen with belching of wind and desire for stimulants indicates the drug.

Palpitations of the heart at night has been cured by it. It has relieved cases of cancer of the stomach and has apparently cured epithelioma of the cheek and nose with hemorrhages (Allen).

Deschere has found Carb-ac. 30c of great service in uterine displacements with or without discharges but these, if present, are always offensive. The symptoms first relieved are the agonizing backache across the loins with a dragging sensation down the buttocks into the thighs. Cooper regards it as specific in influenza in the 3x for the attack and 30c for resulting debility.

Carboneum tetramuriaticum

Pharmacy

Carbon tetrachloride. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Carbon tetrachloride as a remedy for Hookworms, according to Dr. Lambert, Suva, Fiji who employed it in 50,000 cases.

W. G. Smillie and S. B. Pessoa of Sao Paulo, Brazil, also have found carbon tetrachloride to be extremely efficient in removing hookworms. A small doses given to adults has been proved to remove 95 per cent of all the hookworms harbored. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Carbon tetrachloride is a worm and parasite remedy of great potency. It has shown itself to be the best vermifuge for treatment of hookworm in a country where this disease predominates. It gives little discomfort to the patient is palatable, required no preparation of the patient and when pure is apparently not toxic in homeopathic doses, all of which features are of advantage in a popular campaign.

History

This substance was proved by Dr. Burt in the 1x trituration. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Carboneum produced sore-throat, great craving for acids and a peculiar convulsive attack described as follows: Spasms, commencing on the tongue, passing down the trachea to the lungs which prevented him from breathing for about two moments, then gradually left and went to stomach, arms, hands and legs.

It took four persons to hold him, two at his hands and two at his feet. Spasms both tonic and clonic. Lasted two hours then gradually ceased. The hands had no feeling in them, they were closed and could not be opened.

Wrists perfectly pulseless, hands shriveled and cold. At 2 p.m. the spasms came on very suddenly the same as the first time but not so violent. They did not affect the lungs this time but were much harder in the stomach. Lasted three hours then gradually ceased. He seemed at the point of death. The spasms left him so weak that he could not lift his hand to his head nor sit up.

History

Carbn-s. combines many characters of its two elements. It was first brought into notice by its effects on workers in rubber works. This remedy has a deep and disorganizing action and an immense range of action and symptomatology.

In the Medical Argus, H. H. Crippen has collected from several sources instances of intoxication of workers with Carbn-s. The action on vision was very marked in many cases. Myopia, asthenopia, achromatopsia, dyschromatopsia, cloudiness and atrophy of optic disc, central scotoma for light and colors, retinal congestion, arteries and veins tortuous, veins are distended, arteries contracted, optic discs pale. Everything seemed in a fog, as if a spider's web over objects, green or red.

One patient had complete right side hemiplegia, following sudden loss of consciousness, blindness of right eye and great impairment of vision of left. Loss of memory, especially for words, was a very frequent symptom. Delusions were common: "Heard voices and believed he had committed a robbery," "sensation of a hole close by into which he was in danger of falling."

Homeopathic

Carbn-s. is very useful in patients broken down by abuse of alcohol. Lack of vital heat. Sensitive patients worse cold, wasted muscles and skin and mucous membranes anesthetic.

Chronic rheumatism, sensitive and cold. Diarrhea every four to six weeks. Paralysis with intense congestion of nerve centers. Tabes. Sensory difficulties in limbs.

Comments

Here is an acute case: A girl, aged 15, employed in vulcanizing works, was exposed to the fumes one whole day. Before this, she had from the fumes, frontal pains and heaviness of the head. After this, the pains became more violent and were accompanied by painful contraction of masseters, then by stiffness of neck and vertebral column, finally of legs and arms.

The contracture was generalized, but nowhere complete, though the jaws could not be separated. Ulcerative stomatitis ensued and tartar accumulated on the teeth.

Among the chronic effects are: Digestive disorders of extreme severity. Tremor, giddiness, ringing in the ears with poor hearing inability to sleep, muscular weakness, more or less ataxia, strong increase of mechanical muscular irritability, disturbance of sight and sensibility. Incontinence of urine, impotence.

E. Case has cured with Carb-s. 30c in a slender, nervous woman, the following symptoms: "Sensation, as of a weight between the scapulae, compelling her to bend forward. Throbbing in the dorsal spine as if a heart were beating there. Constipation with ineffectual urging to stool. hemorrhage of bright blood from rectum after stool. Itching of anus after stool, also in the night. Feet swollen, hot and throbbing in the evening."

Carb-s. has the flatulency of Carb-v. and the abdominal soreness of Sulphur.

Carb-s. produces eruptions of herpes and impetigo, discharges excoriating and producing violent itching. It corresponds to the herpetic diathesis.

The pains are burning, tearing, jerking and stitching and are apt to return at regular intervals for a long time. Pains come and go quickly. The periodicity shows itself, as in diarrhea, which comes every six weeks.

Sensitive to warm, damp weather. The worse from warmth, common to Carb-v. and Sulph. shows itself in "Toothache brought on by warm food."

A feeling of vibration and trembling in whole body, particularly in hands. Vision better in evening in twilight after eating. Sleep is restless with tossing in bed. Anesthesia of skin and mucous membranes.

Pharmacy

Carc. Carcinosisin Foubister. Carcinosisin Burnett. Carcinosisinum. The nosode of Cancer. Carcinosisin was originally made from the discharge of a breast cancer. Historical dose: All potencies, thirtieth and 200c potency.

History

A nosode prepared from breast cancer by Foubister. It is claimed the Carcinosisin acts favorably and modifies all cases in which either a history of cancer can be elicited or symptoms of the disease itself exist.

This is one principal nosodes of cancer and is also one of Foubister's preparations. Clarke used it more frequently than any other as a miasmatic remedy. Burnett, who also had a number of different cancer preparations and followed his instincts largely in their use and selection. Carc. can be used as an intercurrent remedy.

Burnett's used it in treating depraved inherited conditions in children, such as infantile self-abuse with good effects, which Clarke has confirmed. Clarke had met with a suicidal tendency in several cancer patients. So that the cancer nosodes may be appropriate in mental cases, especially where the heredity points that way.

Comments

Phatak states "A nosode prepared from Carcinoma is claimed to act favorably, modifying the cases in which there is a history of carcinoma or the disease itself exists. Can be used as an intercurrent remedy along with indicated."

This is a good remedy for children, when you have many miasms in the case. A lot of stubborn asthma cases in children, worse from vaccinations respond to Carc. Worms. Cases where nothing is working and you come down and they have cancer in the family, then this is the remedy.

If cancer is on one side or both sides of a family, there may exist a Cancer miasm. That does not mean that the child has a predisposition toward cancer. The children have blue sclera, a blue spot in the whites of their eyes or blue shading in the whites of their eyes. Sometimes that comes normally and goes away.

Foubister studied 200 pregnant women who had cancer and then he studied their children. The children had a tendency to birthmarks. Carcinosis is another one that has deep pigmentations in children. Strawberry angioma. This remedy has been used to prevent keloids.

Foubister made an observation that people who lived under severe fear for long periods of time often needed this remedy.

Carcinosis is for sexual abuse and for abusive relationships. This leads to the suppression of emotions. Major symptoms include chronic insomnia and all kinds of phobias.

Carcinosis is better or worse by the seashore. Down's syndrome. There may be a history in a child of severe acute infections, especially whooping cough and pneumonia and the child never totally recovered, their vitality never came back.

This is a major remedy for glandular fever, mononucleosis and chronic fatigue.

Carcinosis is better from naps, which is also a keynote of Phosphorus.

This is a remedy that looks like many other polycrest remedies. It's better dancing like Sepia, it has craving of cold drinks like Phosphorus, it has moles, birthmarks and freckles like Thuja, it has the fastidiousness of Arsenicum, it also enjoys thunderstorms like Sepia. Carcinosis is a remedy that antidotes the ill effects of vaccinations.

Herbal

To Rademacher the medical alchemist, are we principally indebted for this remedy.

It was with him a primary liver remedy, all its manifestations originating in some disorder of the liver. According to Burnett, Card-m. is primarily a liver and spleen remedy.

Burnett relates the case of a girl of sixteen who had severe attacks of vomiting for three months with pains in abdomen. The vomiting was relieved by remedies symptomatically related, but the pains were not. An examination showed "liver and spleen both very much enlarged so that they seem to fill the abdomen." Card-m. tincture in 5 drop doses, night and morning soon cured the patient.

Proell also recommends it in disorders of liver, spleen and kidneys caused by abuse of alcoholic beverages and especially beer. He relates two cases: one in a cook who had symptoms of cirrhosis of the liver and general dropsy which made her features unrecognizable and one in a worker in a brewery who developed dropsy.

Both were cured by the tincture. The brewery man, thinking the remedy was intended to be purgative and thinking the 4 drops prescribed would not be sufficient took the whole amount, 2 1/2 drachms, at one dose without markedly bad effects and was quickly cured.

Comments

G. F. Laidlaw gives a condensed translation of Rademacher's remarks about Card-m.: He regards hematemesis as most frequently due to chronic disease of the spleen, less frequently to disease of the liver. People who have long suffered from pains in the left hypochondrium are apt to vomit blood after which they are relieved.

Rademacher regards the bleeding as often beneficial and says it should not be checked too soon. In the treatment of hematemesis he says it is best to use a remedy that acts on the epigastric region without irritating the stomach and interfering with the healing of the lesion. Such a remedy he found in a decoction of the seeds of Card-m.

He used to give Opium before, but this, he says in some people "produces an array of symptoms similar to those seen in severe hemorrhage and might aggravate and condition." He adds: "It is probable that many small hemorrhages of the stomach escape notice because there is no vomiting and that it is in this manner that obscure abdominal complaints are sometimes suddenly relieved or cured."

Dudgeon has given an account of Windelband's and Kunze's experience with the remedy. Windelband in treating a woman for chronic swelling of the liver with Card-m. incidentally cured at the same time some "colossal" varicose ulcers.

This experience led Dudgeon to cure a large number of like cases with the same remedy. He also cured cases of gastro-intestinal catarrh, nosebleeds, metrorrhagia, hemorrhoidal flux, dependent on portal congestion. Tenderness of the liver, bilious fever, symptoms resembling peritonitis and stitch-in-the-side have been cured by it.

Kunze commends the remedy in addition in cases of spasm of the stomach, pains contractive, vomiting occurring at the climax, cold rising from precordium to throat, feeling of spasmodic constriction, pressive, shooting pain right side of abdomen spreading to back or shoulder.

Kunze has cured with it pains in hepatic and splenic regions accompanied with hemoptysis or expectoration of viscid, lumpy mucus and evening fever. Even tuberculosis pituitosa has been cured by it. Local muscular rheumatisms dependent on liver disease.

E. A. Cook gave Card-m. 1c to a patient suffering from liver congestion, swollen veins of legs, Hemorrhoids and headache with great benefit to all the symptoms. On the second day the patient developed these new symptoms, which she had never had before and which alarmed her greatly: "Great giddiness with inclination to fall forward and a sudden and profuse nosebleed followed by great relief."

A striking cure by Card-m. in "Miner's Disease" is recorded by Proell.: An old miner in the gold mines of Bockstein suffered from the so-called "Bergsucht" (miner's disease). His chief symptoms were: earthy complexion, eyes dim, hardness of hearing, mucous coating on tongue, loss of appetite even for his favorite food and tobacco.

Great dyspnea and palpitations on going up-hill, spleen and stomach distended, with much gas eructated, constant borborygmus, constipation alternating with diarrhea, but the latter more frequent, evacuations gray, urine scanty and pale, skin dry as if withered, great weakness, pulse slow and weak.

Especially remarkable was the disposition of this man. Formerly cheerful, he is now joyless and apathetic, the most important events he took no notice. He was given the tincture of Card-m., a few drops four times a day. Unable to effect any alteration in his food, drink or regimen.

A month after this he returned looking much better. On asking him how he was, he replied: 'You have made a new man of me.' Almost all the former symptoms had disappeared and given place to the opposite. His complexion was fresh, his eyes sparkled, he was cheerful, wished to live and work, had good appetite, motions brown, more urine passed, pulse normal. The said he now for the first time know what it was to be well and he remained so for many years.

Proell adds that Card-m. is indicated where there is a relaxed state of the mucous membrane of the stomach.

Evidenced by flatulence and diarrhea, especially when the stools are clay-colored. Much fatigue is experienced, worse after eating, when riding, on awaking, frequently accompanied by yawning.

Chilliness is prominent, on awaking, at night, worse uncovering. Coldness of knees. Head very sensitive to cold. Sweating of forehead and back after meals.

Stitches, drawing pressure are prominent, also radiating pains, constriction, band-sensation and cramps.

Carlsbad aqua action has been observed on some healthy persons, but the bulk of the symptoms, many of which are strikingly peculiar, have been obtained from patients under treatment. They are however, characteristic and have furnished the indications for many homeopathic cures.

W. J. Guernsey cured with it sciatica in an old man with cramp in left ankle. In Siberia beavers feed on the bark of the birch, which may make a difference in the effects of Castoreum from different countries. Castoreum resembles Ambra, Moschus, Ignatia and Valerian.

Caspari proved Russian Castor., Nenning that of Southern Europe. Teste places Castoreum in the Thuja group with Plat. and Bism. Thuja completed the cure.

Teste quotes from Trousseau and Pideux the following indications, which he confirms:

(1) "Amenorrhea, accompanied with painful and tympanitic swelling of the abdomen. We mean the cases where only a few drops of blood escape from the uterus with a sort of uterine tenesmus."

(2) "The case of colic to which Castoreum seems to be principally adapted are of the nervous kind, that seem to be particularly seated in the small intestine. They are accompanied with paleness and cold sweats, a sudden sinking of strength, as if the very principle of life had been struck down.

They are without any alvine evacuations, come suddenly after lively emotions, a cold on the bowels or by the feet, as after long exposure to a cold rain. Castor. causes jerking in small groups of muscular tissues, a sensation of heaviness of whole body, trembling of limbs.

Tincture or trituration of root. Historical dose: Trituration, tincture and all potencies.

Herbal

Caulophyllum, "The Blue Cohosh," is closely related to Cimic., "The Black Cohosh," in its action, though belonging to a different family of plants. It has only had one proving, that by Dr. Burt, the majority of the indications having been derived from tradition and clinical experience.

Caulophyllum's special sphere in labor is:

- (1) when pains do not come regularly,
- (2) when they disappear from exhaustion and
- (3) when they are too painful.

Nash regards "internal trembling" as a strong characteristic when associated with the weakness, he has cured long-continued passive hemorrhage associated with these symptoms.

Homeopathic

Caulophyllum acts most markedly on the female generative organs and on rheumatic states. This is a woman's remedy. Lack of tone of the uterus. Left ovarian and left infra-breast pains. Leucorrhea in young girls or during pregnancy. Many of the complaints are due to uterine disorders.

Comments

Caul. has been given with success for chloasma and pityriasis versicolor, curing dysmenorrhea at the same time. The pains are intermittent and paroxysmal and fly about from place to place, generally worse at night.

Great nervous excitement, tremulous weakness over whole body. Can scarcely speak. Sleepless, restless, nervous, recalling the effects of coffee, which is incompatible with it. In rheumatic disorders the special sphere of Caul. is the small joints and muscles.

Nash prescribed Caul. 3c for a lady of forty, seven months pregnant, who was attacked with severe pain and swelling of all the finger-joints, wrapping them in mustard was the only thing that relieved her sufficiently to allow her to get sleep.

Caul. relieved the finger pains, but caused such severe labor-like pains that it had to be discontinued for fear of causing miscarriage. The bearing-down then ceased and the finger pains returned and continued until delivery, when they ceased for a few days.

Then the lochia increased to a flooding—passive, dark, liquid with great weakness and internal trembling (not visible externally) and now the terrible finger pains returned. Afraid to give Caul., other remedies were tried, but in vain. At last Nash gave Caul. 200c, which rapidly cleared up the whole case.

Causticum

Pharmacy

Caust. Hahnemann's tincture of acris sine kali. Causticum. Potassium Hydrate. Obtained by distilling a mixture of slaked lime and a solution of potassium sulphate.

The chemical composition of Causticum is still uncertain though it is considered to be potassium hydrate or Caustic potash. Tincture with spirit. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, third to thirtieth potency.

History

Causticum is one of the great polycrest medicines for chronic diseases. Kraft has cured cases of incontinence following over-distention of the bladder owing to want of opportunity to attend to the call to urinate at the time, such as occurs in shop-girls and school-girls, who cannot leave their tasks.

Guernsey commends Caust. in the after-effects of burns and scalds. Patients say, "I have never been well since that burn." Its caustic properties may be its "signature" here. "Burning," indeed is one of the notes of Caust.

Guernsey gives "sensation as if lime were being slaked in the stomach." "Soreness" or "rawness" are also very characteristic, appearing in hemorrhoids and anal disorders (worse walking or sitting) in which Caust. is in the very first rank among remedies. Soreness and rawness accompany cough symptoms and urinary symptoms.

Homeopathic

Causticum acts upon the nerves, motor and sensory and on muscles voluntary and involuntary of bladder, larynx and limbs. Weakness, progressive, loss of muscular strength, causing increasing uncertainty of control over the muscles, finally ending in paralysis of single organs or parts.

Manifests its action mainly in chronic rheumatic, arthritic and paralytic disorders. Burning, rawness and soreness are characteristic. Indicated by the tearing, drawing pains in the muscular and fibrous tissues with deformities about the joints.

Progressive loss of muscular strength, tendinous contractures. Broken down seniles. In catarrhal disorders of the air passages and seems to choose preferable dark-complexioned and rigid-fibered persons.

Comments

The leading feature of the Causticum effects is paralysis, showing itself both in voluntary and involuntary muscles. The weakening effect of potassium in allopathic overdosing is well known and is strongly brought out in the Causticum provings.

Paralytic weakness. Paralysis of single nerves or single parts. Ptosis, facial paralysis, paralysis of tongue of limbs of vocal cords of bladder of rectum, lead paralysis. Related to the paralysis are convulsions, chorea, cramps, starting, restlessness, twitching.

Contraction of flexor tendons. Trembling.

Neuralgic and rheumatic affections, tearing, drawing pains. There is a headache which draws and tears through the body. Glandular indurations are prominent. In children there are many symptoms of scrofula. There is a weakened and emaciated appearance, especially about the face, the abdomen being large.

Scrofulous inflammations about eyes, ears and scalp. Skin is dirty-white. The paralytic element comes out in slow learning to talk and walk and stumbling on attempting to walk.

In chorea the right side is more affected than left, words seem to be jerked out. During the night the legs are constantly "on the go." This kind of restlessness is characteristic of Caust.

The mental state is timid, nervous, anxious. Apprehensive of impending misfortune. Anxiety of conscience as if she had committed a crime. Full of fearful fancies, worse at twilight. Sees fearful images when closing eyes. Melancholy. Taciturn and distrustful inclined to fits of anger with scolding. Memory fails (mental paralysis), any attempt at mental exertion causes symptoms, such as stitches in temples, tension in head and scalp, especially forehead to temples.

There is a sensation as if there was an empty space between the bone of the skull and the brain, better by warmth. Headache, cannot keep upper eyelids up. Vertigo, excitement of brain and spine incapable, tends to fall forward or sideways (locomotor ataxia) with anxiety, weakness in head, sight as if through a fog, skin dry and hot, constipation. Eruptions on scalp behind ears. Sounds re-echo unpleasantly, an ordinary voice sounds loud.

Facial paralysis from cold drought, neuralgia of right cheek-bones to mastoid process worse at night. Jaw joints affected with rheumatism. Sickly, sallow, low-spirited expression.

Nash cured a severe case of prosopalgia with Caust. The patient was emaciated and debilitated by long suffering, pains came in paroxysms and were of a drawing nature. She had suffered from eczema at times before the neuralgia appeared. Sulph. had been given in vain. Caust. 200c rapidly cured.

The Caust. weakness may result from grief of long standing or from disease. Accumulations of mucus in larynx and fauces, catarrh of throat and Eustachian tubes with tinnitus and reverberation. Difficult swallowing of liquids.

Constant sensation as if lime were burning in stomach with water-brash. Pressure and fullness in abdomen as if it would burst, much worse by food. Gripping cutting better by bending double, worse after least food or tightening clothes, menstrual colic (Caust. will cure after failure of Coloc.).

Obstinate constipation (paralysis of rectum), stools covered with shiny coating of mucus, hemorrhoids, unbearable by walking, by thinking of them, by touch. No remedy has such well-marked aggravations of anal symptoms as Caust. A characteristic is "Passes stool best standing." Spasm of rectum prevents walking. Painful pustules near anus discharging pus, blood, serum. Itching at orifice of urethra.

Difficult, frequent urination with spasm of rectum. Paralysis of bladder is apparent. Bedwetting, especially during first sleep, worse winter, better in summer. Tendency to escape during the day from any extra exertion, laughing, walking. Epilepsy has been cured by Caust., when fit occurs in sleep and urine escapes. Coughing expels urine.

Prostatitis and urethritis. Itching scrotum, cannot retain urine. Blood with semen. Sexual appetite in women is abolished. Constant indifference, the only time there is any inclination is after the period. Sadness during period. Period too early too abundant after it, a little blood passes occasionally, smelling badly. Nursing women lose their milk after exertion or long sleep.

Hoarseness with dry cough and redness of fauces, the result of weather or catching cold, worse in morning. Aponia: paralysis of vocal cords. Dry, hollow cough with mucus on chest, patient cannot expectorate, must swallow the phlegm raised. A characteristic is: "Cannot cough deep enough for relief." Rawness and burning down throat and trachea.

Rheumatism tends to stiffen joints and contract limbs. Warts are a notable feature in Caust. on hands, on face and especially on margins of eyelids.

When on hands they are usually found on finger-tips or close to nails. Nails are crippled. Old, large inflamed and indurated warts. Burning itching on face, discharging acrid fluid which forms crusts.

Macfarlan confirms the following: "Sudden severe pains commence in the left hip-joint, lasts a short time, feels as if it had been injured, legs very sore or rather the lower limbs ache and feel tired." "Forearms in front very sore to touch and pressure, muscles of limbs sore generally."

Caust. is a remedy to be remembered in intermittent fevers. One peculiar symptom is, "sweat coming after the chill without intervening heat." Periodicity is marked: periodic, paroxysmal attacks, twice a day to every two, three or four weeks an attack, at new moon.

Comments

Burnett, following Hale is our chief authority for Ceanothus. It has been recently proved by I. C. Fahnestock, but its place had already been made clear by clinical use and definite clinical symptoms have been observed.

Diarrhea and dysentery (compare Cascara and other Rhamnee) have been frequently observed in patients taking Cean. for spleen disorders. Leucorrhoea, profuse, thick, yellow with pain in left side.

Fahnestock's two provers took repeated doses of the tincture and both had severe symptoms. One had malaria five years before, treated with the drug Quinine. This prover suffered more acutely than the other and in the end had to be treated. Nat-m. 30c soon put an end to his symptoms. The other prover had practically identical symptoms but less severe.

Comments

Hellert was bitten by a coral snake. "During the few seconds which it took him to take the antidote out of the little bag which he wore suspended round his neck, he was seized with violent pains at the heart and throat, but he had scarcely chewed and swallowed a small portion of Cedron of the size of a small bean, when the pain ceased as by magic. An oppression and general prostration remained.

He chewed another portion of the same fruit and applied it to the wound externally and in another quarter of an hour all he felt was a slight colic, which disappeared after eating a little. This colic was followed immediately by a copious evacuation of a substance that looked like curdled milk, white with a slightly yellowish tint" (Teste).

Other cases were reported. The great characteristic of Cedron is a clock-like periodicity in the recurrence of the symptoms, accurately periodic neuralgias intermittent fever commencing the same hour every day or every other day.

In fever there is: Red face in hot stage, thirst with desire for warm drinks. Profuse perspiration. "Excitement before chill" is peculiar to Cedr. Fevers of low, marshy regions in warm seasons and tropical countries.

General debility, languor and fainting. Malaise. Trembling. Complaints after sex (chorea in women, neuralgia in men).

Epileptiform convulsions during menses. Swollen sensations, numbness of whole body. Worse after sleep, lying down, night, (objects appear red at night, yellow by day) in open air, before a storm, chills in persons returned from tropical climates. Better standing erect.

Halbert relates a case of malarial fever in a soldier. Chills and fever were clock-like in regularity of recurrence. Liver and spleen were much enlarged.

Anemia was extreme and there was this additional peculiarity: intermittent stomach pain occurring with the febrile crises.

In conjunction with these conditions there was a manifestation of chorea symptoms involving face and shoulders mostly, the twitchings being troublesome in the inter febrile state. Often there were debilitating hysterical spasms, the heart became irritable and sometimes irregular.

After other remedies had failed to make any impression, Cedr. cured in only three weeks, the improvement setting in immediately.

Rapidity of action appears to be a characteristic as with Bell. The great predominance of nervous symptoms will be evident in the symptoms of Cedr., also the strong sexual excitement it causes. Numbness, enlarged sensation, malaise, sensation as if paralyzed. A large number of symptoms appear on left side but right side of head, face, right elbow and right deltoid are affected.

Cement

Pharmacy

Cem. Cement rock. The preparation for possible use is made by triturating a good cement with sugar of milk on the decimal scale. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

Cement maker's itch is a new disease of occupation, entirely distinct from ordinary itch, being neither parasitic nor contagious, but produced by the chemical or mechanical action of the cement upon the skin.

Some physicians have attributed the corrosive action to calcium carbonate and to sulphuric acid. Fresh cement, however, does not contain carbonate.

It is questioned whether slaked lime or even partly slaked lime will produce this effect. Masons working with lime mortar are seldom if ever attacked with cement maker's itch. The quantity of sulphuric acid in cement is very small. Planets: Saturn.

Homeopathic

Cement maker's itch and ordinary itch have one symptom in common intense itching, especially at night. The itching appears to be increased by the heat of the bed and also more annoying in summer than in winter. Scratching may produce infected wounds and swelling.

Cement maker's itch is an occupational disease, which is likely to be followed by eczema and other complications. The managers of cement works should always require their workmen to wear cotton gloves and garments tightly fastened at the neck and at the wrists. Cement workers on arches or ceilings should wear masks. Both gloves and masks should frequently be washed.

Clinical

Eczema. Cement maker's itch. Itching.

Allen reports: A bright servant-girl who took it seemed stupefied for several days. The earliest symptoms appeared a quarter of an hour after taking the medicine, viz., those of the arms together with dull pains in the hypogastrium, shiverings and general heat, especially on forehead, which was covered with sweat.

These were followed by a stupefying pain in temples, frontal protuberances orbital arches and eyes. Next came the following symptoms: Dimness of sight, appetite alternating with nausea increase of saliva and vomiting, running of the nose, lachrymation, belchings, rapid sinking of strength, general uneasiness, confusion of mind, weariness, dull sunken eyes, spasmodic sweating, itching and pricking in the skin, drowsiness and thirst.

A state of reaction after four or six hours brought some quiet. Next day in the forenoon or towards evening, the above symptoms reappeared but with less violence and some of them assumed a periodic form.

Then ensued coryza, colic, diarrhea, fevers of various types, pains in the arms, dry cough, etc. The action ended with the symptoms of catarrh of angina and of fever in the forenoon and with confusion and pain in the forehead. The above gives a general idea of the action of this remedy.

Symptoms

MIND

In the Centaury state, the mind is easily impressed with the needs and demands of others, to the point of wishing to do good and be of service. The balance of perception is tilted in favor of others. Feelings of guilt and loyalty may further bind and narrow one's way.

Life may seem more as drudgery than adventure. A mistake of the service oriented person is to overlook growing personal weakness and exhaustion.

As needs of others seem predominant, one's own needs assume less importance and one's health and strength may be undermined slowly. Serving others may be a refuge for some, a binding up of one's identity with a positive attitude, a way to build self-esteem and find approval by others.

There may be sadness within, due to unfulfilled potential or unanswered needs. There may also be disappointment, resentment or frustration in the helpful person due to the insensitivity and neglect.

The person may also lack courage to make their needs known, or their ethical principles may prevent them from entertaining resentful impulses, therefore they can't assert their needs to others.

Historical dose: Take two drops from the stock bottle into a one ounce dropper bottle, (add brandy or alcohol, if this bottle will be used for days or weeks). This is the dosage bottle, take a few drops straight into the mouth or as needed in a little water or juice.

Herbal

The remedy Cerato belongs to Bach's group of for those who suffer Uncertainty, along with Scleranthus, Gentian, Gorse, Hornbeam and Wild Oat. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Lack of assertiveness may exist, the person is rather retreating and allows others to lead. In regard to uncertain, unsteady gait or posture, especially if caused by reluctance and inhibition, Cerato will give physical assurance. In diseases of the immune system, when it does not know how to achieve health, Cerato may aid in reviving inner strength and help the organism decide on a strategy of defense.

Internal agony, preoccupation with oneself, hampering self-observation and shyness are common (Mimulus, Larch). Cerato is indicated in speech problems arising from inner uncertainty, it is also of service during language development when inner certainty needs to be improved.

Further, it could assist in developmental disorders by helping the mind gain in certainty and enhancing learning potential (Chestnut Bud). In other distortions of expression of personality, fixed ideas and irrational anxieties, inappropriate laughing and immature behavior.

In mental illness, this remedy can be of service in gender identity disorders, anxiety disorders, delusions, elimination disorders and sexual disorders (Cherry Plum for the last two), or whenever there is an underlying dynamic of uncertainty of consciousness expression.

Symptoms

MIND

There is lack of self-esteem and easily stimulated feelings of inferiority. One is impressed by others decisive demeanor, wants to measure up, wishes for recognition and approval by others. There is continued doubting, uncertainty and lack of personal decisiveness and self-assurance.

The person in the Cerato state relies heavily on the advice of others, often admiring their decisive move through life and feeling less adequate themselves. They are overly impressed with outward shows and trends, people in charge of themselves and the situation, while they feel hampered within, often blaming themselves for this uncomfortable state.

There is mistrust in one's capacity to judge correctly and make the appropriate decision. Dependent personality disorder, Cerato addresses the excessive dependence on the approval and advice of others (Centaur). In regard to anxiety disorders and delusions, Cerato can help those lost in their own reality.

Hale found it of most use in cases of vomiting of half-digested food. It was mostly been given in lower triturations by homeopaths and in five to ten grain doses by allopaths. In the latter doses it has produced decidedly narcotic effect in two cases.

Some have obtained great success with it in sea-sickness. Spasmodic coughs of nervous or reflex origin have been successfully treated with it. Comments

"There is in Chamomilla a little thread of symptoms and nearly always found running through it. This is a spiteful, sudden or uncivil irritability" (Guernsey).

In spite of its obvious analogies with Puls. Ip., Acon. and Con., it has marked and exclusive characteristics of its own. "It increases the general nervous sensibility and stimulates the cerebral functions: a property that seems to give rise secondarily to the various organic alterations that Cham. is capable of producing and for which it has so often been given with success."

Hahnemann says, "It appears to diminish in a great degree, the excessive sensitiveness to pain and the violent derangements which pain occasions in the moral condition of the patient. This is the reason why it appeases a multitude of sufferings to which coffee drinkers and persons who have been treated with narcotic palliatives are subject.

And this is likewise the reason why it ought not to be given to those who bear pain patiently and with resignation. I mention this rule here, for it is of very great importance."

Teste remarks on this that Cham. antidotes not only Coffea, but also Causticum and most of the members of the Causticum group. Hypersensitive with great irritability and crossness is the leading note of the Chamomilla effects.

The pains are unbearable and drive to despair, the patient insists that the doctor shall cure them at once. Prostrating debility insists that the doctor shall cure them at once.

Prostrating debility as soon as the pains begin.

The diarrhea of Cham. is hot, yellowish green stool like chopped egg offensive, excoriation round anus. Intertrigo of children. Wind colic, belching of wind worse the condition (this is characteristic). Menorrhagia dark clots, fetid, temper always worse before and during flow, (Nux-v. also, but Nux-v. is conscious of it, Cham. is not).

Threatened miscarriage caused by anger. The pain of labor or at menses is centered in the womb, bearing down, painful contractions, unbearable, they extend down thighs and are felt in the back. Leucorrhoea is acrid, watery, corrosive, smarting. Cham. has inflammation of the parotid glands, nocturnal salivation.

Rheumatism compelling to get up and walk about, thirsty, hot, almost beside himself. Muscles of face and hands twitch. Insomnia of children, start in sleep, twitching of hands and face, hot sweat of head and face, one cheek red. Puts feet out of bed, soles burn. Aggravation by heat is one of the most prominent features of Cham. worse by warm food. Cham. may be the remedy in croup or croupy cough, if mental symptoms and time conditions correspond.

W. H. Baker (Rochester) has recorded such a case. A chubby boy, light hair, blue eyes has a croupy cough. Acon. and Spong. at first controlled it, but afterwards failed.

The cough became a loose, rattling, suffocating cough, the mucus came up in the throat and nearly suffocated him. Paroxysms at midnight. During the day he was hoarse, ever impatient, nothing seemed to suit him. Cham. 100,000c cured, improvement setting in within two hours.

"Chamomile tea" has removed the night-sweats of tuberculosis.

Dr. Anderson of Dover, Delaware, relates the case of a man who had to change three to five times every night. A cup of weak chamomile tea was ordered every night. The second night there was slight diminution, the third he only had to change twice, the fourth once and after that there was no more trouble. The plant in this case was probably Anthemis cotula or wild chamomile of U. S. Dr. Anderson learned its use from "an old woman." But the sweats of Chamomilla are also very marked.

Nash mentions a characteristic in the association of numbness or alternation of it with pains. He relates the case of a man who had very painful rheumatism of left shoulder and who got no better from the usual remedies, but was speedily cured by Cham., the indication being: "Numbness with the pains."

Nash differentiates the restlessness of Acon., Ars. from that of Cham. by the absence in the case of the last of fear of death. The Cham. patient "would rather die than suffer so."

(5) in coffee drinkers, Nux-v. Cham. has bad temper during menses, Nux-v. has malicious temper.

(6) toothache worse in bed at night: worse from warmth, Sulph., Merc., Puls.

(7) indignation and its effects, Coloc., Staph., Nux-v.

(8) Bry., aversion to be looked at, Ant-c., Chin., Stram.

(9) better by moving about, Rhus-t., Ferr., Verat. has maddening pains compelling to walk about, but there is none of the feverishness and excitement of Cham.

Relations

Cham. antidotes: Coffee, and the narcotics. Especially opium as it corresponds to its secondary effects, useful in nerve storms when morphine is discontinued. Antidotes: Camph., Nux-v., Puls. It is antidoted by: Acon., Alum., Borax, Camph., Cocc., Coff., Coloc., Coni., Ign., Nux-v., and especially Puls. Puls. and Cham. antidote one another and precede or follow each other well. Complementary: Bell. in diseases of children, Cham. acts more on nerves of abdomen, Bell. more on cranial nerves.

Chaparro acts as a tonic and anti-periodic. Chronic diarrhea. Tenderness over liver. Stools little pain, but with much mucus. Dysentery.

Clinical

Diarrhea. Dysentery.

Comments

Dr. Bleim reports the following cases cured:

(1) Mr. A. of New Orleans, eighteen months ill with dysentery, was sent to Dr. Bleim under suspicion of tuberculosis.

Before seeing the doctor he met a stockman who said he could cure him, having been himself cured with the remedy after a like experience. Chap. was the remedy, a teaspoonful of the extract three times a day. After three doses there was considerable improvement. He took no more medicine and had no further trouble.

(2) Boy, 12, had been treated for several months by Dr. Bleim with indifferent results. Chap., half a teaspoonful three times a day. In forty-eight hours the discharge ceased and the bowels became normal.

(3) An acute case had improved rapidly under Merc-c. and colon-douches, but came to a standstill at a certain point: three or four stools a day, more or less pain, no appetite, very weak.

Chap. was ordered, at a teaspoonful dose three times a day, immediate general improvement in forty-eight hours the bowels were normal within a few weeks strength was entirely restored.

Dr. R. T. Knox of Gonzales, narrates his own case: Dysentery three years. Nothing gave more than temporary relief. Discharge after discharge of quantities of bloody matter accompanied with much pain. Ravenously hungry all the time in a land of plenty.

Under the advice of a farmer he was persuaded to drink freely of a tea made of the shrub, before each meal. The infusion had the appearance of sparkling beer and was most intensely bitter. In three days there was great improvement. In two weeks the bowels were under control, stools consistent, partly molded, sleep good. Recovery was perfect. Chaparro is prized by Mexican doctors as a tonic and anti-periodic.

Cherry Plum can help people suffering from diseases of the nervous system to find added peace in mind and body (Rock Rose). Extreme nervousness with a threatened nervous breakdown (Rock Rose, Vervain). Nervous twitches, grimaces, gestures are common in severe cases. The body expresses the mental struggle taking place within.

The remedy is of service in tic disorders, elimination disorders and sexual disorders (Cerato). Mounting tension can release suddenly in unpredictable outbursts of violence. The physical concomitant symptoms related to speech problems can benefit from the calming influence of this remedy.

Cherry Plum, when indicated treats phobias of all kind, (Mimulus, Rock Rose). Fear of sudden physical or mental failure, as in stammering, or in diseases such as epilepsy or repeated fainting. It is indicated every time there is fear of losing control over one's faculties, one feels helpless in face of overwhelming stress.

In severe pain, when one feels almost unable to bear the strain and torture, when the mind is at the verge of breaking down, Cherry Plum brings relief. During drug rehabilitation, physical and emotional cravings can be reduced.

In some cases, unbearable pain can lead to homicide or suicide.

MIND

In the Cherry Plum state, the mind is over-strained and out of balance. This state may come on after prolonged mental effort leading to failing nerve power and exhaustion. Cherry Plum is used in treatment of delusions and psychotic states when the boundaries of consciousness are disintegrating and the mind becomes subjected to unconscious and primordial forces.

Cherry Plum can be of service in nervousness, shyness and stage fright, these being unwanted mental states which one tries to fight within oneself. Great anguish and distress are experienced in the Cherry Plum state, with the intense fear of losing control. The Cherry Plum state maybe trapped in the thrill or excitement to do forbidden things. There arises the fear that all balance will be lost and the impulsive, unwanted thoughts will win.

All problems in regard to impulses fall under the action of this remedy (Impatiens, Holly, Vervain). Cherry Plum also has obsessive-compulsive, perfectionist or ritualistic behavior with the intention to avoid succumbing to the dreaded impulses. Impulses dictating to carry out certain acts, dangerous to oneself or others, or socially unfit. Many crimes and suicides are committed, while being in the Cherry Plum state.

(greater celandine)

Pharmacy

Chel. Chelidonium majus. Greater Celandine. N. O. Papaveraceae. Tincture of entire fresh plant, at time of flowering. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture and lower potency.

Herbal

Chelidonium is a poppy and therefore allied to Opium and Sanguinaria with both of which it has many features in common.

It is closely allied to Lyc., when Lyc. seems indicated but fails to act Chel. should be considered.

The juice of Chel. causes vesication when applied to the skin. The juice is yellow like bile. Probably based on the "signature" of the bile-like juice it was recommended as a remedy for jaundice by Galen and Dioscorides.

Given on the broad ground of organ-homeopathy in material or semi-material doses, it has achieved notable results in cases of liver disease. An extract used locally in cancer cases has gained a reputation in the old school.

Homeopathic

Chelidonium acts upon the liver, portal system, right side of abdomen and right lower lung. A liver remedy, covering many of the direct reflex symptoms of diseased conditions of that organ. The chief "keynote" for its employment is a continued, bruised, aching pain at the inferior angle of the right scapula. Chel. acts on spleen and kidneys as well as liver.

Jaundice. Yellowness and bilious disturbances are its marked features. Bilious complications during pregnancy, lung disorders. The jaundiced skin and the constant pain under inferior angle of right scapula, are certain indications. Paralytic drawing and lameness in single parts. Chelidonium is predominantly a right sided remedy.

The great lethargy and indisposition to make any effort is also marked. Horror of motion. Feels tired on little exertion.

Comments

Yellowness of the skin, ulceration. Chel. is also a venous medicine. Paralytic symptoms are prominent. There is great debility and drowsiness after eating and on waking. Prefers hot things. Desire to lie down after a meal. Aversion to move, feels tired on least exertion. There is the Opium sleepiness and yawning.

Chel. is a predominantly right-side medicine (like Sang. And Lyc.) and besides the right infrascapular pain and the action on the liver it has neuralgia over the right eye and in right malar bone and also an action on the cecum and right ovary and on the base of the right lung. In pneumonia with bilious symptoms it is one of the chief remedies. Chel. like Lyc., has fan-like movement of alae nasi in chest disorders.

There may be either constipation, clay-colored stools or diarrhea with bright yellow stools. There is nausea of pregnancy with desire for food better by drinking milk. Desire for hot drinks, only water almost boiling will stay on stomach. Chills or creeps accompany the headache or the jaundice.

The dirty yellow complexion produced by Chel. with other signs of cachexia, strongly suggest cancer and the action of Sang., its relative in cancer of the breast is well known. Also Opium in addition to its narcotic influence is believed by Snow to have a retarding effect on cancerous growth.

A typical Chel. case, simulating cancer is recorded by C. M. Foss. A man, 45, had catarrh of the nose and, at the same time of the stomach: had been told he had cancer of the stomach. Tenderness over stomach with sinking, gone feeling, at times reaching a state of painful anguish, sickness at stomach, all symptoms better by eating. Chel. 6x cured at once.

"Aversion to cheese" is an indication for Chel. in many gastric conditions. Teste, who proved Chel., places it at the head of a group which includes Caps. And Viol-o. He mentions the analogy between the juice of Chel. and the juice of Garcinia morella, Gamboge. Both are bright yellow and pass to orange and brown on drying.

Some old-school authorities have recommended the juice of Chel. as a substitute for gamboge as a hydragogue cathartic. Among its ancient external uses was, as an application in eye disorders to chronic ulcers and to warts.

In Teste's proving he emphasized the following symptoms: 1:30 p.m. : dull and heavy, deep-seated pain in whole right side of chest and right shoulder without cough, but with embarrassed respirations. This pain, which is at times accompanied by dull beatings in the chest, does not allow him to draw a long breath, it is not perceptibly aggravated by the motions of the arm. The pain is particularly felt in the axilla and under the shoulder-blade.

A sort of numbness of the muscles in the region of the liver and in the right side of the neck, face and head, apprehension of threatening pneumonia, great anxiety, constant desire to stir and change one's position.

"Extremely profuse emission of a whitish and foaming urine." "2 p.m. : drowsiness which is so marked, even in the open air, that she is near falling asleep while walking, lasts half an hour."

According to Rademacher Chel. acts on the center of the liver. Chel. has a strong action on the respiratory sphere. A characteristic cough is caused by a sensation of "dust" in the air passages.

St. Clair Smith relates a case. A young lady had for several weeks a dry, racking, fatiguing cough night and day, worse night, no expectoration and no pain. She looked completely worn out. The cough was excited by a sensation as if throat and larynx were full of dust. Chel. 3c, a powder every two hours, was given. She only took three when the "dust" left the throat and with it the cough and never returned.

Carleton Smith cured this: "Dry cough through day with pain and stitches right side, severe hoarseness 5 p.m. , voice scarcely audible."

In rheumatic disorders Chel. has a large field. Edema, heat, tenderness and stiffness are the leading indications.

Here is a case: A baby girl had rheumatism of both ankles for a week, when it settled in the right one, which became greatly swollen, very tender, painful and hot. Constipated for two months previous, whitish stools. Chel. improved in twelve hours and entirely cured in a week. In another case of acute rheumatism of feet and ankles, supervening on a slow, remittent fever, Chel. cured after the failure of Rhus-t. and Bry. The patient was a girl of six. Both ankles were affected, feet much swollen and extended. The slightest movement or touch extorted screams. The only relief was constant bathing with hot water.

W. A. Burr cured a case of right sciatic rheumatism of ten years' history in a very corpulent woman, age 55. In her case there were aggravations coming on in the afternoon and evening of each day and lasting into the middle of the night.

During the paroxysms the outer ankle and lower leg became cyanotic, swelling around ankle, constriction above, great sensitiveness to touch and motion. Very nervous during the spells. Great external sensitiveness, aversion to touch and worse from it.

Pharmacy

Chelo. Chelone glabra. Balmony. Snake-head or Turtle-head. N. O. Scrofulariaceae. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture in one to five drop doses.

Herbal

Chelone has been used by old-school practitioners and eclectics as a liver and worm remedy. Burnett has used it as an organ-remedy in liver disorders. Planets: Jupiter, Moon.

PAGE 420

Homeopathic

Burnett's indications are "pain or soreness of the left lobe of the liver and extending downwards." Chelone acts in a line between the hilus of the liver and the fundus of the uterus.

A remedy in liver disorders with pain or soreness of the left lobe of the liver and extending downwards. Soreness of external parts, as if skin were off, debility. Dyspepsia with hepatic torpor. Jaundice. Round and thread worms. It is an enemy to every kind of worm infesting the human body. Dumb ague. Malaise, following intermittents.

Clinical

Cachexia. Debility. Dumb-ague. Dyspepsia. Jaundice. Liver, disorders. Malaise. Quinine. Worms.

Comments

According to some observers it antidotes the Quinine cachexia and is a remedy for "dumb-ague,' i.e. , ill-defined paroxysms of aching and fever following severe malarial fevers. "soreness of external parts, as if the skin were off, especially about elbow," has been confirmed as an indication. "Debility from loss of tone of digestive organs or liver or from exhausting diseases" (Hale.) One to five-drop doses of the tincture have been given.

Chenopodium anthelminticum

Pharmacy

Chen-a. Chenopodium anthelminticum. Jerusalem Oak. N. O. Chenopodiaceae. Tincture of fresh plant. Solution of oil of seed. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies. Oil of Chenopodium for hookworm, 10 minim doses every 2 hours for 3 doses.

Herbal

Oil of Chenopodium has been used for hookworm and roundworm. Several cases of poisoning have been reported in which all the symptoms of a stroke and the consequent right hemiplegia with aphasia were reproduced.

Stertorous breathing with the very peculiar rattle as of a ball rolling loose in the trachea. Heavy breathing with flapping of cheeks. Other symptoms are vanishing of sight and roaring in ears with (right) hemicrania. Roaring in ears as of cannons going off, also ringing, deafness. Planets: Moon, Mars.

Homeopathic

The most characteristic pain of Chenopodium is a dull pain below the angle of right scapula and nearer the spine than the similar pain of Chelidonium. Chenopodii glauci Aphis has a similar pain below angle of left scapula. Stertorous breathing. (Op.) Sudden vertigo. Meniere's disease. Affections of auditory nerves. (Nat-sal.)

Chenopodium has problems in the ears, serous or bloody effusions in the labyrinth, chronic otitis media, progressive deafness to the voice, but sensitive to sounds of passing vehicles and other sounds, buzzing, absent or deficient bone conduction, a consciousness of the ear, hearing better for shrill, high-pitched sounds than for low ones.

Comments

In three cases of poisoning reported by Allen the following symptoms were produced:
(1) Insensible, convulsed, foaming at the mouth. All remembrance of taking the poison was lost on his recovery.

(2) Deep, heavy, stertorous breathing accompanied by a very peculiar rattle, as if there were a ball rolling loose in the trachea, pulse small, weak frequent and feeble, eyes insensible to light or external objects, convulsive movements of right half of body, limbs cold, any attempt to swallow threatened instant suffocation.

(3) (This patient took 1.5 oz. of worm-seed oil and 30 drops of turpentine.). Disagreeable belchings, nausea, staggering like a drunken man, deafness to the sound of the voice, but exquisite sensitiveness to the sound of passing vehicles, they sounded like cannons in his ears, also annoying buzzing.

In smoking he would scarcely light his cigar before he would lay it down again and take a fresh one, arguing perversion of taste. By afternoon the mantelpiece was strewn with cigars only partly used. No disposition to engage in conversation.

Aphasia: he clearly wanted his attendant to get or do something but could not make him understand. The attendant wrote, "Don't understand," showed it to him and gave him, paper and pencil. After great efforts he wrote distinctly words with no meaning.

The voice and hearing became progressively worse but he heard the tea-bell three stories below promptly and to the astonishment of the family, got up and walking deliberately into the dining-room. He did not seem to know his accustomed seat and sat in the wrong place. During the afternoon became completely aphasic.

Finding himself unable to express his ideas, this seemed to amuse him much and he laughed heartily. Whatever he did he would keep repeating. When the doctor entered he arose and shook him heartily by the hand and then sat down. In about a minute he arose, solemnly came forward and again shook hands. This he repeated twenty times in as many minutes.

He then went through the performance of washing his hands in an empty basin and repeated this many times. Sitting at tea he ate with apparent relish, taking singly tea and bread. While grasping a piece of bread, there was a distinct spasm of right forearm and hand, fingers firmly clenched, hand forcibly flexed on forearm.

Assisted to his room, his walk was entirely natural, when put to bed showed some resistance, striking at the doctor. He at once commenced to groan tossed from side to side of the bed, suggesting abdominal distress. Soon became unconscious, right arm paralyzed, dragging helplessly.

Third day, frequent twitching and stiffness of right limbs, culminating in a one-side convulsion in early morning of fourth day. At noon of third day, copious involuntary urination in bed.

This continued to the end, except when drawn off. In the afternoon, heavy breathing and the flapping cheeks of a stroke appeared. Constant regurgitation of yellow frothy material from mouth, smelling of worm-seed, as also did the perspiration. This material was at times so profuse as to embarrass respiration.

During one of the attacks of dyspnea and while in drenching sweat, which suggested dissolution, he was gently turned in bed, immediately a general convulsion set in, markedly opisthotonic, lasting ten minutes, despite the use of chloroform. By this time jaundice appeared, having been only noticed the day before. Five days from taking the dose he died in profound coma with high temperature. The significance of these symptoms needs no pointing out.

The peculiar deafness corresponds nearly to the "cerebral deafness" described by Cooper in which the watch-hearing is good while the voice-hearing is bad or absent. Hemiplegia with contractions of limbs and certain epileptic seizures are strongly portrayed in the poisoning.

When given as a vermifuge it frequently produces progressive and long-lasting deafness.

Linnell has cured with it two cases in which there was deafness to voice-hearing but sensitiveness to other sounds. In one case there was implication of left labyrinth with slight chronic otitis media of both ears, deafness left ear several years, no tinnitus, consciousness of the ear, sensitive to musical sounds, deaf for watch and voice, hearing diminished.

He has also cured: Roaring tinnitus synchronous with heart. Sensitiveness to cold.

Hearing better for high-pitched than low-pitched sounds.

Aesculus hippocastanum

Pharmacy

Chestnut Bud. Aesculus hippocastanum. The young twigs with shoots are boiled for half an hour, the water is strained and used as medicine. Historical dose: Take two drops from the stock bottle into a one ounce dropper bottle, (add brandy or alcohol, if this bottle will be used for days or weeks). This is the dosage bottle, take a few drops straight into the mouth or as needed in a little water or juice.

Herbal

The remedy Chestnut Bud, together with Clematis, Honeysuckle, Wild Rose, Olive and White Chestnut belongs to Bach's group of Not Sufficient Interest in Present Circumstances. These remedies help those not fully engaged in the here and now.

Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Impulsive physical conduct and some degree of hyperactivity or restlessness can be concomitant physical features. One may bring the self and others in danger through recklessness, or disregard important physical needs.

In developmental problems, attention-deficit and hyperactivity disorder and disruptive behaviors, Chestnut Bud helps the mind to settle into restful concentration and retain the learning material. In personality disorders marked by a refusal to change and acquire empathy for others, such as in antisocial, criminal and personality disorders, (Vine).

Symptoms

MIND

In the Chestnut Bud state, the mind is restless and impulsive, easily distracted, absent-minded and not set on learning in the factual and moral sense. The mind in need of Chestnut Bud is marked by jumping from topic to topic, or superficially through a text, or rushing ahead impatiently. Consequently, learned material is not contained very well, although capacity for memory is usually present. There may be inappropriate laughing or gliding over reprimands.

One is easily carried by positive as well as negative emotions. They may appear unreasonable, easily swayed, naive, emotionally unstable, impulsive, defiant and somewhat lacking in integrity or depth. People not willing to obey laws and adjust to a normal socialization process often are in need of this remedy. They do not learn readily from their experiences, are often heedless or careless.

Herbal

Chicory belongs to the group of Over-care for Others' Welfare as classified by Bach. The other remedies in this group are Rock Water, Beech, Vine, Vervain. This group deals with mental, emotional imbalances in regard to caring for or controlling others. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

The inactive Chicory type may show an unspoken need to be loved. (Scleranthus). A face prone to pout or look hurt and withdrawn may portray the Chicory state of self-pity. Ulcer patients as well, if prone to tyrannical outbursts and yet falling ill whenever affection is withdrawn.

Others resort to anorexia, vomiting, nausea, bulimia and over-eating in an effort to draw attention and love to the self. Bronchial asthma, with difficulty in expiring, can rest on emotional hurt and self-pity. They are self-protective with an anxious attempt to hold in emotions.

In the diseases of soft tissue rheumatism and rheumatoid arthritis of a psychosomatic origin. Overly controlling and service-oriented, while suppressing hostile emotions and demanding attention when sick. Hypochondriasis, pain disorders. Chronic constipation.

Symptoms

MIND

In the Chicory state, the mind is bent on taking care of others according to one's own design or idea. The care received may be interpreted as being too forceful or unnecessary.

There develop sentiments of self-pity in the care giving person, a sense of not being appreciated for one's efforts.

The Chicory mind has fairly rigid opinions and ways of working with others. There is the conviction that one's perceptions and opinions are correct and one assumes the right to enforce them on others. There is also the tendency to be overly careful with details, one's daily duties and cleanliness. Possessiveness of people, as well as of goods, is another indication for this remedy.

Chicory can help heal the preoccupation with pain without physical findings. In personality disorders, based on attention seeking within the sexual sphere. This remedy is indicated in the treatment of feigning of sickness in order to gain attention, (Chestnut Bud, Heather). Eating disorders, (Crab Apple, Mustard). In hysterical neurosis, when the body expresses through illness the unvoiced need for attention and love.

There is the need to be the center of attention and be appreciated. Self-pity, sullenness and pouting are common, if affectionate attention is not offered. If consoled, there may be annoyance and persisted in self-pity, as if to arouse even more sympathy in the other. People may resort to manipulation, power play, pretense, threat, possessiveness, or feigning of sickness in order to convey that they feel hurt, offended, or overlooked. If attended to, they may reject being consoled which increases their self-pity and may create further alienation in others.

Cinchona bark was to Hahnemann what the falling was to Newton and the swinging lamp to Galileo. Dissatisfied with the explanations of the action of Bark in curing ague that were current in his time, Hahnemann took the powdered Bark himself, being in health and behold, a malaria attack ensued.

A repetition of the experiment produced the same result. Further experiments revealed that action of Bark which is the opposite of "tonic" positively debilitating in fact, already referred to.

It is useful to remember that Ipecac. (as well as Galeum and Mitchella) belongs to the same natural order of plants as China and the relation of the two to intermittent fever, hemorrhages and gastro-enteric disturbances is very similar. Coffea also belongs to the Rubiaceae and is nearly allied in many of its nervous symptoms to China.

The tincture of China is anti-septic, destroying, ameboid motion and retarding tissue change. It weakens the heart and impairs the circulation.

China helps with congestions and hemorrhages, anemia and complete relaxation and collapse.

The result of suppression is thus sketched by Hahnemann's master-hand:

"True, he (the patient) can no longer complain that the paroxysms of his original disease occurs any more on regular days and at regular hours, but behold his earthy complexion, his bloated countenance, his languishing looks!

Behold how difficult it is for him to breathe, see his hard and distended abdomen the swelling of the hypochondria, see how his stomach is oppressed and pained by everything he eats, how his appetite is diminished, how his taste is altered, how loose his bowels are and how unnatural and contrary to what they should be, how his sleep is restless, unrefreshing and full of dreams.

Behold him weak, out of humor and prostrated, his sensibility morbidly excited, his intellectual faculties weakened, how much more does he suffer than when he was a prey to his fever !"

The number of patients who have been consigned to an early grave by quinine probably falls short only of the number that mercury can claim. When first introduced it was (as chloral and hundreds of other poisons have been since) declared on the highest authority to be incapable of harm "in whatever dose it may be taken."

The debility in which China is particularly indicated is such as is caused by an excessive drain of animal fluids, as great loss of blood, excessive suppuration, loss of semen, also after prolonged strain of overwork, mental or bodily. A "pumped-out" condition and the sensitive, irritable state of mind that accompanies such.

The typical fever of China is the intermittent from marsh miasm, tertian or quartan in type. Chill and heat without thirst, thirst occurring either before or after chill.

The chill is followed by long-lasting heat, generally with desire to uncover, face fiery red often delirium, profuse and debilitating sweat following.

In the apyrexial period the face is a sallow dingy yellow, the spleen is enlarged and painful, the appetite is totally lost or else there is canine hunger, the feet swell and as soon as the patient closes his eyes for sleep he sees figures. Hectic fever is also characteristic of the drug. Typhoid and gastric fever. Periodicity is a leading characteristic both in fever and neuralgias. "Worse every other day" is characteristic.

Nash cured a case of acute rheumatism with Chin. on this modality. hemorrhages occur from every orifice of the body. Koch and others have attributed the hematuria of African intermittents to quinine. There is terrible irritability always worse at night. Loss of sight, deafness, ringing in the ears. Great sensitiveness to touch. Even a current of air blowing on the part causes great pain (compare Plb.). Everything tastes bitter, even water (everything except water, Acon.).

The mental state shows in addition to the irritability, the following among other symptoms: "Aversion to be looked at." "Pumped out" (Sil.), unable to think. Delirium from the loss of fluids (as hydrocephaloid). Fixed ideas. There is a desire for suicide: "Intolerable anxiety about 8 p.m. and 2 a.m. , he springs out of bed and wishes to take his own life, but does not go near the window or take a knife (compare Alum.) with heat of the body without thirst."

The sensitiveness accompanies the headache, which is congestive, throbbing like many hammers hammering on temples, ringing in the ears, worse by slightest contact (better by hard pressure), by drought of air, by open air. Weak eyes and ringing in ears, such as follow depletion. The nose, ears and chin are cold, complexion sallow, dingy, yellow. Neuralgia is generally infra-orbital.

Thick dirty yellow coating on tongue, bitter taste on waking. Aphthae of weakly people. Canine hunger, especially at night. Hunger after meals with feeling of emptiness. If a meal is late, he is sure to suffer from it. Total loss of appetite.

Full feeling after the least food, but belching only better temporarily. After eating, a lump under mid-sternum. After fruit, diarrhea. Dyspepsia after loss of fluids. Nausea worse on sitting up. Stomach so weak it cannot tolerate any food at all. Very sour stomach. The digestion of Chin. is slow. Chin. is one of the most flatulent of medicines.

Guernsey describes it as an uncomfortable distention of abdomen with a wish to belch up or a sensation as if the abdomen were packed full, not in the least better by eructation.

Gastric troubles of children who are always wanting dainties, irritable on waking, bad taste, white tongue. Tympany coming on early in a case. Spleen aching, sore. Liver swollen, sensitive. Feeling of subcutaneous ulceration.

Gall-stone colic, duodenal, catarrh, jaundice. Fermentation in bowels, frothy, sour diarrhea. Yellow, watery, undigested diarrhea with much flatus and no pain. Diarrhea of dark inky fluid, stools frequent at night, only after food during the day. It is useful in cases where purgatives have been abused if Nux-v. fails to cure.

Excessive seminal losses. Menorrhagia, metrorrhagia, post-partum hemorrhage. Leucorrhoea before period, painful pressure towards groins and anus, fetid or bloody leucorrhoea before period with contractions in inner parts.

The breathing has important characters: Asthma, wheezing, suffocative catarrh and paralysis of lungs in old people. Respiration labored, loud and stertorous with puffing, blowing out of cheeks on each expiration.

E. Carleton relates the cure of a case of spasm of the glottis in a middle-aged man. Attacks sudden. 3 a.m. suffocation seemed imminent.

At length with one tremendous effort, while sitting bent forward, a little air would be forced into the lungs in spite of the epiglottis with a noise audible at a distance. After each succeeding expiration the inspiration would become less difficult.

Chin. 200c cured. Among this patient's other symptoms were: Unhappy, idea that he is pursued by enemies in business. Scalp sensitive. Humming, throbbing in ears. Thirst for cold water. Saliva found on pillow in morning. Stomach sore to touch. Flesh sore to touch.

The sleep also should be carefully noted, especially the dreams: he cannot get rid of his dreams even after waking, the impression continues. He cannot get wide awake, head remains confused and stupid.

Chin. corresponds to hectic and to many conditions of the lungs which are attended with hectic. Suppuration of the lungs, especially in alcoholics. Weakening night-sweats. Prostration, chilly, wants to be wrapped up but cannot bear the fire.

A. Villers cured with Chin. 30c a girl, twenty, who had after a chill, a pain in right hip, worse by every movement and which she could only describe as being like the pain in the legs which occurred before the menses.

She was pale and had much hard nursing work. The menses were scanty and she was weak. Three days after taking Chin. The pain was gone after having persisted for five months.

With Chin. Clarke removed the dropsy and relieved all the other symptoms of a case of cirrhosis of the liver in a hard drinker. He remained at his work for many months, but in the end his old habits proved too much for him and he died from an acute illness following a cold.

In this connection may be mentioned the effect of the tincture of China, Cinchona rubra especially in removing the craving for alcohol in alcoholics who wish to reform. Ten to thirty drops two or three times a day is the usual dose for this.

Though where the general symptoms correspond the potencies would probably do better.

The rheumatism of Chin. is characterized by soft swelling, pale red, very tender to touch. C. M. Boger had such a case in second and third metatarsophalangeal joints of left foot. The patient said: "With my slippers on I am in agony, but if I put on tight shoes the feet feel pretty comfortable."

Hering says China is useful after abuse of chamomile tea when hemorrhage from uterus results.

Pharmacy

Chin-s. China Sulphuricum. Sulphate of Quinine. Trituration. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, first to third trituration, also thirtieth potency and higher.

History

Chin-s. closely resembles China in its effects, but as it has been proved separately and as observations of the effects of over-dosing have supplied many additional symptoms, the homeopath has plenty of guidance in the selection of one in preference to the other. In old-school practice the Sulphate of Quinine has almost entirely taken the place of the crude Bark as a remedy.

A dose of China sulph. in high potency sometimes arouses suppressed malaria and brings back the paroxysm. Aside from its undoubted influence over malaria, it is indicated homeopathically whenever there is a marked periodicity and spinal sensitiveness.

Comments

Chin-s. is even more powerful as an anti-septic than China off. and it is probable that it is in virtue of its property of antagonizing the malarial poison that it suppresses intermittent fever when it does not cure. It only cures when the fever corresponds to its own type. When a fever is "suppressed" there is generally an unholy alliance between disease-force and drug-force, which is expended on some part of the organism, resulting at times in lifelong ill-health.

The "Quinine cachexia" is well known—pallid complexion, emaciation, deafness and ringing in the ears, enlarged spleen, disposition to shiver and great debility. Periodicity is extremely well marked, the attacks returning at the same hour each day. In intermittents the onset may anticipate. Skin flaccid and sensitive to touch. Red rash over whole body with severe stinging, followed by desquamation.

Other major symptoms are: Headache extending from occiput to forehead. Whirling in the head like a mill-wheel. Twitching of left eyelid, worse in the evening. Aphthae in weakly people. Tartar on teeth.

Hunger at night. Prolapsed rectum, especially in children. hematuria and hemoglobinuria.

"Black-water fever" has been developed by Chin-s. in intermittents. Koch deserves much credit for showing that the worst features of African fevers are due to over-dosing with Quinine and not to the disease.

E. W. Sawyer relates this instructive history: He learned from his cook that her brother, (age 16) could not take a particle of Quinine without causing a profuse flow of blood with the urine, sometimes within half an hour, always without pain. This had followed every time his doctors had tried to "break his ague" with Quinine.

A year later a farmer's wife, age 60, came to Dr. Sawyer to be treated for bloody urine unattended with pain or uneasiness. She attributed it to strain from walking two miles on a slippery road. She had been for months under Hygienist treatment without benefit and was alarmingly weak from loss of blood. Rhus-t. 200c, Ham. Ix, Erig. Ix, Chin. Ix, Ferr-m. 2x were given in succession in vain.

At last, calling to mind the case of the youth, he gave Chin-s. in 1/16 grains doses three times a day and a prompt cure was effected. Chin-s. causes painfulness and swelling of varicose veins during a chill.

Great sensitiveness to external influences. All discharges debilitating. Weak and nervous, a little exercise causes sweat from least exertion. Head gradually breaks into sweat when perfectly quiet. Palpitations. Sleeplessness and over-stimulation of nervous system.

Chin-s. is one of the medicines which have the "sinking sensation." Tyrrell had a patient in whom in any potency it caused her to become "deathly sick and faint, thought she would die, could not raise her head, felt she would sink through the bed." Sacch. alb. produced in her the same symptoms and she accused the doctor of having given her Quinine.

One observer, who gave Chion. to a nursing woman who had liver disorder with jaundiced tint, noticed that while rapid improvement of the liver symptoms occurred, at the same time the milk disappeared and the menses returned. The medicine was stopped and Sabal. given and the milk returned. Six weeks later Chion. was again given and identically the same result took place." Jaundice with arrest of menses" should be a strong indication.

Chloral Hydrate has a marked effect on the skin, producing rashes, erythema, ecchymosis, purpura etc. These symptoms have been used homeopathically with much success, especially in the treatment of allergic hives.

Chlol. has a marked action on respiratory organs. The brain, eyes, urinary and sexual organs and skin are most affected. Mucous membranes are inflamed and ulcerated.

Comments

W. S. Gee cured with it a terrific headache of several days' duration: dull, heavy aching in forehead, coming on each morning 8 a.m. , worse sudden motion, worse lying down, better in open air. The 6c gave great relief though it aggravated at first, the aggravation occurring ten minutes after each dose. One dose of the 25x cured permanently.

The brain tissue is probably congested in the same way as the skin in the urticaria of the drug. Urticaria gives a good illustration of the effect of the drug on the minute tissues.

The brain is congested, hard, full, pressing pains in head. Eyes injected, the eyeballs feel too large, lids swollen, heavy, can hardly lift them. Asthma and wheezing respirations are probably due to an urticaria condition of the lung tissue.

A symptom that is very significant is this: When lying on back inspiration was through the nose, while expiration was blown from the lips as in a stroke. The heart's action is increased with oppression. Palpitation, hypertrophy. Later there is paralysis of heart.

Heart dilated or weakened with peculiar fullness and lightness of chest and sense of emptiness in stomach.

The sense of sinking and oppression at the pit of the stomach is marked and shows a profound action on the solar plexus. The insomnia for which Chloral is suited is that due to over-fatigue. Snoring in sleep.

Chloramphenicolum

Pharmacy

Chloramphenicol. Antibiotic drug. Its chemical structure is: The chemical peculiarity of the molecule is its Nitro group, it is the only antibiotic which contains it. Historical dose: Trituration, tincture and all potencies, 5c to 30c.

History

Extracted initially from bacterial cultures of the streptomyces venezualae, chloramphenicol or chloromycetin is obtained today by synthetic methods. Digestive absorption is good and rapid. The intestinal concentration of the antibiotic is active, causing a change in the intestinal flora, which is common to the wide spectrum antibiotics, (Tetracyclines).

Toxicology. In the new-born and nursing child, Gray's syndrome can be seen, which is characterized by: Vomiting, meteorism, cyanosis and irregular respirations, terminating in death by the collapse of the vasomotor system.

In the adult, serious disturbances of the bone-marrow can be seen, ending in aplastic anemia, hypoplastic anemia, reduction of the amount of blood platelets, reduction of granulous leukocytes, consumption, occurring as long as 1 to 3 months after the treatment.

The symptomatology was established by O. A. Julian, referring to the toxicology of chloramphenicol and resulting in a Homeopathic proving from January to March 1970 with the participation of six provers of whom three were women. The potencies used were 30c, 7c, 3x and placebo. Planets: Moon.

Chloroformium

(chloroformum)

Pharmacy

Chlf. Chloroformum. Chloroform. Solution. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, higher potencies or sixth.

History

Chloroform is the well-known anesthetic, the general effects of which in arresting sensation need no description. Unlike Ether and Nitrous oxide, which require to be administered without air, chloroform vapor must have abundance of air inhaled with it or asphyxia results.

Its most noteworthy effect is complete relaxation of all the voluntary muscles of the body. It may cause death by paralyzing the respiration or the heart. Its use is contraindicated where there is brain softening, fatty heart, alcoholism or albuminuria.

Marcy cured with it a case of arachnitis ending in convulsions.

It is especially indicated in delirium where excitement and violence predominate, desire to kill. Paralysis of voluntary and involuntary muscles and special senses. Chloroform will dissolve gall-stones and cases have been treated by the injection of Chloroform into the gallbladder. Symptoms were obtained by Dr. D. Macfarlan with the 6c potency.

Planets: Moon.

Chlorpromazinum

(largactil)

Pharmacy

Chlorpromazine. It was marketed under the name of Largactil. Historical dose: All potencies, 3x to 30c.

History

Chlorpromazine's properties are characterized by an action which is anti-spasmodic, anti-convulsive, hypnotic and sedative. Recent pharmacological research indicates that even in extremely weak doses, chlorpromazine induces abnormal changes in the form of the bacteria sometimes associated with increased pathogenic power, which alters cellular permeability and stunts the growth of the bacteria or kills them.

Clinical

ly, Chlorpromazine is used as an anti-emetic sedative and as a potentializer of the activity of several medicating agents (general anesthetic, hypnotics, analgesics). In psychiatry, Largactil is prescribed for cases of acute psychosis, maniacal excitability and for sleeping cures. The present study is finished product of three different areas of research.

A proving, following the Homeopathic method, was carried out from December 1963 to January 1964 by sixteen members of the 'Association of Homeopathic Doctors', Matunga, Bombay under the direction of Dr. N. P. Pai. The potency was 30c. A toxicological summary was made by O. A. Julian, which concerns the toxic consequences of chlorpromazine treatment.

E. Z. Bacon has recorded two cases of chlorine poisoning. The first was in a boy of five, who after passing through diphtheria to apparent complete recovery, was suddenly seized with symptoms of croup: loss of voice, crowing inspiration, prolonged expiration incessant dry cough, great restlessness, high fever, profuse perspiration.

The symptoms were worse lying on a lounge by the fire, better when lying in his mother's lap and still more relieved by being carried about. During the previous illness Platt's chlorides had been placed in the room as a disinfectant and it occurred to the doctor that chlorine vapor is much heavier than air. He himself lay down on the lounge and in a few minutes felt the irritating vapor and began to cough and hack. This soon passed away on sitting up.

The removal of the chlorides has a remarkable effect on the child, cough and respiration were greatly relieved. But the relief came too late, as the cause was not discovered for several days during which time the patient had become steadily weaker and he died the same afternoon.

The other case was that of an old lady who suffered from chronic bronchitis and on January 2, 1892, developed an attack of laryngitis. In three days she was well, but the two subsequent weeks, on exactly the same day, a fresh attack occurred. The fact was, as the doctor discovered, his patient went to the back room, where chlorides were kept, every Monday to wash a few things she did not care to send to the laundry. The chlorides were banished and though the washing was continued there were no more attacks of laryngitis.

Dr. Bacon adds, that since giving up the use of disinfectants, other than plenty of fresh air, he has never had laryngeal complications in scarlatina or diphtheria, though his neighbors have had plenty. Whitman recommends chlorine water as a efficient palliative in a fit of asthma.

He begins with 10 drops, then in five minutes 20 more and than in another five minutes, half-a-teaspoonful, in a little water. It greatly facilitates expectoration.

In typhus fever Goullon, recommends chlorine water, five drops every two or three hours until the tongue is dry. Clarke has had excellent results from the 12c and 30c in nasal catarrh and in breathlessness remaining after acute bronchitis.

Trituration and all potencies, high and low.

Herbal

Theobroma is Greek for "Food of the Gods". Mayan Indian legend has it that the cocoa tree was a gift from the gods. The Mayas believed the drink made from the cocoa seeds would nourish them after death. The Aztecs believed cocoa would relieve their fatigue and stimulate their mental and psychic abilities.

The Spanish invaders were surprised to find that the cocoa beans were valued more than any other substance, even more than gold. The Aztecs used a chocolate drink as a base in many of their medicinal formulas.

The Aztec nobility used the chocolate drink favored with vanilla and spices as a pleasurable drink. The main ingredients of chocolate are caffeine, phenylethylamine, theobromine and theophylline.

Feeding with waste Chocolate led to fatal poisoning in calves. The animals showed excitement, stared about in all directions, walked with exaggerated strides and had convulsions. One calf died, possibly from heart failure.

My 22 month old male Tibetan Terrier ate a large bar of Bourneville chocolate. He became extremely hyperactive, panting, restless, couldn't stay still in one place, ran up and down stairs. He came up and licked me, went away, came back, went outside, came inside and two hours after eating the chocolate, he gave a large moan, wail and died instantly, outside in the sun. Heart attack. Planets: Moon.

Comments

The provings of Chocolate also had some positive and curative reactions on some of the provers: While waiting to be served in shop, felt more relaxed, would usually be irritable, (curative). Less depressed, "feel alive and human now and then" Usual feeling of depression is gone, (curative). Felt calm and relaxed. Cruising through life. I feel withdrawn as if standing back, a feeling that everything will be okay. Temper has improved. Have been more able to let small annoyances pass. (curative). After daughter ruined his massage table he normally would have been very mad and yelling instead he expressed himself well and calmly. Less irritable and snappy before menses, (curative).

I feel more confident than usual, more able to tackle difficult projects. A decisive mood. Quite firm with daughter. Less inclined to give in and be manipulated. Since the proving, have felt much more confident and have much more direction. I feel less anxious about the future and am doing more. I feel larger than ever before. I basically feel a much better person. More relaxed and confident, expressed my opinions in a more open and outspoken manner.

Vision and hearing more acute. Senses of smell, touch and vision more acute and more dominating. Left right division in her face can be felt. Her usual sensation of left right body split has been much more defined. Later on during the proving this "split" became more balanced than usual and felt much more integrated, (curative).

The hot itch that is always on my head has been better since starting the proving. (curative). Vision more acute, small details seem much sharper. Things look better. In the evening, my eyes are dull, but in the daytime, everything seems sharp. I feel I have got a greater vision sideways, peripheral vision is broader and clearer and also clearer forward vision. Itchy ears, external auditory passage, worse morning on waking, (curative).

Felt less dissatisfied and restless during proving, less need to get out or get fresh air, generally more positive, (curative). Urgency and strong desire to travel decreased since proving, (curative). Felt full of energy, wit and bounce. Feel relaxed, creative and optimistic, unlike my usual sluggish pre-menstrual state. (curative).

Red, itchy areas around nose and mouth, better during proving, (curative). My sense of smell is much more acute. I could smell pineapple juice and grape juice from the other side of the room, and from nearby, they smelled overwhelmingly strong and I felt that I had to dilute them. I can smell what people drink from the other side of the room and where to locate it.

Clear coryza with the sensation of a tube or straw stuck up the back of the nose, right side extending to right eye. During the last few days, post-nasal mucous and a sensation of mucous in the solar plexus. I usually sleep with my mouth open as I cannot breathe through my nose, but now my mouth is perfectly sealed with my tongue filling up all the space, and my nose is free-flowing. (curative).

Tongue looks and feels much cleaner than for the past three years, during which it has been black or furred orange (this black tongue has been with her constantly since a dose of Nitric Acid). (curative). Afternoon nausea 4-5 p.m. , better during proving, (curative). Feel I am assimilating food much better now, (curative).

Averse to cooked food, ice cream, greasy things, margarine, cheese and butter. Desired crunchy as when you eat celery. Desire to eat things the shape of spaghetti, like food out of tubes. Desire for sausage. Want tea with sugar.

Felt hungry, but didn't know what to eat. Very hungry, but with a tingling in the throat and a desire not to swallow. I don't want anything in my stomach, especially not solids, with less desire to swallow. Feels empty in solar plexus and stomach, sensation like hunger but wasn't. Usual smelly flatulence gone, (curative).

Tip of little finger which was numb for weeks before proving is now better, (curative). My hands feel more powerful, but less coordinated, especially for fine work.

Uncoordinated with my hands. When I had to open two door handles at once, I wanted to use my mouth. Incoordination, limbs feel heavy and slow to respond. I don't feel I can carry such heavy weights as normal. My arms don't feel comfortable carrying heavy weights.

No stool and no desire for stool since six days, but no discomfort. Bowels are fine yet feels as if movements are difficult and unsatisfyingly small and hard with a strain to go. In actuality bowel movement is normal size and consistency.

Her usual sensitivity in dorso-lumbar junction of spine, which is much worse to touch, much improved during proving, (curative). The sensation developed so that it seemed that my back moved higher up and outwards towards the scapulae, as if opening out.

My back feels different, firmer and curved inwards and there is a tightness in the hypochondria. Each day my back feels more and more powerful and broader. This broadness has gradually extended from shoulders down towards hips. I feel more powerful in the hip region.

Usual cramping period pain during menses disappeared, (curative). Pain breasts before menstrual period is less than usual, (curative). Clumsiness before menses better, (curative). No fishy smell during sex, (curative). No more pain on intercourse, (curative). Menses lasted longer, five days instead of the usual two, and the blood seems older and more brown. Period started three days early, but none of the usual backache.

Dreams more clearly remembered, more coherent, sustained and continuous. Normally they were fragmented and meaningless. After abdominal eructation's, fell asleep and dreamed about a man who said he had an abdominal ulcer.

Dream that I had given birth to a baby prematurely because the doctors had wanted to look at it to see how it was getting on. Once born, it was very small, but perfect. There was a debate about whether to replace it through the birth canal, but it was decided it could stay out. The baby was strapped in its fetal position to my stomach. This was a warm and comfortable feeling.

I began to worry that the infant was not receiving any nourishment. People told me it would die, but I didn't believe them. They said it was good to carry something strapped to my abdomen as it would minimize the feeling of loss, but that I should replace the baby with a bundle of rags. I saw the logic of the baby's requirements not being met, but apparently had not worked out a way to resolve this.

I suddenly feel extremely tired, yawning. Slept until 5:30 p.m. , an unusual length of time. Very tired. Tired, desire to curl up with hot water bottle and go to sleep, during period.

Less tired than usual after meals. Less sleepy during the day and particularly at 3:00 p.m. when I do not need my usual afternoon nap. (curative). I fell asleep instantly yesterday and also woke quite cheerful, both unusual. On waking in the morning, sprang out of bed without her usual tiredness and non-usual desire to go back to bed, (cured).

Blood pressure increased to 140/100, usually 120/85. From 6 p.m. onwards a aggravation of abdominal bloating, flatus, nosebleed, headache and eruptions. Aggravation evening from 6 to 9 p.m. Alternating states of high energy and productivity while warm, but when cold, complete inertia and tiredness, must go to bed. Felt tired, alternating with feeling clear. Generally feel better outside. Out of doors, feel cold, but desire to be outside in the sun, warmth and bright light and move around in short bursts.

Generally better from motion with an intense desire to be walking outside. Feels much colder, especially hands and feet. Very chilly. Although a warm day, Sat in the study by the fire and could not feel the warmth from it. Freezing cold. Never as cold as this before. Desire for heat in evening. Shivering. Trembling with the cold. Cold, damp aggravates. Dry, warm weather ameliorates.

Feel warmth throughout body with a slight sensation of dampness. Warm flush after eating in evening. Wakes at night feeling hot. Tendency to take colds. Tired, as if a cold or flu would come on in evening. Cold-like symptoms appear suddenly. Uncoordinated, feel heavy and slow, almost like influenza.

Suddenly felt ill and miserable with tension in the neck and top half of the eyeballs. Eyelids are heavy. The room seems full of agitated speckles, also on closing eyes. Legs feel powerless like heavy rubber. There is a time lapse between the thought and the physical action. Sensitive to light, coughing, gagging and retching.

Looks tired and disgruntled and puffy round the face. Feels as if I've had too much chocolate a congested headache and tiredness. A pressure on shoulders and wants to curl up. Cold and tired with a strong desire to hibernate. Sensation of stretching out and lengthening of body. Desire to stretch. Felt a need to be covered up.

Cholesterinum

Pharmacy

Chol. Cholesterinum. Cholesterine. Trituration of gallstones. Furnished by the epithelium lining of gallbladder and the larger ducts. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third trituration.

History

Cholesterinum is a substance crystallizing in leaflets with a mother-of-pearl lustre and a fatty feel. It is soluble in alcohol and ether. It occurs in the blood and brain, yolk of eggs, seeds and buds of plants, but most abundantly in the bile and gallstones.

To the late Dr. Wilhelm Ameke of Berlin, we are indebted for the first mention of this remedy. From him Dr. Burnett obtained the suggestion and used the lower potencies with more or less success for several years, a description of which he gives us in his Diseases of the Liver. Swan appears to have taken his hint from Burnett's work and potentized the remedy, using a gall-stone for his preparations.

Ameke recommended Cholesterinum as a remedy in cancer of the liver. This substance is abundantly present in bile and biliary stones. Cholesterinum is the physiological opponent of Lecithin. Both seem to play some unknown part in the growth of tumors.

Planets: Jupiter, Saturn.

Homeopathic

Cholesterinum was introduced by Swan. He affirms after much experience that it is almost a specific for gall-stone colic. It relieves the distress at once and this after failure with Nux-v., China, Carduus mar., Podophyllum and other apparently well-selected remedies.

Cholesterinum is a useful remedy for cancer of the liver and gallstones. Chronic jaundice. Obstinate hepatic engorgements. Opacities of the vitreous. Benign tumors, uterine fibroids. Insomnia.

Comments

Yingling reports some cures of gall-stone colic and other diseases of the liver in the Medical Advance, August, 1908 and arrives at the following conclusions. In gallstone colic the patient suffers so severely that it is almost impossible to obtain symptoms.

In such a case, when one cannot give a well-selected remedy, give Cholesterinum and thus far it has never failed.

It should have a proving. Until then it can be used instead of Morphine in cases where the symptoms cannot be obtained for the proper selection of a remedy. It is very improbable that a person suffering from gall-stone colic will wait very long for the physician to study the case.

Ameke claimed to have derived great advantages from its use in cases diagnosed as cancer of the liver or in such obstinate engorgements that malignancy was suspected. Clarke has cured a case in the last stage of liver disease. He had been given up by his medical attendant, who ordered him to make his will without delay.

Burnett claims to have twice cured cancer of the liver with it and "in hepatic engorgements that by reason of their intractable and slow yielding to well-selected remedies make one think of cancer."

In such conditions, where the diagnosis is in doubt, especially if the patient has been subjected to repeated attacks of biliary colic, Cholesterinum, he claims is very satisfactory and at times its action even striking. It has been used with success in the removal of opacities of the vitreous.

Burnett uses the 3x or the 3c trituration. and substantial doses. He commends it in "obstinate hepatic engorgements, which by reason of their obstinacy make one think interrogatively of cancer," also in "cases in which there appears to be a semi-malignant affection involving the left lobe of the liver and what lies between it and the pylorus and the pancreas." In such cases Burnett gives alternately Cholesterine. 3x and Iodoform 3x.

Chrysophanicum acidum

Pharmacy

Chrys-ac. Chrysophanicum acidum. Chrysophanic acid. An organic acid obtained from rhubarb and some lichens. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies.

History

Chrysophanicum acidum is a constituent of "Goa powder." Tried as a local application in the form of ointment in bad cases of psoriasis on one limb Chrys-ac. has caused the disappearance of the eruption on the other limb as well, showing a constitutional action.

A. B. Norton has used it successfully internally and externally in blepharitis, conjunctivitis and keratitis, the phlyctenular variety, also in eczema behind ears.

G. C. McDermott confirms this. Used locally (grains 4 to grains 8 with vaseline) or internally or both, it is a magnificent remedy in eye and ear cases where a filthy, scabby condition exists and a tendency to form thick crusts.

Cases in which the whole ear and surrounding tissue appeared to be one great scab from the center of which oozed the pus which came from a suppurative otitis media cleared up in two or three weeks under internal and external use of Chrys-ac. Also cases where a similar condition of eyelids and skin of face obtained. Clarke has often seen a ringworm disappear rapidly from a few applications of the ointment. Planets: Saturn.

Homeopathic

Chrysophanicum acidum has been used with some success in the lower triturations internally for psoriasis, ringworm and other skin affections, also as a local application in ringworm.

Clinical

Ophthalmia. Psoriasis. Ringworm.

Comments

It is a powerful irritant of the skin and mucous membranes. Given internally in crude form it has caused nausea, vomiting and purging. E. W. Beebe of Milwaukee, relates the effect on a friend, troubled with blepharitis, who applied to his eyelid a one-in-ten ointment made with vaseline.

The effect was immediate: marked conjunctiva inflammation of globe and eyelid, contraction of pupils intense photophobia, the least ray of light producing great pain increased by a throbbing sensation synchronous with the pulse. This was accompanied with phosphorescent flashes of light.

On forcing eyes to look at objects, retinal impressions remained some time after closing them. Swelling of lids and irritation of skin around. After lasting a week there was marked improvement and a second, milder application completed the cure. Beebe regards the condition set up as one of "Retinal asthenopia." Graafe called it, "optical hyperesthesia." Physostigma and Pilocarpine are its analogs.

History

Cicuta virosa is one of the most active of the poisonous Umbelliferae. Grimmer has used it for cancers of the skin, epithelioma, convulsive violence as in cerebrospinal meningitis.

Also in opisthotonos, strabismus, violent spasmodic jerks, paralysis, especially of the bladder, stricture of the esophagus. It has strange desires, such as to eat coal. Moans and howls with great agitation, makes gesticulations, odd motions, head turned or twisted to one side. Utter prostration after the convulsions.

Homeopathic

Cicuta virosa's chief influence is on the brain, medulla oblongata, nervous system, the gastro-intestinal tract and the skin. The action producing spasmodic affections, viz., hiccough, trismus, tetanus and convulsions, jaws locked.

Comments

Twitching and spasmodic jerks are a keynote of Cicuta. "Bending the head backward" is very characteristic. It has cured many cases of cerebrospinal meningitis, the opisthotonos being the leading indication.

Violence is a leading feature: violent spasms, moans and howls, great agitation, makes gesticulations, odd motions, strange desires, as to eat coal. "Head turned or twisted to one side" is no less indicative of the drug in convulsions of children or adults. (See cases referred to below.)

Cicuta has a marked action on the skin: eruption of pustules which run together with yellowish honey-colored scabs, especially about mouth and matting the whiskers. Nash cured eczema capitis in a young woman with Cic. whole scalp was covered as with a solid cap. Epithelioma, growths covered with honey-colored scabs.

Teste mentions the case of a lady of fifty-eight who ceased to menstruate at thirty in consequence of a fright and who was "of robust constitution, irritable, nervous and excessively fanciful and odd." She had a chronic swelling of the left ovary. Cic. had a remarkably quieting effect for several weeks and during that time the swelling diminished considerably. The patient had to leave Paris, so the treatment could not be followed up.

The two following cases illustrate the action of Cicuta in a striking way.

The first, a case of acute meningitis: Dr. H. von Musits treated J. N. R., age 43, male, married, a user of alcohol and tobacco, bookkeeper. After the intense summer heat, these symptoms developed: Convulsion, distortion of limbs, head turned backward. Trismus. Froth from mouth. Biting of the tongue. Oppression of breathing. Entire loss of consciousness and of power of swallowing. Convulsions, followed by complete exhaustion. Stupor. Swelling of face. Inability to move the tongue. The whole body seems to be of enormous size.

The patient had three convulsions during twenty-four hours, followed by the swelling of the tongue and body. Extreme trembling of the hands. Articulation difficult.

Next day profuse watery diarrhea stools worse by any noise, sudden entrance of any person into the room or loud talking. Better by rest and in a dark room. Several times previously he had symptoms of nervous exhaustion. His brother, a physician, died the previous spring from paresis in consequence of excessive use of alcohol and drugging. After two doses of Cic. 200c there were no more convulsions and the patient was perfectly cured in two weeks. There was no relapse.

The next one, Banerjee records the case: "A lad, aged five years, had an attack of cholera three days before my visit. Had been treated by a homeopath from beginning of attack. The patient was suffering from convulsions, when I first saw him on the fourth day. The convulsive fits were very severe since the third day of the attack of cholera.

The symptoms were: eyes half turned, head drawn toward the left side and the hands and feet of the same side were contracted. He was given Bell., Hyos., Cina and Bryonia without effect. Cicuta virosa was then given. The first dose mitigated the severity of the fits, the second dose put the child to sleep and thus he was saved from imminent death."

Cimx. Cimex lectularius. Acanthia lectularia. Bedbug. N. O. Hemiptera. Tincture, trituration. Historical dose: All potencies, sixth to two hundredth potency.

History

Cimex is an ancient remedy for intermittent fever. Nash records the following cure by Dr. Brewster of Syracuse. After driving a fractious horse that tried to run away over a very rough road a man was so bruised and sprained about the buttocks and legs that he was confined to the house for a long time. It settled finally into what appeared likely to be permanent contraction of the lower limbs.

No remedy relieved until Dr. Brewster remembered a case of intermittent fever that he had cured twenty years before, being guided by this symptoms. Cimex 600c (Jenichen) promptly cured.

A. W. K. Choudhury relates a case of intermittent (quotidian) cured with Cimex 30c, the chief indications being: "Chill slight, thirst some days, none other days, shiverings, passed water twice during chill, chill Worse by lying down increase of cough if he drinks water during chill." Planets: Saturn.

Leucorrhoea with feeling of weight in uterus. Labor-like pains. Left ovarian pains. Given before term it renders labors easier: cures sickness of pregnancy and prevents after-pains and over-sensitiveness.

According to Lippe a characteristic indication is: "The recently delivered uterus becomes actually jammed in the pelvis with great pain." Puerperal mania has been cured by it. It has also ensured living births in women who have previously borne only dead children from no discoverable cause, given in daily doses of 1x for two months before term.

Clarke has greatly relieved an inveterate case of epilepsy in which the aura was a "waving sensation in the brain," which is a leading symptom of the remedy. Many symptoms appear in the head and eyes. Feeling as if going crazy with headache. Headaches reflected from pelvic organs. The headache is frontal, vertical or occipital and is accompanied by great pain in eyeballs better pressure, worse slightest motion.

In the face there is malar neuralgia, ceasing at night. There are many symptoms of disordered digestion, bad taste and breath and coated tongue, sticky saliva, viscid mucus in throat. Sinking at epigastrium is very marked.

In the respiratory sphere a dry, teasing cough, worse at night and worse on every attempt to speak is the most characteristic feature. The rheumatic action of the drug is shown in chest and heart pains and pains in the joints and limbs.

Clarke had found a pain at the nape of the neck very characteristic. Rheumatism affecting the vertebral joints and especially in the neck. Cerebrospinal meningitis, head and neck retracted.

There are sharp pains in chest, especially in heart region and down left arm, which is numb (Acon., Puls., Rhus-t.) as if bound to the side. Palpitation from least motion. Heart ceases suddenly.

A patient who was taking 6 - drop doses of the tincture complained of a feeling "as if his heart had stopped." The pains of Cimic. are like electric shocks here and there: sharp, sharp in various parts, chest and uterine pains shoot from side to side. There is a general bruised feeling all over as if sore, worse by touch.

Cina. Cina Artemisia. Cina maritima. Wormseed. Artemisia maritima. Artemisia Cintra. N. O. Composite. Tincture. The unexpanded flower-heads (commonly called "seeds") of several varieties of Artemisia maritima. Semen cine. Flores cine. Cina is the source of the alkaloid Santonin. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, third potency. For nervous irritable children, thirtieth and two hundredth preferable.

Herbal

Cina is the source of the alkaloid Santoninum. Cina is pre-eminently a worm remedy, as it causes all the symptoms which characterize worm infestation, both mental, nervous and bodily. It corresponds more to the effects of lumbrici than to those of other worms. Child cannot bear to have hair combed or brushed.

Cina is much more than a worm medicine. Many symptoms appear to be reflex from abdominal irritation. Extreme sensitiveness of mind and body: offended by the slightest thing, peevish and obstinate, aversion to be caressed. Over-sensitiveness of skin, cannot endure to be approached touched or pressed upon touch induces or aggravates spasms.

Sherbino has found "getting on hands and knees in sleep" a strong indication for Cina, (Med.). Guernsey says it is suited to complaints which are concomitant to yawning, which come on whenever one yawns.

Homeopathic

There is irritation of the nose, causing constant desire to rub, prick or press into it. In children there is extremes ill-humor and naughtiness. Nothing pleases them for any length of time. Grinding the teeth during sleep, wetting the bed, accompanied by picking nose, great hunger. Restless sleep, tossing all about the bed. Crying out as if in delirium. Nocturnal bedwetting, urine white, turbid, at times fetid.

This is a children's remedy, scrofulous. Nervous mental and bodily symptoms which are produced by this remedy are due to the presence of round worms, pinworms or reflex from abdominal irritation and disorders of the digestive tract.

An irritability of temper, variable appetite, grinding of teeth and even convulsions with screams and violent jerkings of the hands and feet, are all within its range of action. Pain comes in shocks. Skin and hair are sensitive to touch.

Children during dentition. Child is restless tosses about. Twitching, spasms, due to worms, Unilateral. In spasms, children throw arms from side to side. Whole body is painfully sore to motion and touch, bruised soreness. Children are hungry and greater the hunger the emaciation. Child lies on belly or on hands and knees during sleep.

Complaints concomitant to yawning, which comes on whenever someone yawns. Sour smell of body especially children. Shocks as from pain. Patient will jump suddenly as

There is an increased flow of bile which continues for hours. It unites both a cholagogue action with a mechanical stimulus to peristalsis. An orange eaten before breakfast is said to destroy the craving for alcohol in alcoholics.

One patient could never eat an orange without experiencing a fearful taste at the back of the nose and throat.

Historical dose: Take two drops from the stock bottle into a one ounce dropper bottle, (add brandy or alcohol, if this bottle will be used for days or weeks). This is the dosage bottle, take a few drops straight into the mouth or as needed in a little water or juice.

Herbal

This remedy belongs to the group of Not Sufficient Interest in Present Circumstances, as classified by Bach. The additional remedies of this group are Honeysuckle, Wild Rose, Olive, White Chestnut, Mustard and Chestnut Bud. This group of remedies helps those not fully engaged in the here and now. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

One is shocked by sudden noise and startles easily when touched. Sleepiness, drowsiness, fainting and vertigo are common. In some comatose states, Clematis may restore consciousness. The body may seem as if not "inhabited", as the mind draws to future dream castles or removes due to exhaustion or emotional hardship. Some people may have out-of-body experiences.

Symptoms

MIND

The mind is set on dreams of future fulfillment, rather than seeing the present as promising and trying to find happiness therein. Reality may appear hazy, as if veiled and there may be the tendency to suddenly lose touch and become drowsy or sleepy. One may feel lightheaded or vacant in one's mind, as if the mind was removed and not fully centered or concentrated.

These states come on from daydreaming about future happiness, also from fatigue, from strenuous or saddening daily routines. In school settings, one may notice the unmotivated, daydreaming student whose absent-mindedness is prevalent, although interrupted here and there by spurts of interest.

In delusions with ecstatic content (Vervain), with pleasant visions and reveries, Clematis removes the lure and brings the mind back to reality.

The person in the Clematis state is hopeful. As one dwells on these dreams and reveries, one is most happy. Reality seems harsh in comparison, void of meaning, lonely or sad. One feels more passive, awaiting changes to come and staying out of touch with people and present circumstance.

Cobaltum nitricum

(nitrate of cobalt)

Pharmacy

Cob-n. Cobaltum Nitricum. Cobalt nitrate, a chemically pure product. Trituration.

Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, 3x to 200c.

History

Cobalt has been known since ancient times and it was introduced for use in the manufacture of blue china, Dutch delftware, Moutier and Gien's crockery and Sèvres porcelain. At present, a great deal of research is being carried out on it in industry and agriculture.

Many research experiments concerning the toxicity of cobalt and its salts have come to light, especially in the last few years.

In 1899, Pettini and Messina, by administering cobalt chloride in the food of dogs, cats and rabbits, noticed an increase in the level of hemoglobin.

More recently, Polonowski, Sutter and Briska, have shown an increase of red corpuscles, due to cobalt. Canjolle points to the complaints of pulmonary ventilation with a fall in arterial tension. According to Zarone, this hypotension is linked to a toxic attack on the myocardium.

In occupational medicine, Desoille, Merklen and Cotteril have reported cases of poisoning of workers in which the clinical symptoms notes respiratory complaints and an increase in the level of red corpuscles. A lack of fertility and miscarriage due to bleeding under the placenta. Emaciation, bluish-red coloring of the muscles and viscera, serous effusion. The thyroid gland is the location for pseudo-carcinomatous changes.

Coca

Pharmacy

Coca, Coca. Erythroxyton coca. Cocaine. N. O. Linee, suborder Erythroxytee. Tincture of leaves. Solution or trituration of the alkaloid, Cocaine. The alkaloid Cocaine is the well-known local anesthetic. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture to third potency.

Herbal

The Divine Plant of the Incas. Coca has been used for centuries by natives of West South America as an intoxicant and also as a remedy for "Veta," the condition induced in persons on coming to live in high tablelands; faintness, throbbing heart and head, dysentery. Coca is like tea and coffee in arresting tissue-change and enabling those who take it to undergo unusual fatigues.

Dr. J. W. Springthorpe described a variety of this symptoms experienced by himself and recorded in a paper entitled "The Confessions of the Cocainist." He called it "Hunting the Cocaine bug." "You imagine," he says, "that in your skin are worms or similar things, moving along.

If you touch them with wool and especially with absorbent wool, they run away and disappear, only to peep cautiously out of some corner to see if there is any danger.

These worms are projected only on the Cocainist's own person or clothing. He sees them on his linen in his skin, creeping along his penholder, but not on other, people or things and not on clothes brought clean from the laundry."

A characteristic sensation as if a worm or small foreign bodies were under the skin, moving away when touched, if this symptom is associated with any diseased condition coca is indicated. This is undoubtedly the keynote symptom of Coca.

It is known as "Magnan's Symptom," named after the eminent neurologist who first described it. His description is "a sensation as if foreign bodies were under the skin, generally small round substances like grains of sand."

Korkasoff reports a case of multiple neuritis in which this symptom was present. The patient was a woman who was being treated for a uterine affection by means of vaginal tampons containing Cocaine. A discontinuance of these caused the disappearance of the symptom.

Comments

Cooper cured a case of chronic rheumatism in an aged woman who had this symptom with the fraction of a grain of Cocaine given in single doses at long intervals.

In a case reported in Lancet, June, 1886, a man who had a 4 per cent. Solution of Cocaine applied to a tooth, swallowed twenty to thirty drops of the solution. Half an hour after, he was seized with:

(1) Feeling of faintness and giddiness,

(2) next, an attack of palpitation with a sense of flushing especially up the back.

There was marked diminution of smell, great difficulty in producing vomiting, a scarlatina-like rash over the body, especially about the neck, dimness of vision, relaxation of sphincters and weakness of limbs, the mind remained clear, but the pulse was fast, weak and intermittent.

A striking case was recorded in the British Medical Journal of December 13, 1890: At a meeting of the Paris Academie de Medecine on December 2nd, M. Hallopeau presented a communication in which after distinguishing two forms of cocaine poisoning namely, the acute in which the symptoms are produced immediately after a dose and speedily pass off and the chronic in which they are due to the prolonged use of the drug.

He related a case which in his opinion showed that the poisonous effects, while coming on acutely, might last for a considerable time. On March 7, 1890, a man had about eight milligrams of hydrochlorate of cocaine injected into his gum as a preliminary to the extraction of a tooth. Toxic symptoms at once supervened.

There was intense precordial oppression with thready pulse, extreme excitement and loquacity, the patient walked about the room, hitting out at random with his fists and crying out that he was dying. In ten minutes he became quiet and the tooth was extracted after which he was able to walk home, arriving there, however in a state of extreme prostration.

Then ensued a train of nervous symptoms, such as continual headache intractable sleeplessness, bad taste in the mouth with attacks of excitement accompanied by giddiness faintness and a sense of impending death.

All brain work was impossible, the patient could not do the simplest sum in arithmetic and was in a state of profound depression.

A sense of formication and numbness in the hands and forearms was almost incessant. This condition lasted four months and it was two months after the injection before the least improvement was observed and then progress towards recovery was very slow.

M. Hallopeau thinks the symptoms indicate a poisonous action of cocaine on the nervous centers and especially the brain. As it is impossible to suppose that so small a quantity of the drug should have remained in the circulation, he is driven to conclude either that it was stored up in the cells of certain nervous centers or that it produced in them persistent lesions.

Homeopaths have no such difficulty in understanding the prolonged effect of a single dose. Among other effects observed from its use in dentistry are "mental depression and drowsiness and intense oppression in chest, dilatation of pupils, acceleration of pulse and breathing and mental excitement."

W. J. Guernsey quotes in H. P., November, 1888 from Med. Register, August 11, 1888, the experience of J. E. Shadle, who applied pledgets of a 4 per cent. Solution on Cocaine to the nasal cavities of a man of 35, preparatory to operation. On each occasion he complained of a "cold, gone, relaxed feeling about the external genitals and a sensation as if he penis were absent. Towards the end of treatment he noticed a permanent weakness of the sexual organs and finally seminal losses and impotence set in and continued until the Cocaine was entirely withheld."

Compare this with the experiences of R. K. Ghosh with Coca (which he finds in drop doses, act better in such cases than in the potencies) in palpitation and dyspnea on ascending, when arising from nervous causes, especially self-abuse in complains from self-abuse generally.

Excessive secretion of urine with or without sugar, bedwetting nocturnal, nymphomania after childbirth during menses from irritation of eczema or other disorders of the vulva in satyriasis. The homeopaticity of Coca in bedwetting is shown by its effect in relaxing the sphincters in one of the cases named above.

There are some characteristic headaches in Coca. In general "headaches of high altitudes" may be taken as a strong indication. Coca has also a "tight" headache, as if a rubber band were stretched across the forehead.

After the invigorating effects, the sense of lightness and ability to climb a mountain without fatigue, have passed off or when the intoxication has been carried to a further degree, a sense of heaviness, numbness and drowsiness with a disinclination to move. There is extreme weariness and especially weakness of the legs.

A peculiar symptoms is: Sensation as if esophagus would be rent by force of rising flatus. Effects of cold, cough from cold air, rheumatism from slightest cold.

Comments

A very characteristic symptom is a sensation of hollowness or emptiness in the head or other parts. Allied to this is a sense of lightness of body. Another characteristic is an opening and shutting sensation, especially in the occiput. Along with the vertigo is nausea and vomiting which bring it into close relation with sea-sickness and carriage-sickness.

Cocculus corresponds perfectly to the sensitive condition caused by loss of sleep and night-watching and is the first remedy to think of for removing this. "Irritable weakness" is a leading note in the Cocculus effects. Stinging pains, stitches, constriction in the hands a pithy feeling.

Many symptoms are worse at menstrual period, hemorrhoids during menses.

Cocculus has cured a case of delirium at onset of menses during first and second days, the patient said, "I always see something alive, on wall, floor, chairs or anywhere, always rolling and will roll on me."

Other features of Cocc. are: Paralytic pains or pains as of dislocation. Paralytic weakness, lax-muscles. "Weakness of neck muscles with heaviness of head."

Sensation as if single parts had gone to sleep. Immovability of parts affected. Of localities, the right hypochondrium (especially liver) inner hypogastrium inner forehead, back, upper arm and bones of arm are chiefly affected.

This has been verified: "Spasmodic, flatulent colic, about midnight, flatus passed without relief," recurring several nights, promptly cured by Cocc. 3x. Lippe cured as case of enlargement of the liver after childbirth, the indication being "the liver was more painful after anger."

The sensitiveness to touch is very great and serves to indicate Cocculus in preference to other remedies in many disorders where this is pronounced in joint rheumatism in ulcers in neuralgic disorders of bones. The least jar is unbearable, (traveling by land or sea).

Any irritation in throat causes cough, retching and vomiting. Constricted throat or as of a plug lodged in it. Profuse post-nasal discharge. Sensation as if uvula is elongated.

Comments

Coccus cacti acts more especially on mucous membranes. It compares with Cantharis in its action on the kidney organs and with Cactus in causing hemorrhages in disturbing the heart.

It causes lancinating, stitching and pricking sensations. Itching, sticking and biting in various parts of the skin, red spots and itching pimples.

In the throat there is a sensation as if a hair or crumb were lodged behind larynx and as if a thread were hanging down the back of the throat causing a cough. Hemorrhages are apt to be in large black clots, especially hemorrhages from kidneys and uterus. Sharp pains and itching of glans penis, symptoms of the passage of small stones.

The cough exactly corresponds to the whooping cough type, there is no remedy which has a wider range in this affection. "Cough, worse in morning, the child awakens and is immediately seized with a paroxysm of coughing ending in vomiting clear, ropy mucus hanging in long string from the mouth." Hoarseness. Fatigue of vocal organs. Violent tickling in larynx. Stitching and ulcerating pains below clavicles, especially left.

Kunkel records the case of a man, age 75, who suffered from nocturnal bedwetting up to the age of seven. When almost 20 he frequently passed large quantities of uric acid and at the same time he began to have symptoms of chronic catarrh of the colon, frequent scanty stools, much mucus, cross humor, itching anus, threatening of hemorrhoids but no bleeding. Insomnia soon followed. Coc-c. 2c and 3c was given without benefit. Aqua calcis did some good but not much.

In three successive years he was sent to Carlsbad with good result to the intestinal catarrh, the sleeplessness was untouched. Gradually all kinds of arthritic symptoms developed, especially in knees. There was occasionally considerable flow of urine and the more copious it was the better the patient slept and the less pain in the joints. The same relief followed an attack of diarrhea.

Four weeks at Assmanhausen caused the excretion of large quantities of uric acid one year, but had no effect the next and the knee got worse. Wiesbaden did good one year and none the next. Half a tumbler of Kronenquelle water drunk every morning did good to the knee and enabled him to walk better than he had done for a long time. In three or four years the excretions of uric acid had ceased and the patient's state grew worse: insomnia recurred, diarrhea became much more frequent.

A fortnight previous to such attack, patient noticed he had great aversion to butcher's meat. Coc-c. 30c morning and evening was given. Gradually sleep returned. There was almost daily excretion of uric acid, sometimes in the form of large shot, the diarrhea ceased and the patient went about his work with pleasure.

Berridge cured with Coc-c. a case of gonorrhoea, guided by the symptom: "Excruciating pain in left iliac region extending to groin and halfway down thigh, as if a fluid were forcing its way there."

There is general sensitiveness to touch and pressure, rinsing mouth or brushing teeth causes cough and vomiting. Warmth worse most symptoms, cough worse entering warm room, throat worse by warmth of bed. Tickling in trachea and cough better open air. Teeth very sensitive to cold. Catarrh worse on slightest exposure. Catarrh from autumn until warm weather.

Coffea cruda

(unroasted coffee)

Pharmacy

Coff. Unroasted Coffee. Coffea cruda. Coffea Arabica. N. O. Rubiace. Tincture from raw berries. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to two hundredth potency.

History

The effects of Coffea cruda have to be considered separately from those of Coffea tosta, since the roasting converts much of the Caffeine into Caffeone or Methylamine, which gives to coffee its aroma. But the effects are scarcely distinguishable.

The provings of Coff. c. were made with the raw berries. Coffea belongs to the same family as China, Ipecacuanha and like these remedies has many symptoms like intermittent fever.

It has been noticed that coffee-drinkers who do get malaria are more difficult to cure than those who do not drink coffee.

It is believed that coffee antidotes almost all homeopathic medicines, but it is doubtful whether it could do so especially when remedies are given in high potency, (Clarke). Experience shows that correctly selected homeopathic remedy acts in spite of taking coffee.

The drinking of coffee by the elderly is likely to increase production of uric acid, causing irritation of kidneys, muscle and joint pains and with the increased susceptibility of old people to the stimulating action of coffee and tea, their use should be curtailed or carefully watched.

Homeopathic

Coffee increases the sensibility of nerves, making them over excitable and over sensitive, special senses become over acute, emotions especially joy and pleasurable surprise, produces dangerous symptoms. Stimulates the functional activity of all organs increasing the nervous and vascular activity.

Extreme sensitiveness characterizes this remedy. Hyperactivity of mind and body. Neuralgia in various parts, always with great nervous excitability and intolerance of pain, driving to despair. Bad effects of sudden emotions, surprises, joy, etc. Nervous palpitations. Skin hypersensitive.

Convulsion from excessive playing or laughing in weakly children. Sensation of warmth.

Comments

The great characteristics of Coffea is exaltation of the senses and sensibility in general. Sight is improved, fine print can be read easily, hearing is more acute and noises are intolerable and are accompanied with fear of death. The mental activities are exalted. Great sensitiveness to touch or contact. These symptoms will recall Acon.

Teste groups Coff. with Causticum. He remarks that potentized Coff. crud. prevents or neutralizes in many persons, the effects of roasted coffee. This quasi-isopathic action, as Teste truly remarks is by no means confined to Coffea, potentizations of many other drugs being antidotal to secondary effects of the crude substances.

Hahnemann describes the migraine of coffee-drinkers thus: "It comes in the morning after waking increasing little by little. The pain becomes intolerable and sometimes burning integument of head very sensitive and painful on slightest touch. Body and mind excessively sensitive. Patients look exhausted, retire to dark places, close their eyes to avoid light of day, remain seated in an armchair or stretched on a bed.

The least noise or motion excites the pain. They avoid talking, being talked to or hearing others talk. The body is colder than usual though no chills are experienced, the hands and feet are especially cold.

They loathe everything, especially food and drink, on account of a continual sickness at the stomach. If the attack is very violent a vomiting of mucus takes place, which, however, does not relieve the headache. There are no alvine discharges. This kind of megrim scarcely ever leaves before evening.

If the paroxysm is less violent, a little strong coffee which was the first cause of such a headache will produce a temporary palliation of the pain, but the disposition to relapse becomes so much greater. The attacks come irregularly, every fortnight or every few weeks without any apparent cause and quite suddenly, so much so that the patient often does not feel a single unpleasant symptom the evening preceding the attack. Such a headache has never been seen by me except in real coffee-drinkers."

It is well to inquire carefully into the dietary of patients who come complaining of headaches of this kind. More recently Dr. Gilles de la Tourette (Lancet, July 20, 1895) has described the effects of coffee. In this opinion they are very frequently mistaken for the effects of alcohol:

"Morning vomiting of glairy mucus, pain in the pit of the stomach, thickly-coated tongue, loss of appetite. The disgust excited by even the idea of solid food is such that these patients eat nothing else but bread soaked in their poisonÑcoffee. There supervene then nausea, vomiting and painful acid belchings."

The pulse is slowed. Insomnia is common and if there sleep it is disturbed by dreams of a terrifying nature like those met with in alcoholism. The effects of coffee are less deep than those of alcohol and quickly disappear when the habit is discontinued. Diarrhea in housewives who have much care and trouble in managing their households.

(roasted coffee)

Pharmacy

Coff-t. Coffea tosta. Roasted Coffee berries. N. O. Rubiaceae. Infusion of the well-roasted berries. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies.

History

The roasting of Coffea tosta develops certain vitamin-like substances. Pigeons which had developed "deficiency" neuritis and paralysis on diet of polished rice lost their disabilities on the addition of 8 cc to a 5% infusion of coffee to their food. Unroasted coffee was useless.

The symptoms of Coffea t. have been principally obtained from sensitive persons on whom strong coffee has acted injuriously and the clinical uses have been mainly based on these. Planets: Mercury, Moon.

Homeopathic

Coff-t. is serviceable against both cold and heat. Beneficial to persons who live in the open air. It has caused and cures dynamically a toothache like that of Coff. crud. when better by cold, "cold water better intense pain in sound teeth of right lower jaw."

Clarke has several times cured a toothache like this with Coff. crud. 30c. Coff-t. is useful in confinements to relieve the excess of suffering which some women experience, "pains intolerable."

Coff-t. is useful also in heart disorders where there is troublesome palpitations from heart-irritability and in general nervous excitement. Whilst it is generally given in the form of black coffee in such conditions it is also available for use in the potencies.

Other indications for its use are: Tense arteries. Periodic headaches in hysterical women. Nervous and gastric headaches. Vomiting on least exertion. Diarrhea from overwork and too much care. Gout and rheumatism with tendency to form chalkstone. There is a definite and extensive proving of Coff. t. given in Allen.

Clinical

Antidote to poisons. Labor pains. Migraine. Nervous excitement, effects. Seminal emissions. Urinary disorders. Vertigo.

Comments

A word must be said about the antidotal effects of Coffee. As an allopathic antidote to Opium in poisonous doses its value is well known. In addition to Opium and its derivatives it counteracts the effects of Nux-v., Belladonna, narcotic mushrooms, poisonous sumac tobacco, bitter almonds, Prussic acid, Coloc., Valer., Cicuta, Cham., Salts of Antimony, Lead, Phosphorus, Phosphoric acid.

On account of its extensive antidotal properties Coffee has largely been condemned by homeopathic practitioners, but it should be remembered that it does not antidote all other remedies and it is questionable if it counteracts the effect of many of the above-named drugs when they are given in high potencies. In any case it is desirable to forbid its use when Bell., Cham., Coloc., Ign., Lyc. and Nux-v. are being given.

Nash records a striking cure by Colch. 200c to which he was led by this symptom. The patient was an old lady who was vomiting blood and passing as many as sixteen bloody stools in the day.

The doors of the room had to be most carefully kept closed to prevent any smell of cooking reaching her as that immediately provoked nausea.

Sensation of icy coldness in stomach or burning. Coldness is a common symptom: abdomen, stomach, limbs. Profuse cold sweat, marked chills with or without periodicity. Burning also is not uncommon: in cavities, especially abdomen. The characteristic stool of Colchicum is jelly-like mucus, membranous shreds being also marked, violent tenesmus accompanies. Protrusion of rectum.

"After evacuation, as in dysenteric, there is generally relief but in typhus fever, sometimes a terrific spasmodic pain of the anal sphincter comes on after stool. This may occur in diarrhea" (Guernsey).

The rice-water stool, hippocratic face, coldness, cramps, prostration, led Salzer to find in it the specific for certain epidemics of Asiatic cholera.

All functions, mental and bodily, are slow, nutrition and digestion are at a stand and yet the patient does not emaciate rapidly. There is great prostration, debility from loss of sleep, the prostration of typhoid fever and typhoid states.

On the other hand there are convulsions, cramps and sometimes restlessness. The pains of Colchicum are very acute and unendurable. The Colch. dysentery and rheumatism are exceedingly painful. Very sensitive and irritable. Cannot endure strong smells. Gouty diabetes, the uric acid reappearing as the sugar disappears.

The heart is affected as other muscles. Oppression and anxiety better by walking. Heart-beating. Stitches about heart and loss of consciousness. Pericarditis on the disappearance of symptoms from limbs, rheumatism appears on disappearance of uric acid from urine. Colch. will reverse this.

J. R. Simson of Tonawanda, N.Y. , cured a very bad case of typhoid presenting among other symptoms, this:

"His left pupil was contracted so as to be almost imperceptible, while the right was dilated to the full extent." This is peculiar to Colch. and no remedy relieved the patient until he received this.

B. Simmons calls attention to the powerlessness of the affected parts which accompanies many Colchicum affections, especially when occurring in leuco-phlegmatic subjects and when there is edematous swelling of the parts.

He cured a woman, 36, mother of two children of leuco-phlegmatic temperament, who complained of rheumatism of the hands, which were swollen, joints stiff and powerless, pain as if bruised, the arms being affected but in less degree. "She was unable to brush her own hair, not so much from the pain as from the extreme weakness and powerlessness of the parts affected."

T. F. Allen gives "Tingling in finger-nails" as characteristic of Colch., no other remedy has it. As usual with allopathic specifics, Colchicum has been terribly abused.

Pelvic and portal congestion, resulting hemorrhoids and constipation. It is, according to Hammond, "a stimulant, a most valuable tonic, a positive diuretic and mild laxative."

When given before operation on rectal disease it reduces complications. Dropsy from cardiac disease. Planets: Jupiter. Venus.

Comments

It has been proved twice, first by Burt and later by Dowla. The former took the tincture, the latter the powder. Both experienced headache, the former in connection with abdominal and rectal disturbance, the latter with flushing, sensation of heat, numbness, feeling of enlargement. The legs felt light, as if he could run like a deer. Nux-v. relieved the sensations, the symptoms passing off from above downwards. In Dr. Burt's case the symptoms generally passed from above downwards.

F. S. Smith mentions that it has a domestic reputation in rheumatism. He records a case (sub-acute) in a woodsman of 30. It began in foot and ankle and traveled over nearly every joint in the body. A few drops of Coll. tincture was mixed in a tumbler of water and a teaspoonful given every two hours. Rapid cure resulted.

Sensitiveness about the heart, fullness, oppressed breathing, faintness. It is for heart disorders that alternate with suppressed bleeding hemorrhoids.

Dewey mentions that it cured a case in which there was severe constrictive pain about the heart in a man who habitually passed blood by stool, the heart symptoms coming on when the bleeding ceased and disappearing when it was re-established. Coll. cured both.

It has cured inveterate cases of dyspepsia with weight in epigastrium and hemorrhoids. Neuralgia and rheumatic pains were experienced by the provers in many parts: upper jaw, arms, hands, knees, joints.

The greatest number of Dr. Burt's symptoms were experienced in the bowels and rectum: Pains in umbilicus and hypogastrium, constipation with hard light stools, great straining, faintness, stools of mucus and blood.

These symptoms suggested the use of the remedy in cases of hemorrhoids, where it has proved most efficacious. Hemorrhoids during the menses. Prolapse of the rectum with hemorrhoids. The heart was markedly affected: irritation of cardiac nerves, palpitation, faintness, oppression.

Nash has cured cases of the most obstinate constipation with Coll. In one there was severe colic, which had recurred for several years, the concomitant symptoms being great flatulence and hemorrhoidal troubles.

He differentiates between Aesc. and Coll. (both of sense of fullness in rectum, which Coll. has not. Aesc. hemorrhoids do not bleed as a rule, those of Coll. bleed persistently.

Aesc. has pain, soreness and aching in the back. Coll. has more persistently constipation with colic on account of it. Aesc. may have constipation or may not. Coll. has shown marked power of disturbing the circulation and causing hemorrhages and also of disturbing cutaneous sensation. The symptoms are worse evening and night and better in morning. Worse by slightest emotion or excitement.

History

In allopathic practice Colocynth was used as a drastic purgative. The nearest analog to Colocynthis in its entire action on the human body is its botanical congener Bryonia with which it should be compared. Both have the same general features, pain in muscles, nerves and joints, gastro-enteric disturbance and the same condition in regard to rheumatic joints, worse by movement. Both have great irritability and ailments from mental emotion, though the latter features is more marked in Colocynth.

Homeopathic

Colocynthis is useful in acute disorders of digestive tract and intestines. Develops most of its symptoms in the abdomen and head, causing intense neuralgias. The neuralgic pains are nearly always relieved by pressure. Cramps and twitching and shortening of muscles. Constrictions and contractions. Bladder spasm following operations on orifices. (Hyper.) Urine odor of perspiration (Berb., Nit-ac.)

Colocynthis has a long lasting action on large nerves especially tri-facial, sciatic and spinal. In abdomen it produces, sudden atrocious, crampings, griping, tearing pains which make the patient twist and turn, cry out or wriggle for relief or bend him double, patient presses something hard against the abdomen.

Pains are accompanied by nausea and diuresis and the patient vomits from intensity of pain. Neuralgic pains are cutting, pinching, clamping, gnawing or boring, followed by numbness, better by pressure.

Cramps and twitching and shortening of the muscles or parts seem too short. Constrictions. Formication in affected part. Bladder cramps after operations on orifices. Comments

Guernsey writes "The strongest characteristic calling for the use of this remedy is an agonizing pain in the abdomen causing the patient to bend over double. Relief is obtained by motion, such as twisting, turning and wriggling around and the motion is kept up steadily while the pain lasts, the pain is worse by eating or drinking the least amount. This pain may occur alone or in the dysentery, cholera, etc. The doubling over the patient is the chief characteristic" .

The patient bends double or presses something hard against the abdomen. He leans over chairs, the table or bed-posts to get relief. According to Nash Mag-p. comes nearest to it in colic and neuralgic disorders. Cham. is also very close, both having colic from disturbing emotions, but the Cham. child does not double up, it tosses about.

The Staph. patient is likely to have black or decayed teeth and sore eyelids and there is chronic tendency to colic. Verat. has colic better bending double, but it has also cold sweat. Dioscorea has wind colic, but is better by stretching out. The Stann. child wants to be carried with the abdomen on the mother's shoulder.

Arthritis and gouty headaches with ophthalmia, facial neuralgia with pains extending to eye. Coloc. has diarrhea from grief indignation or chagrin. Suppressed lochia from indignation. Diabetes with milky, gelatinous or colloid urine.

The characteristic griping of Coloc., forcing the patient to bend double, may be accompanied by cramps in other parts, which may occur with or without stool, if a stool occurs it gives immediate relief (Nux-v. the opposite), any attempt to eat or drink worse.

Cramps occur in the legs, uterus and ovaries. A sensation as if clamped with iron bands is very characteristic in (coxalgia, dysmenorrhea). Dragging in uterus and vagina.

Griping, cutting, tearing and spasmodic pains in the body, burning pains, pulsations through the body, sensation as of hard stones or potatoes in the body.

Easily intoxicated by any stimulants. Affections of right side generally. The pains are often accompanied by stiffness and retarded motion of the affected parts often affect the hip-joints, pains affecting joints are much worse by motion, many neuralgic pains are better by rest. Coloc. has like Lyc., Hell. and Caust., a 4 p.m. aggravation. One prover had: "At 4 p.m. the colic came on, six days in succession." This has been verified clinically.

History

Clarke cured with Conch. 3c a delicate boy who at three different times had had pain in left knee. The left inner condyle was swollen and tender. The cure was rapid and the general health much improved at the same time.

Conch. has a wide range of action in disorders of bones, especially when the growing ends are affected. Calc-p. and Calc. are its nearest analogs. Planets: Saturn.

Homeopathic

Observations made on workers in mother-of-pearl factories show that inhalation of the dust produces catarrh of the respiratory organs and, later on inflammation of the ends of bones. This always begins in the diaphyses, but may spread to the epiphyses. It always attacks young subjects.

Clinical

appetite, sleeplessness, dark-colored urine with sediment. Then swelling occurs. The swelling always develops on one or the other end of a diaphysis, never in the middle of it nor in the epiphysis. The swelling has a clear, sharp margin.

Swelling is very painful to the slightest touch, at first soft, elastic and slightly fluctuating. It may become as hard as a bone. Suppuration may occur. The bones that have been affected are lower jaw, scapula, humerus, radius, ulna, tibia, fibula, tarsal and metatarsal bones.

Comments

Grimmer reports: Cancer of the breast after bruises or injuries. Induration and inflammations of the breast and nipples, scirrhus tumors, ulcerating and otherwise. A great deal of vertigo accompanies the complaints running through this remedy, the mental faculties and memory are profoundly affected, great weakness of memory. Slow and impaired comprehension. Difficulty concentrating. One peculiar symptom, patient sweats on closing the eyes, many eye symptoms are present.

According to Hahnemann Conium is one of those drugs of which it is exceedingly difficult to distinguish the primary and secondary effects. He thinks, nevertheless, that the primary action is one of "rigidity, condensation and constriction of the tissues with swelling of the glands and diminution of the senses."

In this Teste concurs, adding that the action is primarily inflammatory and that this accounts for its suitability for "persons of a lively, quick, sanguine disposition with a marked development of the glandular system." It is characteristically adapted to painful glandular affections, "principally such as result from a strain or blow, but the precise cause of which may have escaped our recollection."

Teste places Con. at the head of the analogs of Acon. It is to the glands and capillary system what Acon. is to the heart and arterial system. In many cases Con. may be regarded as the "Aconite of chronic diseases." The other Aconite analogs, according to this author, are Cham., Seneg., Canth. and Ph-ac.

Con. corresponds to chronic or sub-acute inflammation with bloody engorgement of the parenchyma induration and even subsequent ulceration of the tissues. Thuja represents the slow and progressive hypertrophy of certain tissues, certain constituents of our organs.

Sterck used Conium in his heroic fashion and made with it some notable cures of scirrhus tumors, ulcerating and otherwise, but it was Hahnemann who first showed how the remedy could be used safely as well as effectively.

Guernsey writes: "This remedy is characterized by a great dizziness, brought on when lying down and moving the head ever so slightly or even the eyes—All the contents of the room appear to whirl around, patient wishes to keep the head perfectly still. In urinating the water flows at first in a full stream, then stops, flows again, again stops," etc.

Nash illustrates the modality: worse by moving the head. He thinks "turning the head sideways" is the most characteristic form of it. Some give it as "Lying down in bed and turning over," but he regards the "lying down" as the least important part.

Nash cured a patient who had all the symptoms of locomotor ataxia and who could not, when walking, turn the head the least bit sideways without staggering or falling.

A case of lumbago was cured with Con. In six days after seven months' suffering, these symptoms were present: Cannot turn over in bed without being dizzy. Worse ascending, by exercise. Feeling of ball pressing into back over left hip.

Pain shooting down left leg, ending in a spot that felt as though pricked by a bunch of hot needles. Another symptom is "yellow nails."

Proell mentions a use of Con. which illustrates the symptom: "Interrupted flow." He has had excellent results with Con. 10c in strangury and ischuria, when the urine cannot be discharged from nervousness or swelling of the prostate. (Nat-s. 5c trituration. was effective where the bladder could not be entirely emptied.)

Con. has a very marked action on the pelvic organs. Constipation is very pronounced or there may be diarrhea. Faintness after stool. Burning or coldness in the rectum.

Sircar has recorded a striking case illustrating the latter. A patient had severe diarrhea, for which the doctor was about to give Sulph., when he asked if the stools were hot. "On the contrary, they are cold," replied the patient. Sircar found "cold flatulence" under Con. and gave it on analogy with brilliant effect.

On the sexual sphere Con. has profound action often meeting quite contradictory conditions—hypertrophy or atrophy of glands, excess of function or abrogation. "Unsatisfied sexual desire" is a very leading indication and sufferings therefrom in either sex are effectually allayed by Con.

Clarke has used the remedy with very great good in numberless cases of weakness from masturbation in men and youths. "Emission on the slightest stimulus, such as merely being in the society of a woman," is very typical.

Many "engaged" young men have been helped by the remedy. It corresponds more to scanty menses than the opposite.

Goodno cured a girl of 25 of severe dysmenorrhea, (which had existed since the periods commenced) with scanty, almost arrested flow. She had also nosebleed, cough and stitches through left lung at times. Two years previously after unusual excitement, she had bearing-down pains, prolapse and ante-version.

The dysmenorrhea pains were relieved by Sepia and other remedies, but prolapse increased with bearing-down as though the womb would be forced from vulva, worse standing and walking before and during menses. Intermittent flow of urine, cutting after urination, obstinate constipation of long standing, stool (once in seven days) large, hard, followed by tremulous weakness, she must lie down, dull pain below left mamma. Prompt relief and speedy cure were effected by Con. 1,000c.

Scanty menses (especially in old maids) is an indication. Checked lochia. Pains in breast before menses, worse by every step is a strong indication for Con. Also all effects of hurts to the breast by falls or blows. After a blow on the breast a course of Con. should always be given.

Nash mentions another characteristic of Con.: "Sweats day or night, as soon as one sleeps or even on closing the eyes." This enabled Lippe to cure a man of 80 of hemiplegia.

R. C. Markham cured with Con. 1,000c. an obstinate cough, dry, hard, frequent with asthmatic wheezing or fine rattling in chest on deep breathing, worse slightest exposure to cold air, getting into cold bed or out of a warm one or even putting arms out was sufficient to bring on severe coughing.

The guiding symptom which appeared last and led to the remedy was this: Pain in the apex of left lung with soreness in a small spot, midway between neck and shoulder just back of clavicle. The pain, cutting and stitch-like, ran downward and inward toward the sternum.

A. H. Birdsall reports a case of contusion of testicle. He found the patient writhing in agony, the pain complained of being "sharp, cutting, running up spermatic cord to lower part of back and also through scrotum to root of penis." Con. 200c relieved in five minutes and at the end of twenty minutes the pain was gone.

Conium is said to have been and almost certainly was, the poison with which Socrates was executed and whether or not this was the case ascending paralysis, which occurred in his poisoning is an indication for Conium. Benumbed sensation inability to sustain mental effort, weak memory, tired sensation in brain, imbecility.

Patients who are worse when idle. Hot spots on head. Erysipelas, pain piercing to brain. Red vision. Weakness, tremulousness and palpitation after every evacuation. Sensation of unreality, as if in a dream. Insanity, periodical or alternating. Vertigo worse on turning in bed.

Accumulation of earwax. Flatulent tendency as with Ammoniac and Asafetida, its relatives. Numbness and deadness of limbs. Stabbing pains are a great indication for Conium. Weak-spells, faintness, sudden loss of strength while walking.

Hysteria and hypochondriasis from abstinence from sexual intercourse. In tuberculosis patients cannot expectorate, must swallow sputa. The eye symptoms are very pronounced: photophobia, ptosis, etc. These symptoms are worse night and early morning.

Herbal

Convallaria is a popular remedy in Russia for heart disorders and it has been introduced into old-school medicine principally as a heart remedy. It compares closely in its action with Lilium tigrinum.

Convallaria also resembles its other botanical relatives, Aloe, Allium cepa and Allium sativum. It is strongly purgative and causes morning vomiting. It has been proved and the symptoms produced show that its nearest analog is Lilium tigrinum.

Nash has used it in 30c with very satisfactory results in women complaining of great soreness in uterine region with sympathetic palpitation of the heart. He has also removed cardiac dropsy when this uterine soreness has been present as well.

Berridge credits it with this symptom: "Movement in the abdomen as from the fist of a child," like Sulph., Thuja., Croc. In the case of Conv. the symptom occurs when lying on the back. Sleepiness accompanies many symptoms. Planets: Sun.

Herbal

Copaiva is an old world remedy for gonorrhea and it has also been used for other blennorrhagic conditions. It has been proved and observations have been made on patients who have overdosed themselves with the remedy.

A. P. Bowie has verified this indication: "In old persons, (men) who from cold or other causes cannot urinate or where there is frequent desire and only a few drops pass with much straining—frequently with a mucous discharge from the bowels with much rumbling and rolling in the bowels."

Bowie gave 5-drop doses of the first dilution. He recommends also an ointment of 10 drops of the balsam to 3j of vaseline, "to relieve the burning and itching at the anus caused by hemorrhoids."

Homeopathic

Corallium rubrum affects the mucus membranes especially of respiratory organs. The provings of coral develop much coryza and nosebleed and even ulceration within the nostrils. It causes eruptions which are for the most part of its own color, coral-red. Red spots on the palms of the hands, at first coral color, then darker and finally coppery. Comments

In homeopathic practice Corallium corresponds to a combination of syphilis and psora. The cough is of the whooping cough type, smothering sensation before and great exhaustion after cough.

Cough in "machine-gun" paroxysms. Crowing inspiration, sensation as if inspired air was icy cold. There is much drowsiness with Cor-r. and many symptoms appear during sleep.

J. N. Lowe cured with Cor-r. an infant, a year old, suffering from laryngismus stridulus, the indications being worse during sleep and after waking. Lach., given first, failed to relieve.

Guernsey's indication is: "Whooping cough or any other kind of cough when the attack comes on with a very rapid cough and the attacks follow so closely as to almost run into each other." I have found it most effective in the nervous "machine-gun" cough where the patient gives an isolated cough at regular intervals through the day.

Nash finds it the most useful of all remedies in post-nasal catarrh. Guernsey's other indication is: "Red, flat ulcers on the glans and inner surface of the prepuce with secretion of a quantity of yellow ichor." In the head there is a sensation of emptiness or hollowness.

Change of air causes coughing. Feels cold when uncovered and too hot when covered. Head feels very large. Sensation as if forehead were flattened.

Herbal

F. H. Lutze communicated to H. Recorder, a Long Island farmer's cure for eczema with a decoction of the leaves of this tree. His method was to give three times a day a wine glassful for three days.

Then for the next three days apply it locally or wash the part with it, then administer it internally for another three days and so on. He cured, thus, all his cases in eighteen days.

This was the first acquaintance Lutze had with the remedy. Later on he made a proving on himself and another, eliciting symptoms of fever, restlessness and insomnia. Skin eruptions with emaciation.

A striking symptom was a cold feeling in chest as if full of ice. Planets: Saturn.

Prednisone and prednisolone cause less retention of water and salt and less potassium reduction in the blood than cortisone, but on the other hand, can be the cause of myopathy.

"A derangement of the stomach, attended with profuse morbid secretion of mucus, there being always a coated tongue with fetor of the breath and loss of appetite and digestion."

Malus pumila

Crab apple

(bach flower remedy)

Pharmacy

Crab Apple. Malus pumila. Small twigs with whole clusters of flowers are boiled for half an hour. The water is strained and used as medicine.

Historical dose: Take two drops from the stock bottle into a one ounce dropper bottle, (add brandy or alcohol, if this bottle will be used for days or weeks). This is the dosage bottle, take a few drops straight into the mouth or as needed in a little water or juice.

Herbal

The remedy Crab Apple together with Oak, Willow, Star of Bethlehem, Sweet Chestnut, Elm, Pine, Larch belongs to the group of For Despondency or Despair, as classified by Bach. These remedies deal with states of severity.

PAGE 535

When a condition burdens and one does not have sufficient power or possibility to grow above. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

This remedy can be of service in unclean skin, acne, accumulated wastes in the blood stream, cleansing of digestive tract, long-lasting viral infections and chronic poisoning due to environmental hazards. It also helps to draw out impurities from a wound, if applied to the bandage.

Chronic diarrhea. Feelings of disgust or repulsion have been interpreted to be at the bottom of anorexia, vomiting, nausea and emaciation (Chicory, Mustard). Bulimia can also be motivated by strong repulsion toward the food consumed with the urge to vomit. Anorexia and bulimia rest on the Crab Apple tendency to obsess with weight problems.

Symptoms

MIND

In the Crab Apple state, the mind is overly concentrating on one aspect of the self that is considered unclean, shameful, bothering and burdensome. This attitude is enhanced by underlying feelings of helplessness one feels in regard to the problem. One feels unable to shake off or overcome the disturbing condition and feelings of despair may develop.

The Crab Apple state is marked by obsessive preoccupation with beauty flaws or states of sickness considered unclean and unbecoming. Contamination is feared through a source outside of the self, such as by germs or unclean surroundings. Personal hidden shame, or fear of uncleanness in thought or action.

The Crab Apple view is self-centered. It is shame about one's appearance or inner guilt and uncleanness. Some people feel an intense craving or desire to be cleansed and purified from within. True despair and despondency may develop, as one feels unable to free or cleanse oneself. This holds true especially when repeatedly engaging in sinful or shameful behavior and regretting it later on.

In cases of abuse or molestation, a Crab Apple state may come in the victim who feels soiled or dirty.

In treatment of obsessive-compulsive behavior with a deep shame, (Cherry Plum, Pine). Obsessive, exaggerated preoccupation with imagined or hardly noticeable physical defects. Minor problems may assume disproportionate importance.

Crataegus oxyacantha

Pharmacy

Crat. Crataegus oxyacantha. Hawthorn Berries. N. O. Rosacea. Tincture of the ripe fruit. The fresh berries are pounded to a pulp and macerated in two times their weight of alcohol. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, fluid extract or tincture, one to fifteen drops. Must be used for some time in order to obtain good results.

Herbal

Crataegus was introduced into medicine as a heart remedy by Dr. Greene of Ennis, Ireland and it has been used empirically with much success in cases of heart failure. It has usually been given in 5 drop doses of the tincture. Weak and rapid pulse, dyspnea and dropsy, dependent on failure of heart-power whether from valvular affection or from anemia, appear to be the leading indications. Heart-failure threatened from slightest exertion.

Dr. Green for many years had a reputation for the cure of heart disease that caused patients to flock to him all parts of the United Kingdom.

He cured the most of them and amassed considerable wealth by means of his secret, for, contrary to the code, he, though a physician in good standing, refused to reveal the remedy to his professional brethren.

After his death, about two years ago, his daughter, a Mrs. Graham, revealed the name of the remedy her father had used so successfully. It is Crataegus oxyacantha. Planets: Sun, Mars.

Vertigo

Faintness and collapse.

Comments

Crat. is the nearest approach to a positive heart tonic. It has produced some heart symptoms and has, doubtless, a homeopathic relation, but it is not a heart-poison like Digitalis and has no cumulative action.

Here are some cases: Halbert in Clinique, March, 1899, records this case: Mr. S., a young man sixteen years of age, had worked hard at manual labor since his twelfth year to support a widowed mother.

He had in fact, done a man's work before his physical maturity would permit it. For some time he has shown signs of cardiac hypertrophy and had been cautioned by physicians to take good care as to his heart.

About a year ago during some gymnastic extreme in the nature of sport, he was suddenly admonished that something had 'given way,' and for relief was obliged to take to his bed.

When I first saw him he was obliged to lie down, respiration was labored and irregular and the heart's action was greatly exaggerated and erratic.

There was decided precordial bulging, the apex beat was considerably displaced, downward and to the left and the whole cardiac dullness was greatly extended, the impulse was heaving in character with considerable mitral systolic blowing and the corresponding diastolic intensification, there were also signs of considerable pulmonary engorgement and some pain in the chest region.

The patient was put into a warm bath for twenty minutes and then carefully returned to bed. Aconite 3x was administered every half-hour and continued hourly for a day or two afterward until he was somewhat relieved.

Crataegus, five-drop doses of the tincture, was then administered five times daily for a long time. The effects of this remedy were most remarkable, the cardiac irritation gradually lessened, the area of dullness decreased and the rhythm improved, at the same time all the general symptoms improved rapidly.

He has now been using the remedy for several months and the result is most satisfactory. I have every reason to expect a cure of the extreme symptoms and believe the heart will be reduced to a safe hypertrophy, will virtually be a cure.

A girl of twelve had a sudden collapse in third week of typhoid. Crat. five drops, every two hours was given on these indications: Great pallor with irregular breathing, cold limbs, pulse 120, very weak and irregular.

Strychnia, Dig. and Cact. had failed to give more than temporary relief. Under Crat. she rallied at once.

Cases of hypertrophy with failing power, dilatation, alcoholic heat and nervous palpitation have all been relieved by the remedy.

T. C. Duncan gave complete relief in a case of angina pectoris, the pain being above and to left of stomach.

Pulse strong and forcible indications of hypertrophy were found. A very tender spot on left side of spine. Crataegus removed at the same time "a hurried feeling" and the anxious expression of her face.

Dr. Duncan produced in himself when proving Crataegus a "hurried feeling," which he attributed to the rapid action of the stimulated heart. A nervous lady medical student who also proved it has "an unusual rush of blood to the head with confused feeling," followed later by "a feeling of quiet and calmness mentally." The remedy is well worth a thorough proving.

Anshutz reports: Dr. Jennings procured for himself some of the remedy and his experience with it explains Dr. Green's national reputation. Dr. Jennings writes:

Case I. was that of a Mr. B., aged seventy three years. I found him gasping for breath when I entered the room with a pulse-rate of 158 and very feeble, great edema of lower limbs and abdomen. A more desperate case could hardly be found. I gave him fifteen drops of Crataegus in half a wineglass of water. In fifteen minutes the pulse beat was 126 and stronger and breathing was not so labored. In twenty-five minutes pulse beat 110 and the force was still increasing, breathing much easier.

He now got ten drops in same quantity of water and in one hour from the time I entered the house he was, for the first time in ten days, able to lie horizontally.

I made an examination of the heart and found mitral regurgitation from valvular deficiency with great enlargement. For the edema he prescribed Hydrargyrum cum creta, Squill and Digitalis.

He received ten drops four times a day of the Crataegus and was permitted to use some light beer to which he had become accustomed at meal time.

He made a rapid and apparently full recovery until in three months, he felt as well as any man of his age in Chicago.

He occasionally, particularly in the change of weather takes some of the Crataegus which, he says, quickly stops shortness of breath or pain in the heart. His father and a brother died of heart disease.

Another case was that of a woman who "was suffering from a compensatory enlargement of the heart from mitral insufficiency," was taken with dyspnea when Dr. Jennings was called and was nearly dead. Under Crataegus and some other indicated remedies she made an excellent recovery. "In a letter from her, three months afterward, she said she was feeling well, but that she would not feel fully secure without some of the Crataegus."

"The forty other cases ran courses somewhat similar to the three cited—all having been apparently cured. Yet I am not satisfied beyond a doubt, that any of those patients were completely cured except those whose troubles of the heart were functional like the second case cited.

And it is possible and even probable that in weather of a heavy atmosphere or when it is surcharged with electricity or if the patient be subjected to great excitement or sudden or violent commotion or exercise he may suffer again therewith.

Cardiac impulse after a few days' use of the Crataegus is greatly strengthened and yields that low soft tone so characteristic of the first sound, as shown by the cardiograph.

The entire central nervous system seems to be influenced favorably by its use, the appetite increases and assimilation and nutrition improve.

Also a sense of quietude and well-being rests on the patient and he who before its use was cross, melancholic and irritable after a few days of its use shows marked signs of improvement in his mental state.

I doubt if it is indicated in fatty enlargement. The dose which I have found to be the most available is from ten to fifteen drops after meals or food. If taken before it may in very susceptible patients, cause nausea.

I find also that after its use for a month it may be well to discontinue for a week or two, when it should be renewed for another month or so.

Usually three months seem to be the proper time for actual treatment and after that only at such times as a warning pain of the heart or dyspnea may point out.

Dr. T. C. Duncan contributes the following cases: Mrs. A., a printer, came to me complaining of some pain in the side as if it would take her life. She did not have it all the time, only at times, usually the last of the week, when tired.

I prescribed Bryonia, then Belladonna without prompt relief. One Saturday she came with a severe attack, locating the pain with her right hand above and to the left of the stomach. The pulse was strong and forcible.

On careful examination I found the heart beat below normal indicating hypertrophy. I examined the spine and to the left of the vertebra about two inches I found a very tender spot (spinal hyperemia). She told me that when a girl she had several attacks and that her own family physician gave her a remedy that relieved her at once.

She had tried several physicians, among them an allopath, who gave hypodermic injections of morphine without relief. Hot applications sometimes relieved.

I now recognized that I had a case of angina pectoris and that her early attacks were due, I thought to carrying her heavy brother. Now the attacks come when she becomes tired holding her composing stick, at the same time she became very much flurried, so much so that she had stop work because she was confused.

I now gave her a prescription for Cactus, but told her I would like to try first a new remedy, giving her Crataegus, saturating some disks with tincture.

I directed her to take two disks every hour until relieved and then less often. If not relieved to take the Cactus.

She returned in a week reporting that she was relieved after the first dose of Crataegus. More, that hurried, flurried feeling had not troubled her this week.

Her face has a parchment skin and the expression of anxiety so significant of heart disease was certainly relieved. I have not seen her since.

In the proving of this remedy it produced a flurried feeling due, to the rapid action of the stimulated heart. One prover, a nervous lady medical student, gives today in her report "a feeling of quiet and calmness, mentally." This is a secondary effect, for it was preceded by "an unusual rush of blood to the head with confused feeling."

Kresolum

Pharmacy

Cresol. Cresylolum. The cresols are phenols (ortho, meta, para) derived from toluene. They are extracted from tar, coal-tar, wood-tar. They are also prepared synthetically.

Historical dose: Trituration, tincture and all potencies.

History

The word Cresol is derived from creosote and the suffix '-ol', which means phenol. The cresols are powerful anti-septics, soluble in soap, but their use is restricted, owing to their strong odor, they are used, however, as primary material in the manufacture of bakelites, they form cresolins.

The homeopathic proving was established by O. A. Julian in 1958 on five provers, three men, two women and a dog, as well as by the study of cases of chronic poisoning.

The potencies 5c, 7c and 9c were used. Planets: Mercury.

Homeopathic

Sclerosis of the cerebral, nervous and vascular systems. Muscular atrophy, especially of the small muscles in the hands. Paresis or atrophic paralysis of the lower limbs.

Allergic conditions from a cancerous evolution. Anemia with thrombocytopenia and leucopenia. Asthenia, anorexia and emaciation.

Clinical

Allergies. Atherosclerosis. Maniac depressive. Premature senility. Schizophrenia.

MIND

Schizophrenia with euphoria and volubility. Euphoria, which can lead to ecstasy. Schizophrenia in children. Maniacal depressive psychosis. Loquacious mood. Euphoria, abundant gesticulation. Anguish in the evening. Indifference. Distracted, gives the impression of being deep in thought. Unhappy visions. Hears bells. Irritable often repeats himself, trembling of upper limbs.

Comments

A long-standing experiment and numerous clinical observations allow the confirmation that Cresol is a very valuable remedy, especially with regard to neuro-psychological, cardiovascular and cutaneous infections. In the case of epilepsy, it is almost homeopathic phenobarbital. Its action is frequently effective in a large number of epileptic cases, especially if one is the first doctor to see the patient. If, on the other hand, allopathic treatment has already been prescribed, it is essential to know how to combine homeopathic remedies with a slow and progressive reduction of the previously prescribed classical remedies.

Clinical observation, plus electro-encephalogram readings are used to direct this reduction of the allopathic dosage. By contrast, the number of cresol drops of 7c can be increased, which results in a better sedation of cortical irritability.

The clinical experiments made by O.A. Julian and by several of his colleagues who have prescribed Cresol, makes it possible for us to inform the reader that it has a definite value, particularly in cases of epilepsy.

History

Cooper and Culpepper agree in thinking that Croc. very similar to Calen. in its action. It is a vulnerary and corresponds to the effects of blows (deafness, tumors, etc.). A curious circumstance in this connection is the fact that Crocus has often been successfully given to pregnant women who have complained of violent fetal movements, as well as in cases of imaginary pregnancy.

Crocus has three characteristics which clearly call for its use when met with. Hemorrhage from various parts (nose, uterus), when the blood is black, stringy, clotting, forming itself into long black strings, hanging from the bleeding orifice. Peculiar sensation as if something alive were moving about in the abdomen or chest. This may be a definite sensation or it may be a hallucination or fixed idea.

Comments

Clarke once cured with a few doses of Crocus a young artist who had become subject to violent outbursts of rage in which he would take up a knife to throw at his mother with whom he lived and almost immediately after would be abjectly repentant. The household was on the point of being broken up when the trouble was completely removed by Crocus.

Teste cites from Murray the case of several children "who were seized with an extraordinary laughing mania from having, smelled of leather bottles that had contained essence of saffron."

On one occasion in hospital, Clarke happened to see a young girl who was really desperately ill with heart failure and valvular disease in a fit of hysterical laughter. This made him think of Crocus. The only definite sensation she complained of in the heart region was a "jumping" sensation. Crocus 30c was given and very soon she was able to lie down flat (after having been propped up for weeks) and from that time she made a rapid recovery.

Another Crocus symptom is sensitive to music involuntarily joins in on hearing any one sing. Stitches, shocks, throbbings, broad thrusts, Cuttings and jerkings are common sensations. Twitchings of single sets of muscles (chorea). A warm sensation ascending to the heart, impeding breathing and better by yawning is a peculiar symptom. Tingling, crawling, pricking and itching are met with in the skin.

Scarlet redness of the whole body or scarlet spots on skin. It is a domestic remedy for "bringing out" the eruption of measles. Painful suppuration of bruised parts, old scars re-open and suppurate. Lipoma and encephaloma of scalp. The reputation of Crocus in the cure of tumors is also an old one. It was used externally "to scatter indolent tumors and ecchymosis." Tumor with ulceration and characteristic bleeding.

Cooper has given it new confirmation. He has given it in single doses of the tincture in a case of malignant disease of the side following extirpation of cancerous kidney with the result of arrest of progress after an initial aggravation and complete relief of pain.

The patient was a woman, who had formerly had hemorrhage with dark clots at the periods and feeling of weight towards womb. She had also the sensation of something moving in the abdomen.

But Hayward observed that sloughing is a strong indication for Crot-h. and the cure by this remedy of his own daughter of scarlatina maligna with gangrenous-looking sore-throat, was a dramatic outcome of his researches. Symptoms of C. Durissus as well as C. Horridus are included in the pathogenesis.

Comments

A case of rattle-snake bite and its isopathic cure, related by Dr. J. S. M. Chaffee in Hom. News, Sept., 1892, gives a good general idea of the action of the venom: I was called to see James Wright, aged 54 years, who, while binding wheat, was bitten on third finger of right hand by a rattlesnake. I found him bleeding from the bitten finger and from eyes, nose, ears, mouth, rectum and urethra, pulse 110, small, wiry, respiration 40, temperature 105, haggard expression, whole body bathed in hot perspiration, delirium.

This patient had the regular routine treatment of whisky, quinine and carbonate ammonia for ninety-six hours, when the attendants withdrew and pronounced the case beyond the reach of medical aid. A marked characteristic symptom was a moldy smell of breath with scarlet red tongue and difficult swallowing. Great sensitiveness of skin of right half of body, so much so that the slightest touch would produce twitching of muscles of that side.

I prescribed Crot-h. 30c trituration, 30 grains in four ounces of water, a teaspoonful every hour, until my return visit, twenty-four hours later, when I found marked improvement. Temperature normal, pulse full, soft and regular, delirium gone, saliva and urine slightly tinged with blood, appetite returning, he having asked for food for the first time since the accident. The medicine was continued for two more days, when recovery was practically complete.

Crot-h. produces profound nervous shock and prostration with trembling, mental alienation and disorganization of the fluids and tissues. It causes bleeding from all orifices and surfaces and it corresponds to the hemorrhagic diathesis to diseases caused by previous low states of system, by zymotic or septic poisoning, by abuse of alcohol, etc.

Low, typhoid states with oppressed nervous system and degraded blood-supply often require it. Neuralgia occurring as a sequel of septic toxic or even miasmatic disease or chronic bilious, menopausal or albuminuric conditions. Broken-down constitutions.

The Crot-h. patient is readily moved to tears. Weeping mood, agony, despair. In one prover perception was so clouded that she was in danger of being run over in the street and memory was so impaired that on entering a shop she forgot what she had come for. Sleepy, but cannot sleep. Grinds teeth.

The action on the right side is noteworthy, as Crot-h. is predominantly a right-side medicine (Lach. is more left), it acts strongly on the liver and corresponds to jaundice and yellow fever. Crotalus has been used with great success in the treatment of yellow fever and also as a prophylactic against it. For this inoculation with diluted virus has been practiced.

The pains of Crot-h. alternate rapidly with each other and frequently recur, also (except headache) appear and disappear suddenly after lasting some time.

Crot-t. Croton tiglium. Croton-oil Seeds. Tiglium officinale. N. O. Euphorbiaceae.

Tincture of the oil from the seeds. Historical dose: All potencies, sixth to thirtieth potency.

History

Croton Tiglium was used as a powerful purgative and irritant of the skin in ordinary practice, therefore causing watery discharges. affecting lung qi hence depuration of water function of lung.

Homeopathic

Crot-t. affects the mucous membranes of the intestines. Skin especially of face and scrotum is more affected. (in kidney area that is top of head, scrotum etc lungs action on skin It is one of the antidotes to rhus poisoning, as is evident from its wide and intense action upon skin and mucous surface, causing irritation and inflammation with formation of vesicles and mucous discharges. Crot-t. has elective affinity for skin of face and external genitals.

Croton Tig. is a valuable remedy in diarrhea, summer complaint and skin disorders. Croton Tig. has a peculiar feeling as if parts were drawn backwards, eyes, nipples etc. receding eruptions Pain from nipple to back when child nurses Drawing-pain through the left chest into the back.

.(front body yin and back part is yang so movement of pain or organ pulling or eruption is from less yang qi to more yang qi or high yin to less yin that is qi sinking pattern that is going from external to internal because lung qi strength on skin is not sufficient enough to able to start perspiration so skin feels overall tight and bound as depuration of flood out is not proper.. Comments

On the skin Crot-t. produces erythema, erysipelas, eczema, herpes pustules. The antidote to Crot-t. is Ant-t. Crot-t. antidotes Rhus-t. Guernsey gives the skin indications thus: "In any skin disease which itches very much, but the patient cannot bear to scratch very hard as it hurts, a very slight scratch, a mere rub suffices to allay the itching. Erysipelas that itches exceedingly." He also gives: "Otorrhea when there is much itching."

Teste, who was among the first to use Crot-t. homeopathically, gives a very interesting account of it. He quotes Trousseau and Pidoux as saying that it often happens that eruptions are developed on parts not touched by the remedy in those who have been engaged in making Crot-t. inunctions on patients. The face and the scrotum especially have been thus attacked.

The itching which it causes, says Teste is at first more tingling than burning (the contrary taking place with Rhus-t.). The itching changes to burning (like the itching of Rhus-t.).

If it is taken in large doses or applied externally. The eruptions in which he succeeded were: urticaria, large copper-colored spots almost like liver-spots, small red blotches, not very apparent in thighs, abdomen and genitals of fifteen years' standing, accompanied with intolerable itching.

Two remarkable cases are recorded by Teste. A delicate, cachectic, psoric girl of four had suffered for two years without interruption from a fetid discharge from the nose, less in winter more in summer. Before this she had a vesicular eruption on chest and neck, which disappeared of itself, being followed in three or four days by the discharge. After the failure of Sulph., Merc., Calc., on the indication of the previous eruption

Teste gave Crot-t. and in less than a fortnight the disease lost three-fourths of its intensity, although it was in mid-summer. Six months completed the cure, the only other remedies given during the time being Lob. and Kreos.

The other case was that of a man of forty, very fleshy, who for fifteen years had been subject to attacks of gout returning every spring, except on two occasions when a most fatiguing and obstinate rash appeared instead. This consisted in an intense redness of the whole body, accompanied with a burning itching, especially in the hollow of the hands, at the chest and behind the ears.

These parts were the seat of a yellowish, plastic exudation, emanating from a multitude of small vesicles in close contact with each other, which were only distinctly perceived in places where they were less numerous and where a greater degree of resistance on the part of the epidermis imparted to them a certain persistence.

Each time this eruption broke out it lasted three months in spite of purgatives and the baths of Bareges and Aix les Bains. When Teste saw the patient he had neither gout nor eczema, but a dry, racking, almost convulsive and unceasing cough.

Skin rather hot, thirst, a little headache, heat in chest, no dyspnea. Sometimes, especially in the evening, but only for a few days, he showed a tendency to syncope.

At the end of three weeks, having received no benefit from Teste's treatment, the patient took of his own accord three tablespoonfuls of the "Syrup of White Poppy," at bedtime. The cough ceased entirely for some hours and then returned in its old intensity.

But during the intermission the malady had come out on the skin and at daybreak the patient found himself covered from head to foot with his old horrible eczema. He was almost unrecognizable and in a state of the deepest anxiety and despair. He expected three or four months of it.

Teste now gave Crot-t. The itching disappeared the same day. Within five or six days there remained not a trace of either cough or eruption. As the patient removed from Paris, Teste was not able to follow the case in subsequent years.

Conrad Wesselheft cured a case of proctalgia in a woman of thirty with Crot-t. 3x. The attacks came on after stool, lasting half a day and preventing her from fulfilling her duties of teacher. There were no hemorrhoids, only sensitiveness of rectum to touch. He was led to the remedy by having previously had another patient who suffered from a similar pain after using Croton pills, pain in the rectum came on with extreme intensity after straining at stool and the patient (also a woman) was in agony for three hours afterwards with frequent tenesmus. The pills were stopped and Nux-v. given and she was well in a week.

The eye symptoms of Crot-t. are very strongly marked. Purulent ophthalmia, ulceration and hypopion have been cured by it. Many of the symptoms of Crot-t. spread from below upwards.

In two or three hours the oil will operate, expelling the worm.

Hansen mentions that missionaries find the mother tincture of great use in sea-sickness and vomiting of pregnancy.

Bonino records that Cuc-p. 3c cured salivation and vomiting in a woman in whom the menses were absent and who was erroneously supposed to be pregnant.

Grist records: A woman four months pregnant had vomited almost from conception and for six weeks had not retained a meal. "I am almost starved to death." she said, was pale, haggard tongue clean. Soon after eating or drinking anything she became intensely nauseated.

The doctor got a fresh pumpkin stem, cut it into thin slices and covered them with alcohol. At the end of half an hour he poured off a little and made a 1x dilution and directed half a drachm to be put in half a tea cupful of water, a teaspoonful every two hours. There was no further vomiting. Dr. Grist's indication is "Intense nausea immediately after eating."

This remedy cured a case of numbness of the tongue with ulceration at the tip following scarlet fever.

Comments

Culex was proved by Dr. Kent, but the only verification Clarke has found is of this symptom: vertigo every time he blows his nose.

W. P. Wesselheft cured a man, forty, stout, thick-set, light brunette, who had swelling on upper jaw over first right tricuspid. Slight redness of cheek. Abscess threatened with paroxysmal throbbing, dull pain better by warm applications. This came on after exposure to wet weather. Merc. and Rhus-t. did no good. The patient then said that whenever he blew his nose he had vertigo with a sense of fullness in the ears.

Culex promptly relieved the pain and in forty-eight hours the swelling had gone. It might be well to prove a tincture of specimens of Anopheles well charged with malarial organisms.

Cundurango

Cund. The Condor Plant. Cundurango. Condurango. Gonolobus cundurango. N. O. Asclepiadaceae. High altitudes in Ecuador, S. America. Tincture and trituration of the dried bark of the stem. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies, tincture or bark. Also the thirtieth potency in tumors.

History

The Condor plant was introduced into medicine as a cancer remedy by Dr. Bliss of Washington. Cundurango belongs to the Milk-weed family and is thus related to Asclepias Syriaca and Tuberosa and also to Calotropis.

Clotar Muller cured with Cundurango several cases of old, obstinate, foul-smelling, ichorous ulcers.

One case of carcinoma of the lips, an unclean and sinus ulcer. The active principle (Condurangin) produces locomotor ataxia. This remedy is worth trying when other seemingly indicated remedies fail to impress the disease. Stimulates the digestive functions and thus improves the general health.

Burnett, who proved it and whose symptoms were of a severe nature, observed that it produced "a painful crack in the right corner of the mouth."

These cracks he has seen produced in several patients who were taking the drug and he has cured similar cracks with it. He regards them as a keynote indication and has cured patients of tumors, some undoubtedly cancerous, who had that symptom as a concomitant.

Comments

Dudgeon has recorded as cure with Cund. first dilution of an undoubted case of cancer of left breast in a woman of sixty-nine. The nipple was so retracted as to be invisible. A hard tumor the size of an egg on the outer side of the nipple was the center of sharp pains radiating from it, the whole breast being very tender to touch. The tumor increased steadily under Hydr. and Phyt. and was only checked temporarily by Conium. Under Cund. it entirely disappeared.

Cundurango has found its chief use as a cancer remedy, especially in cancers originating in epithelial structures. Cracks at muco-cutaneous orifices and warty excrescences are a leading indication for it. Cutting, stinging, burning, tingling, constrictive and piercing pains are complained. The skin manifests much of the action of the remedy: blotches, eczema, pimples, pustules indolent ulcers, lupus, varicose ulcers, syphilitic affections, epithelioma and scirrhus.

Burnett considers it has a very strong affinity for the tongue. He cured with it a jagged ulcer of the tongue (doubtful whether cancerous or syphilitic) tongue and lips red. One prover had a slight creeping pain along periosteum of right humerus and Clarke observed "a creeping sensation up the back and headache in right temple" in a patient taking it in the Ix tincture. An old-school authority,

Dr. Guyvenot credits Condurango with causing a "veritable locomotor ataxia." It appears late and he thinks it is due to the formation of some toxic substance by the splitting up of the alkaloid in the organism.

Pharmacy

Cuph. Cuphea viscosissima. Lythrum petiolatum. Wax weed. Flux weed. Red Pennyroyal. N. O. Lythraceae. Decoction or tincture of fresh plants collected in July or August. Historical dose: Tincture and all potencies,

Herbal

Cuphea viscosissima is a popular remedy in some parts of U. S. for summer diarrhea and dysentery, as one of its names, "Flux weed," would imply. The entire plant has a clammy, sticky feel and contains tannin.

Cuphea contains a large percentage of tannic acid and seems to possess decidedly tonic properties, as children rally rapidly under its use. Planets: Moon.

Homeopathic

Vomiting of undigested food. Cholera infantum, much acidity, frequent green, watery, acid stools. Tenesmus and great pain. High fever, restlessness and sleeplessness.

Obstinate constipation.

Clinical

Cholera infantum. Dysentery.

Comments

Cuphea viscosissima was first introduced to homeopathic practice by Dr. A. Roth of Frederick, Maryland, who was induced to try it in his practice by a lady patient and his experience has been confirmed by S. G. A. Brown.

Dr. Roth gave from 5 to 10-drop doses, according to age. The two chief forms on which it is successful are:

(I) Cases arising from acidity of milk or food, vomiting of undigested food or curdled milk with frequent green, watery, acid stools, varying in number from five to thirty a day.

Child fretful and feverish, can retain nothing on stomach, food seems to pass right through the child.

(2) Stools decidedly dysenteric, small frequent, bloody with tenesmus and great pain, high fever, restlessness and sleeplessness.

Dr. Roth considers it has "tonic" properties, as children rally rapidly under it. In diarrhea from cold, he found it useless. Brown says: "If you have a child that is fretful and feverish, vomits curdled milk from a hyperacidity of the stomach, has frequent green, watery, acid stools or even if the stools are dysenteric with great tenesmus and colic, high fever and restlessness, give Cuphea."

Cuprum aceticum

(acetate of copper)

Pharmacy

Cupr-a. Cuprum aceticum. Acetate of Copper. Verdigris. Solutions. Historical dose: Trituration and all potencies, third to sixth trituration.

History

Dr. Burnett has cured with it a case of left-sided brow ague of many years' standing. He used Rademacher's Tincture of Copper. The pain was described as boring, screwing and was spoken of by the patient as "awful." Dr. Burnett is unable to say whether the cure was strictly homeopathic or whether the Cuprum acted on the basis of the Paracelsus's Universalia of which it is one.

Homeopathic

Cupr-acet. produces the leading features of Cupr. met., cramps, griping pains, spasms, paralytic disorders and convulsions. Attacks come on suddenly and periodically. It corresponds to the results of repelled eruptions. Hay fever with burning excoriation, paroxysmal cough tough, tenacious mucus and fear of suffocation. Protracted labor. Comments

A man, 50, was cured with Cupr-ac. 5c trituration. of a tonic spasm of the toes of the right foot, very painful, lasting for hours, brought on by friction, standing on cold floors, etc. There was no traceable cause and no other derangement of health. Complete cure in five days after months of previous suffering.

Petroz recommended its use in small-pox and verified his induction in practice. As pointed out by General Phelps, the "Crimson Cross Ointment" which was used successfully by Fielden in the Gloucester epidemic of small-pox owes its virtue to the Cupr-acet. which it contains. In epilepsy the aura begins in the knees and ascends to hypogastrium, when patient becomes insensible. The symptoms are worse by heat and by motion. The patient frequently changes posture.

Cupr-a. combines the characters of its two metallic components. According to J. N. Majumdar, who gives a case, the great characteristic of Cupr-ar. in choleraic conditions is "icy-coldness of the whole body with cramps and an obstinate hiccough." B. L. Bhaduri pointed this out to him. Planets: Venus.

Cuprum and its curative range includes tonic and clonic spasms, convulsions and epileptic attacks. Nausea greater than in any other remedy Spasmodic affections, cramps, convulsions. Cramps beginning in fingers and toes, violent(liver wind and stomach wind and spleen damp heat—finger represent stomach/spleen), contractive and intermitting pain. Chorea from fright(liver wind affecting heart). In epilepsy, aura begins at knees, (kidney yin vacuity at knee so yang increases so wind then liver wind goes to heart) ascends to hypogastrium, then unconsciousness, foaming and falling.

Convulsions may be either tonic or clonic, start in the knees toes or fingers and radiate over the whole body with piercing ties, twisting of the head to one side, trismus followed by headache, spasmodic laughter(heart wind), shivering, deathly exhaustion with cold perspiration(lung qi collapse or vacuity so cold perspiration). Epilepsy, at night during menses(night-yin vacuity and during menses means liver active so yin vacuity makes yang hyperactive leads to wind). In epilepsy the patient falls with a shriek, passes urine and feces, headache follows after spasms or a group of symptoms followed by the appearance as if the patient were dead or in a state of ecstasy.

Convulsions of children during dentition,(kidney yang excess so wind affected) children lie on abdomen and jerk the buttock up. Spasms with blue face and clenched thumbs. (blood vacuity invites wind) Cramps may occur in the chest, (angina pectoris) behind the sternum(yang vacuity cold stagnation in heart). Cramps in toes, fingers, calves where the muscles are knotted better stretching the leg out in soles etc. extorting ties(yang vacuity cold stagnation). Chorea from fright, periodical. Jerking during sleep.

Pains worse touch(cold stagnation-excess type) and motion(yang vacuity-deficiency—this yang vacuity happens after convulsion). Pains are pressive, as from a blow being broken, racking darts through the whole body.

The patient is hypersensitive, every drug overacts without curing(liver qi that is liver wind sensitive as medicine affects liver first). Easy relapses. Symptoms disposed to appear periodically(spleen liver involved) and in groups. Complaints begin in left side. (liver wind rises from left down to upward) (Lach.) Tape-worms(affects intestinal wind that is heart or lung wind). In scarlet fever(liver fire or liver wind), complaints may result, such as excessive vomiting, stupor, convulsions(liver fire rising or liver wind). The pains are increased by movement and touch.

Comments

Metallic copper in an anti-psoric remedy, working from within outwards. It ranks with the most important of those which relieve states arising from the " striking inward" of diseases or the failure of eruptions or discharge to appear. It is this power to relieve internal spasm which renders it appropriate to the collapse stage of cholera of which it is also like Sulphur, a prophylactic either when worn next the skin or when taken internally.

Cuprum produces many skin eruptions and also foot-sweat. It corresponds to these and also to the effects of suppression of eruptions, exanthems and foot-sweat.

Whether these effects be internal pains or spasms or oppression of the brain and mental disturbance.

Mackechnie made a brilliant cure of psoriasis in a young girl with Cuprum. The leading features of its symptomatology are: Cramps, convulsions, violent spasms, coming on from disappearance of pains, discharges, eruptions, mental derangement. With suppression of menses, patient screams. Tonic spasms of thumbs. Eyeballs turn up. Opisthotonos. Tonic and clonic spasms.

"Convulsions during pregnancy and puerperal convulsions which begin in the fingers or toes and spread all over the body or where there is great restlessness between the attacks, either filling up the entire interval or only a part of the time."

Thus Guernsey also says that "a slimy metallic taste in the mouth" is one of the strongest indications for Cupr. Rhus-t. is the only other remedy which has this symptom so marked.

"Cramps or spasms beginning in hands and feet, extending to belly," is confirmed by J. C. McLaren.

Mossa regards Cupr. as one of the remedies for the effects of fright and relates the case of a girl who after a fright, was affected by involuntary motions of left arm and leg developing into pronounced general chorea. Cupr. brought about slow but decided recovery.

Another girl, 12, who had recovered from whooping cough got a kind of chorea from repeated frights on seeing an epileptic. To the muscular movements was added silly behavior: tongue heavy, speech slow, gait unwieldy. Frightened at night. Greediness in eating and drinking. Ign., Stram., Sulph., did little good. She became ill-natured. Cupr. every four days cured completely in three months.

Mackechnie reports the case of a boy who became epileptic after being locked up in school. Very great improvement followed the administration of Cupr.

The patient was a man aged 45. The fits began suddenly towards morning with chewing motion of lower jaw, gnashing of teeth, becomes upright and rigid in bed, shrieks, limbs convulsed. After giving way to violent anger, attacks become more severe, arms and legs were thrown outwards and trunk arched upward.

Cupr. was now given. For a time the attacks continued severe, but gradually improvement set in and in less than three months they ceased altogether. The "anger" in this case and the "ill-humor" in Mossa's are noteworthy. Maliciousness is an indication for Cupr.
